YOUNG GIRL ACCUSES CRAWFORD JACKSON, METHODIST PREACHER

He Is Bound Over on Charge of Making Improper Advances to His Fourteen-Year-Old Stenographer

MR. JACKSON DENOUNCES CHARGES AS UNFOUNDED

Episode Took Place in Office of Juvenile Protective Association, of Which He Is Secretary

Rev. Crawford Jackson, a former member of the North Georgia Methodist conference, now the secretary of the Georgia Juvenile Protective association, was bound over to the criminal court of Fulton county Saturday afternoon under a $1,000 bond on the charge of making improper advances toward a fourteen-year-old girl employed at the local office of the association.

The warrant against Mr. Jackson was sworn out by the father of the girl, with whose family he has been boarding off on and on for the last five years.

It was sworn to about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and shortly thereafter Deputy "Boots" Rogers arrested Mr. Jackson in his office in the Third National bank building. A hearing was granted in Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau's court.

The accusing parties were represented by Attorney Frank Haralson and Mr. Jackson by George P. Whitman, of the law firm of Felder, Anderson, Dillon & Whitman. Both the defendant and the parties bringing the charge were in court.

GIRL'S TESTIMONY.

The girl testified that she has known Mr. Jackson for some five years, during which time her older sister has been the stenographer and the preacher himself an itinerant boarder at her home. Until recently, she stated, the preacher had never offered to embrace her or touch her in any improper way.

Friday, a week ago, ran her testimony, she went to work for Mr. Jackson while her sister was taking a vacation. On Wednesday, she said, she and he were alone in the office, and he had been trifling with her hair, which he was addicted while boarding at her home.

The preacher displeased her on that day, she said, by certain of his actions. On Thursday, she stated, he renewed his attentions. She claimed that when she told him she had a headache he offered her something to drink, of what nature she said she did not know, and that she refused it. He then kissed her, she said, put his arms around her, and embraced her improperly, calling her "sweetheart."

He had never used such an expression to her before, she declared. She admitted that Mr. Jackson had shown her how to take dictation in the office, and declared that it was while this lesson was going on that he embraced her. She showed marks on her right arm which she said were made in her struggle to free herself from the preacher's grasp.

HER TESTIMONY CORROBORATED.

She said she told her brother-in-law on Friday about Mr. Jackson's actions, and when her father questioned her about it Saturday morning, repeated the story to him.

Before Mr. Jackson testified, the father of the girl and her brother-in-law corroborated her testimony in so far as it concerned them. The latter said that he went to Mr. Jackson for an explanation on Friday and that the minister admitted to having kissed the girl, making the excuse that he "had had a little too much near-beer."

Probation Officer J. J. Gloer testified to having known Mr. Jackson for some time. Without actually having any first-hand knowledge of his character, said Mr. Gloer, he admitted to having heard some derogatory statements concerning the preacher.

MR. JACKSON'S TESTIMONY.

When Mr. Jackson took the stand he declared that his whole attitude toward the girl had been one of fatherly beneficence. He said that while he lived with the girl's family he had been accustomed to hold her in his arms and address her by terms of endearment, often in the presence of other people, and always, he said, in a fatherly manner.

When he touched the girl in his office, he said, he was merely showing her how to do calisthenics. He declared he did not kiss her nor embrace her in an affectionate manner, and although he admitted that he might have called her sweetheart, he said that it was done in a paternal way.

The drink which he admitted to have offered her, he said was "Force Ale," a beverage recommended to him by his family physician for weak heart, and which he said he believed would cure the girl's illness. All that occurred in the office, said Mr. Jackson, could have been seen through the transparent glass door, and nothing was done, he claimed, which might not have occurred in her father's home. It was only in a playful way that he seized her arm, he declared.

Mr. Jackson denied that he told the girl's brother-in-law that he had kissed her or had been under the influence of liquor. He said he told him that he tried to take advantage of the girl in no way whatsoever.

JUDGE BARS PREACHER.

In delivering his charge Justice Girardeau expressed his surprise. He was shocked, he declared, and however much he might have respected Mr. Jackson, he said that certain of his actions as brought out in the testimony were certainly not "fatherly."

He said it would be left to a jury to decide, as the evidence was sufficient to warrant binding Mr. Crawford over to the higher courts.

When the hearing was concluded Mr. Jackson left the court with his attorney

BRYAN PLAYS NEW CARD IN HANDLING MEXIC SITUATION

Secretary of State Has Had Spanish-Speaking Secret Agent "Investigating" Trouble Zones for Two Months

AMBASSADOR WILSON SOFT PEDALS ON HIS INTERVIEWS

United States Immigration Inspector on Official Business in Juarez Shot by Federal Soldiers and May Die

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—President Wilson had before him tonight the report written here today by Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson on conditions in Mexico from the time that a revolution overthrew the reign of Porfirio Diaz, through the stirring events of the Orozco revolt, the downfall of Madero and down to the establishment of the Huerta regime—a period of three years. This report was transmitted to the president tonight by Secretary Bryan, who had spent the greater part of the day in conference with Ambassador Wilson. The president expects to examine the report before Monday, when he will confer with Ambassador Wilson on a possible solution of present difficulties.

BRYAN'S SPECIAL AGENT.

Secretary Bryan's activities in sifting the mass of varying information which has reached Washington from all parts of Mexico were not confined to official channels, for as soon as Ambassador Wilson left the state department Francisco del Valle, of Los Angeles, Cal., whose identity as an agent of the government has been variously stated and denied in official circles, appeared in Mr. Bryan's office. For nearly an hour after Ambassador Wilson left Mr. del Valle was closeted with Secretary Bryan, and much secrecy was manifested as to the nature of the conference. Mr. Bryan was silent, declining to state how long he had known Mr. del Valle or anything of the character of his mission in Mexico.

Mr. del Valle afterwards admitted he had spent almost two months in Mexico, traveling through the troubled zones, and had presented a full report of conditions everywhere in the republic. He said he had been a political acquaintance of Mr. Bryan and had been at one time a state senator in California. Able to speak Spanish, del Valle, who is of Mexican descent, was born in the United States, had little difficulty, he said, in making his way through territory held by rebels as well as that held by federals. He declined to state the results of his explorations.

MEXICAN CONDITIONS.

"The odd thing," he said, however, "is that people in the north of Mexico do not even know conditions in southern Mexico, and vice versa."

Del Valle declined to indicate what he thought of the situation, but spoke of some constitutional leaders in Sonora whose names were mentioned to him.

Coincidentally, del Valle came up from Mexico City on the same steamer with Ambassador Wilson and arrived in Washington on the same train. That they had little in common was apparent from Ambassador Wilson's remarks earlier in the day that he did not think the government had exhibited courtesy toward him in sending unofficial representatives to investigate conditions in Mexico. He spoke caustically of the methods pursued by both del Valle and William Bayard Hale, a personal friend of President Wilson, in obtaining information. In fact, the ambassador said, he had been told by a legation official in Cuba that del Valle had a copy of the state department code in his possession, an impropriety for an unofficial representative, in the ambassador's opinion.

AMBASSADOR WILSON RETICENT

While Ambassador Wilson expressed his views on Mexican affairs quite freely early in the day and before he reached Washington, he began tonight a policy of reticence. He said he had been asked by Secretary Bryan to refrain from discussing the situation and would abide by the wishes of his superior officer. In fact, the ambassador expressed doubt as to the accuracy of some published statements attributed to him criticising suggestions of the Washington government for the establishment of peace in Mexico.

The ambassador was not willing to say what he had written in his report but declared unequivocally that he had not altered his views about affairs in Mexico since coming to Washington or after

HOUSE NOW FACES THE BUSIEST WEEK OF 1913 SESSION

Tax Reform Has the Right-of-Way, Now That Appropriations Bill Has Been Disposed Of

FIGHT HINGES ON STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION

Resolution Empowering Governor to Borrow $500,000 to Pay Teachers Will Come Up for Action

With the general appropriations bill out of the way and already transmitted to the senate for passage, the house faces tomorrow the beginning of the busiest week of the session of 1913.

Aside from its adoption of the budget, the lower assembly has accomplished little during the past six days. The real work has been accomplished by the standing committees, all of which have been surfeited with legislation large and small. And it is because of the activities of these inner bodies that the house must begin to show results with the advent of another week.

Bills amendatory to the general tax act along with the Lipscomb tax equalization bill will be the center of attraction, and it is to these measures, already favorably reported, that all eyes are turned.

TAX REFORM MEASURES.

All tax reform measures have the right of way over other new matter, and these will therefore come up for first consideration on Monday. The only break from this schedule will come on the second day, when the pure drug bill comes up as a special order. The bill which provides for an inspector to see that the laws are enforced governing the sale of narcotics and "dope" was put on its passage Friday, but too late in the session for debate to be completed and a vote taken. It was therefore set as a special order for Tuesday.

The bills of Representative L. R. Akin, of Glynn, amendatory to the general tax act and introduced with a view to meting the expenditures of the appropriations committee, a few additional appear sufficient to meet the present deficiency in the treasury if indorsed by the house.

GOVERNOR'S BORROWING POWER.

Probably the most important decision of the ways and means committee during its deliberations of the past week was the favorable report on the resolution of Representative R. F. Slater, of Bryan, empowering the governor to borrow a sum not to exceed $500,000 for the payment of the back salaries of the school teachers of Georgia. This resolution sought favorable recommendation of the committee is in accordance with a decision recently made by Attorney General Thomas S. Felder, in which he construes the recent amendment to the constitution to allow the governor to borrow upwards of half a million dollars to cover certain deficiencies occasioned by slow returns to the state treasurer.

OTHER BILLS REPORTED.

Other bills from the ways and means committee already favorably reported for passage are as follows:

To tax registered lobbyists $50 per year.

To raise the occupation tax on all foreign corporations from $10 to $200, or double the amount now in force, and to double what the amount now is on the sliding scale.

To fix the tax on automatic bottling plants at $25 per head for one machine, $75 for two, $125 for three and $50 each for all in excess of three heads.

To empower the secretary of state to appoint tax agents in any county where he sees fit.

To increase the automobile license from $2 for the life of the car to $5 per year.

The other bills along this same line, one for taxation of soft drinks and the other to increase the tax on near beer, were killed.

TAX EQUALIZATION FIGHT.

It is not expected that there will be a fight on any of these proposed measures, at least not a successful one at any rate, but it is the announced intention of a minority of the ways and means committee to fight the creation of a new state board of equalization bill of Representative Frank A. Lipscomb, of Clarke.

It was this feature of the measure, against the creation of county boards, that alone caused the long split in the committee. The bill was at first reported favorably to the house amended, the amendment providing for county boards only, but was later withdrawn and reported again favoring the state board with a few minor changes.

But again a minority developed and it is this minority that will insist on the floor of the house that the state board feature be stricken out. And it may be said here in passing that the fight will be the hardest and bitterest that has been waged, or probably will be waged during the present session of the legislature. Leading the minority will be Representative J. S. Shepard, of Sumter, while against him is pitted his colleague, Representative Crawford Wheatley, chairman of the appropriations committee. Chairman L. R. Akin, Representative Swift, of Muscogee; Jones, of Coweta; Jones, of Lowndes; Lingo, of Clarke, and Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, are among the majority. Others of the minority who will be heard from are Representatives D. Bullard, of Campbell; T. Paulk, of Ben Hill; C. E. Stewart, of Coffee, and O. W. McGehee, of Merriweather.

BILLS ON CALENDAR.

Other bills that the house will have for immediate consideration follow:

To raise the salaries of judges of the superior court in Georgia to $5,000.

To empower the state to have its school books printed by competitive bids and sell them to the children at cost.

To allow women to practice law in the state.

To abolish justice courts in Atlanta and create in lieu thereof a central municipal court.

The house will also be asked to take

This Monkey Dotes on Georgia Watermelons

His Name Is Hitch-i-Koo, of Tegucigalpa, but He "Stows Away" More Watermelon in Ten Minutes Than an Atlanta Darky Can Eat in a Day. Inman Park Children Keep Him Well Supplied With the Georgia Delicacy

When Hitch-i-koo was frollicking amongst the banana palms of Honduras his diet consisted for the most part of Miscean tarantulas and Sixataran spiders. He had never looked a Georgia watermelon in the face.

The other day he arrived in Atlanta. After stowing away a breakfast of milk he was introduced to a melon. Hitch-i-koo sized once and chastered the monkey idiom for "lead me to it"

With a side swipe of the teeth Hitch-i-koo bored into the rind, flipped a couple of seeds down his throat, and proceeded to annihilate the red meat.

Now he can out-eat the hungriest Atlanta darky and clamor for more.

Hitch-i-koo is the property of Mrs. A. H. Wilson, of Inman Park. He is a Honduran monkey of that breed known as the Mamosette. The monk had been the pet of Mrs. Wilson in Key West.

This queer little ape surprised his owner by his unusual appetite for watermelon. He adores it. They say he is no longer a Honduran but a genuine Georgia Cracker.

The children of the Inman Park neighborhood had rather feed Hitch-i-koo his favorite food than play dolls or chase stray cats.

What Hitch-i-koo will do when watermelon season goes out is a problem. Perhaps he will take on "possum and corn ponewith equal avidity, but at any rate, so long as rattlesnake and sugar loaf melons are on the market Hitch-i-koo will contine to farive and wax plump.

WILSON PROBABLY WILL WITHDRAW NEGRO'S NAME

Both Senators Hoke Smith and Bacon Oppose Confirmation of Oklahoma Negro.

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—It was learned today on good authority that the nomination of Adam E. Patterson, an Oklahoma negro, for register of the treasury, was sent to the senate on Friday through an inadvertence. Prominent Democratic senators, who view the nomination with misgiving were much relieved when they learned today and they are hopeful that the negroe's name will be withdrawn by the president.

In connection with the Patterson nomination it was learned today also that Senator Hoke Smith is opposed to his confirmation and has an appointment at the White House Monday morning for the conference with the president about the matter. He will voice a protest against the selection of negroes to federal offices and will urge Mr. Wilson to withdraw Patterson's name.

The president, it is understood was moved to the consideration of a negro for register of the treasury not through a personal desire to recognize the black race, but because of representations to him that political expediency demanded that the negroes be given some recognition by the administration. Northern Democrats in both the senate and house who look with favor on Patterson's nomination are understood to have urged the importance of giving this place to a negro as a reward to the black race for its friendliness to the Democratic party in close northern states.

The office—register of the treasury—is claimed by the negroes as their exclusive patronage. For many years it has been held by a negro. The retiring register, James C. Napier, of Tennessee, is a negro, as was his predecessor. The office was once held by Judson Lyons, a negro, of Augusta.

The opposition to negroes for federal offices is general among southern Democrats in the senate and should the president be unable to find a way out of appointing them, it is safe to say that all such nominations will have a rough road to travel toward confirmation.

Senator Bacon, like his colleague, is opposed to nominations of negroes, and their objections are shared by Senators Simmons, of North Carolina; Tillman and Smith, of South Carolina; Fletcher, of Florida; Williams and Vardeman, of Mississipi, and many others.

These senators will urge that the nomination be withdrawn and if the president fails to do so they will organize an opposition to confirmation.

FLAGS AT HALF-MAST WHILE "NIAGARA" SAILS

(By Associated Press.)

PUT-IN-BAY, O., July 26.—Through the scene of the battle of Lake Erie from which it emerged victorious 100 years ago, Perry's reconstructed flagship Niagara sailed today on route to Toledo for another part in the series of centennial celebrations taking place in great lakes port.

Flags on vessels of the flotilla accompanying the Niagara were at half-mast while on the flagship officers and crew stood at attention as the ancient sea fighter ploughed through the scene of its notable victory.

New Height Record By Frank Burnside; Goes Up 12,950 Feet

(By Associated Press.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 26.—A dispatch from Bath says that Frank Burnside, flying in a biplane, today broke Lincoln Beachy's American altitude record of 11,680 feet made in Chicago two years ago, by attaining a height of 12,950 feet.

Burnside, who lives in Oneonta, was in the air for an hour and forty-six minutes, flying over a six-mile course.

EPISCOPAL CLERGYMAN RENOUNCES THE CHURCH

Rev. Chas. S. Davidson, Formerly of Atlanta, Burns His Vestments

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 26.—Burning his vestments and prayer book at the grave of historic Monticello, Rev. Charles Steele Davidson, for five years rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Cleveland, Ohio, and later pastor of churches in Brooklyn and Atlanta, renounced the ministry and in a written statement caustically criticised the Episcopal church, which he leaves.

Dr. Davidson is a son of Captain Hunter Davidson, who did torpedo service on the James river during the Civil War and later was sent to investigate the Franco-Prussian war in 1871 by President Grant.

Briefly, his statement says: "Here on Friday, the 25th of July, 1913, at the gate of Monticello, at the home of the apostle of the people's political freedom, I burn the vestments of an important priesthood, the empty emblems of ecclesiasticism, the mockeries of royal priesthood. Here I burn the prayer-book, the fetish of a false worship, the idol of the diluted word of God."

Dr. Davidson says he retains the ministry, which he received from the Lord Jesus, and says the Bible is a sufficient guide book to all men.

Dr. Davidson Was Here Eight Years Ago

Dr. Davidson is remembered here by numbers of Episcopalians as officiating under a bishop's license in 1905. He was also interested in mission work in Atlanta and is recalled as having had charge of the church of the Epiphany. He is a brother of Rev. Hunter Davidson, formerly rector of the church of the Good Shepherd, at Augusta, Ga., and now connected with a diocese in Ohio.

WHOLE FIRE DEPT. GOES ON STRIKE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 26.—The Oklahoma city fire department consisting of ninety men, struck today because the city commissioners had cut their wages and dismissed their chief.

Thirty citizens have been detailed by Acting Fire Chief John Von Elm to take the strikers' places and other Oklahoma cities have been asked to lend their experienced extra firemen to the department.

The firemen were receiving $85 a month. The city administration, in the interest of economy, proposed to reduce their wages to $80. The salary of Fire Chief Mark Kesled was reduced from $180 to 150 a month.

PINKERTON DETECTIVE REPLIES TO LANFORD

H. B. Pierce Declares Lanford Knew of Find of Bloody Stick in Factory

H. B. Pierce, head of the local branch of the Pinkerton detective agency, characterizes as absurd chief Detective N. A. Langford's charge that the Pinkerton sleuth has broken faith with the state in the Pinkerton's investigation of the Phagan case.

Chief Lanford charges specifically that the Pinkerton broke faith by failing to report the find by two of his men of the part of a pay envelope and of a bloody stick on the first floor of the factory. The find was made in the absence of Harry Scott, who has conducted the Phagan investigation for the Pinkertons, and who Lanford says has been absolutely square and fair in all of his dealings with the state and the police.

Pierce, the chief charges, in the absence of Scott, turned the stick and the pay envelope over to the attorneys for the defense, and said nothing to him or to the state about it.

Pierce denies this fully, saying that about May 15, only a few days after the find, he mentioned the fact that two of his men had picked up a bloody stick, a part of a pay envelope, and some rope at a certain point on the first floor of the basement.

Lanford, when he was told this, Pierce says, declared that the articles had been placed there as a plant; that his men and Harry Scott and representatives of an insurance company had scoured the three floors of the factory, and that the articles in question could not have been there, but a very short time before they were found.

"I was not working on the case myself," says Pierce, "and knew nothing about it. In fact I had been out of town practically since the murder. As a result, when Chief Lanford cried 'plant,' I considered the find of no importance. I did turn the stick over to the defense, telling them that it might be a plant and leaving it to them to investigate.

"That is absolutely the last I thought of the matter until I read a story in The Journal saying that the bloody club was considered of importance in the case.

"Then I went to Mr. Rosser and asked that it be turned over to the solicitor general, and this I understand has been done.

"The Pinkertons have sought to find the murderer of Mary Phagan and have given the state every bit of evidence which they found, regardless of who it hit. I am sure that the solicitor general will confirm my statement that we have not broken faith with the state."

Chief of Detectives Lanford denies the statement attributed to him that he is going to seek a police board investigation of the conduct of Pierce in the case.

HALF OF TOWN SAVED IN ALL-NIGHT FIRE FIGHT

(By Associated Press.)

BROCK, SASK., July 26.—After an all-night battle with flames firemen today saved one-half of this town. It is feared three farmers lost their lives in attempts to rescue horses from burning livery stables where many animals perished.

The financial loss will be $225,000.

LEO M. FRANK WILL GO TO TRIAL MONDAY, IT IS NOW BELIEVED

Indications Were Saturday Night That the Trial Would Begin Before Judge Roan at Hour Scheduled

BOTH SIDES READY AND BITTER FIGHT IS CERTAIN

Many Well Known Citizens in Venire From Whom the Twelve Jurors Will Be Chosen for Trial

If both sides answer ready when the clerk "sounds" the case of the "State of Georgia versus Leo M. Frank" in the criminal division of the superior court at 9 o'clock Monday morning, what is expected to be the most brilliant as well as one of the most bitter legal fights in the criminal history of the state will have commenced.

The stage has been set for the trial, and on the eve of the battle there was no intimation from any one in authority that the trial would not actually be commenced. For weeks the state and defense have been preparing for the struggle, which is to come Monday, and only an extraordinary motion from the defense, which is not now expected, will delay the trial.

Leo M. Frank, Cornell graduate and man of education and refinement, is charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, a fourteen-year-old factory girl, whose lifeless body was found in the basement of the National Pencil factory, of which he is superintendent, on April 27 by a negro night watchman.

ARRAY OF COUNSEL.

In charge of his defense are two of the most brilliant lawyers in the south, Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold. Both are attorneys who have established enviable reputations for their knowledge of the law and their ability before a jury. Many victories and few defeats in famous causes, civil and criminal, go to make the record of both of the attorneys.

Opposed to them will be Hugh M. Dorsey, solicitor general of the Atlanta circuit, and Frank A. Hooper, who served as a solicitor general in a south Georgia circuit for many years.

Solicitor Dorsey was assisted against Mr. Rosser in the Grace case, and while he lost, he proved himself a prosecutor of marked ability, and attorneys who have come in contact with him praise of the manner in which he handled his case.

Mr. Hooper is little known here, but the statement of American attorneys who practiced criminal law there, that they were glad when his term expired, is a real tribute to his ability.

Those familiar with the evidence in the case do not expect the Frank trial to be completed for at least two weeks.

BOTH SIDES HARD AT WORK.

Attorneys for both the state and the defense spent practically all Saturday afternoon preparing their cases. This was taken to indicate that both sides expected that the trial would go forward as scheduled.

Solicitor Dorsey was closeted for several hours with Attorney Hooper and E. A. Stephens, assistant to the solicitor. At 5 o'clock they had arranged and indexed all their papers and files and strapped them into bundles. The state's case was all that he was ready for the trial to begin.

Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, counsel for the defense, were in consultation the greater part of Saturday afternoon. They went carefully over the details of their case and discussed the evidence of the defense at some length. Neither Mr. Rosser nor Mr. Arnold have intimated whether it is their intention to go on with the trial or to ask for a postponement. It is generally believed, however, that they will announce ready when court is convened Monday morning.

THE FIRST FIGHT.

Subpoenas duces tecum have been served on the solicitor general and many city detectives and other officials, commanding them to produce all three of the Conley affidavits and affidavits from many other state witnesses. Over

Want a Piano?

"Oh Mary! What a lovely piano! How and where did you get it? I thought you said your father told you he could not afford to buy one for you this year."

"Well," said Mary to her friend Gertrude, as she proudly showed her the new possession, "mother found the way to do it, and how do you suppose it was done? Mother read in The Journal Want Columns of a man who was moving to another city and did not want to take his piano with him, and offered to sell it cheap. When father called on the owner the figure named was far below anything father had expected, and so we have our piano at last, and the whole family is as happy as can be over it."

CHINA NOW DISCUSSING PROPOSITION OF PEACE

St. Petersburg Report Says City of Fu-Chow Has Fallen to Northern Forces.

(By Associated Press.)

SHANGHAI, July 26.—Peace propositions are under discussion here between the two parties. Dr. Wu Ting Fang, formerly Chinese minister to the United States, is the most prominent among the intermediaries, but it is doubted here whether he is authorized by Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai.

The principal Wu Sung fort today surrendered to the government. The country people and the working men at the arsenal are regaining confidence and returning to the works.

Criticise Refusal to Send American Fleet

PEKING, July 26.—The refusal of Rear Admiral Reginald of the Nicholson, commander-in-chief of the American Asiatic fleet, to send American marines to Ku-Ling is generally criticised in non-military circles here, although the German and British admirals are reported to agree with Admiral Nicholson.

An American gifard wasat firstagreed upon by the British, German and American legations owing to Chinese suspicions as to the disinterestedness of other nationalities.

Ku-Ling is a high mountain town near Klu-Kiang, where thousands of foreigners, mostly British and American women and children, take refuge from the summer heat and diseases of central China.

The only danger at Ku-Ling arises seemingly from outlaws and dispersed soldiers attempting to loot. The admiral has offered to escort the foreigners to the river, but refuses to detach a small guard.

Northern Force Said to Have Taken City of Fu-Chow

ST. PETERSBURG, July 26.—A dispatch from Shanghai says it is officially announced there that the city of Fu-Chow has fallen into the hands of the northern forces. Garrisons of the forts at Wu Sung also have joined them.

PERKINS MANUFACTURING CO. HAS BEEN REORGANIZED

One of Oldest Lumber Plants in South Enters More Actively Into Field

The Perkins Manufacturing Company, of Augusta, Ga., one of the oldest companies in their line in the south, has recently been reorganized, and is now prepared to furnish estimates on, and manufacture in either yellow pine or hardwoods, anything in the Building Line.

This company makes a specialty of Millwork for Cotton Mills, Public Buildings, Residences, and also Store and Bank Fixtures.

and a deputy, to make bond later in the evening.

The case will be brought before the next grand jury.

MR. JACKSON'S STATEMENT.

Saturday evening Mr. Jackson telephoned The Journal to state that several gentlemen, who were then in his office, agreed that it would be a matter of impossibility for him to have made such an attempt as is charged to him, in his office.

More than half of the door is transparent, he says, and passers-by can easily see in the office.

If I were knave enough" says Mr. Jackson, " to attempt this thing of which they faalsely accused me, certainly I would not be fool enough to attempt it here."

Mr. Jackson states that the charge against him is an effort to injure his work as the leader and organizer of the Juvenile Protective association, which he says now has spread to six different states.

"No one knows anything about what occurred in the office except the girl and myself," he said. "It is a question of which one of us is telling the truth. Many of the best citizens of Atlanta know me and know that I am incapable of such a thing as is charged so falsely to me."

Mr. J.ckson stated that he had been advised that the charge might be dropped before it reached the grand jury. He says that he hopes that it will not be dropped as he wants it sifted to the bottom and the truth shown.

MRS. ALICE IVEY DIES IN MARIETTA

Mrs. Alice Ivey, wife of T. G. Ivey, of Atlanta, died in Marietta Saturday morning while on a visit to her sister. She was ill several weeks and her relatives were in Marietta. Mrs. Ivey was 20 years of age and besides her husband is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Joe Abercrombie and Mrs. Phillip Laubenstein.

Mrs. Griffin's Funeral

The funeral services over the body of Mrs. Fannie Barnes Griffin, who passed away Friday afternoon, will be *held from the residence of her hus*band, Colonel R. J. Griffin, 21 Howard street, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment will be in West View cemetery.

BRYAN PLAYS NEW CARD IN HANDLING MEXIC SITUATION

his talks with Secretary Bryan. He admitted he had at various times suggested the advisability of recognizing the Huerta administration.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

It is understood the ambassador's re*port deals extensively with the eco*nomic as well as the political situation in Mexico. It was said on good authority that he pictured a gloomy condition in financial circles in the southern republic, pointing to several big banks as being on the verge of bankruptcy and a general condition of distress in business circles. It is declared the ambassador spoke of the con*tinuous deficits both of the national* treasury and of the railway systems and estimated foreign losses as very heavy. The French losses alone, he is said to have placed at $250,000,000 in gold within recent months. That American claims have not been greatly depreciated and that no estimate could be placed on losses also is said to have been included in the ambassador's report.

Constitutionalist representatives here exhibited a lively interest in Ambassador Wilson's utterances, declaring that some of its things he said were grossly distorted and that no estimate could be placed on losses also is said to have been included in the ambassador's report.

AMBASSADOR'S PLANS.

The ambassador was in the dark about future plans. He would go back on the steamer Mexico, which is waiting the president desires, he said, but he has received no intimation on this point. It was reported on good authority that some of the recommendations presented to Secretary Bryan was that the American embassy at Mexico City should be continued in charge of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, and first secretary, and the resignation of Ambassador Wilson accepted. His resignation, with those of other diplomats, has been in Secretary Bryan's hands since the Taft administration ended.

DEL VALLE SHADOWED WILSON.

It was learned later tonight that del Valle not only had been on board the *same ship and train by which Ambas*sador Wilson had come to Washington, but stopped at the same hotel in New York, followed him on the street cars there and observed the men with whom the ambassador talked.

Del Valle, it also was said, is the man from whom Secretary Bryan received a recommendation that the American embassy be kept in charge of *a secretary for the present and Am*bassador Wilson's resignation be accepted.

Del Valle declined tonight to discuss any of these points, but said he was about through with his mission. He said that he would be here a few days longer conferring with Secretary Bryan and would in the meantime pay his respects to President Wilson.

Manuel Perez Romero, confidential agent of the Constitutionalists in Washington and brother of Mrs. Francisco I. Madero, tonight denied statements purporting to have been made in New York by Ambassador Wilson that Mrs. Madero had published letters that were forgeries and that the Madero family was maintaining a paid bureau in the United States for the purpose of giving publicity to false statements respecting conditions in Mexico. He declared that Mrs. Madero had published no such letters, nor caused them to be published and that the Madero family had made no provisions for maintaining a publicity bureau.

U. S. Official Shot By Federal Soldiers

(By Associated Press.)

EL PASO, Texas, July 26.—Charles B. Dixon, of San Diego, United States Immigration Inspector, was given "leyes fuegas" by Mexican Federal soldiers today. He was shot in the back and mad die.

Dixon was in Juarez on official business, investigating a white slave case, when he was arrested by a band of federals, who started marching him away from the city in the direction of the foothills, where many executions have occurred. Dixon started to run, and after getting a block away was fired on and hit in the back.

Dixon's father lives in Wharton, Tex. Dixon made a statement this afternoon in Juarez to American officials that he believed the Mexicans were marching him out to shoot him when he ran. He says the Mexican soldiers were drunk.

Dixon was sent by a superior to Juarez to see a negro girl in connection with a white slave case that was being probed here. He says he believes the negro bought drinks for the soldiers and induced them to arrest him.

"I told the soldiers I would go with them to the commandant's office," Dixon said this afternoon, but instead of taking me in that direction, they started with me toward the outskirts of the town. As I had on a suit of khaki, I thought they had mistaken me for a United States soldier acting as a spy, so I ran and they shot me after I had got about half a block away from them."

Dr. H. J. Tappen, of the immigration service in El Paso, went to Juarez and treated Dixon. The bullet from the gun shot in the small of the back, the ball going completely through his body and coming out through his stomach. It did not strike the spine.

F. W. Berkshire, supervising inspector of the United States immigration service on the Mexican border, at once went to Juarez accompanied by Clarence Gatley, an inspector, to look after Dixon. Both were arrested and detained at the military barracks for a short time, but later were released. They took up the matter with Miguel Diebold, inspector of the Mexican consulate in El Paso, with a view of having Dixon removed to El Paso.

Immigration men claimed a mulatto lieutenant in the federal army in Juarez, a friend of the negro under investigation, was instrumental in causing the arrest and the shooting.

Ordinarily United States immigration men are permitted to work in Juarez under agreement with Juarez officials.

Constitutionalist Put 500 Federals to Rout

EAGLE PASS, Texas, July 26.—Five hundred federals made a sortie from Monclava yesterday and were met ten miles north of the city by constitutionalists, according to reports to Piedras Negras today. Considerable losses on both sides are reported.

Federals are said to have executed two well known Mexican business men of Monclova, Francisco Delgado and Fernando Garza, because they sympathized with the constitutionalists. Refugees assert there have been many other executions in Monclava, but these reports are not confirmed.

Preparations to resist a threatened attack on the constitutional provisional capital are being made and the garrison was increased. The federals were reported advancing along the Rio Grande river from Nuevo Laredo. A constitutionalist column was sent out to meet them.

CHARGES EX-GOV. COMER WITH LEADING A MOB

Sensational Climax of Bitter Alabama Campaign for Governor

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 26.—Charging that B. B. Comer, former governor of Alabama and candidate for the office again, led a mob in Calhoun county in the late eighties for the purpose of lynching two men, Samuel P. Kennedy, campaign manager for Charles Henderson, has issued a reply to Comer's statement, in an address at Attalla Tuesday, that another gas steal would come about if Kennedy were named president of the railroad commission.

Mr. Kennedy's answer was based on newspaper reports of Comer's address which contained this statement. Mr. Comer said that if Mr. Henderson were elected governor Sam Kennedy would be appointed president of the railroad commission. Think of it! Kennedy and McCord. We would have Alamo gas steal before you could say 'scat.' " The campaign manager declared he didn't know of any Mr. Comer had directed an attack at him.

"Just what Mr. Comer meant by such a statement as this can be explained for by his maddened condition brought about by the defeat that is staring him in the face."

Ending the reply, Mr. Kennedy declared that his good name was all he had and he proposed to protect it. "I did not have the opportunity or the inclination to lay a foundation for a fortune by selling whiskey to 'niggers' as did this assassin of character," said the Henderson manager.

In the interview Mr. Kennedy asked why he should be mentioned in connection with the Alamo gas matter," which caused a sensation in Alabama two years ago when efforts were made to prove that certain state officials were given shares of stock in the gas company in exchange for their influence in certain deals.

"Why should I be menitoned in connection with the Alamo gas matter?" asked Kennedy. "Surely not because I am Henderson's campaign manager. What else, however, can be expected from a mob leader—it is a well known fact, or if it is not well known, I will now try to make it known, that this same ex-governor did himself lead a mob in Calhoun county in the late eighties for the purpose of lynching two men, neither of whom ever was tried or convicted for the offense for which he wanted to lynch them—what can be expected from such an unbalanced personality?

"When I ran for associate commissioner three years ago he said he would support me. I don't know whether he did or not—two of his brothers did, I know, for the fact that they told me they would. I am not now running for office and this attack on me by innuendo is uncalled for and no man of integrity or of a temperament that would fit him to hold any office would have been guilty of such an offense."

SHOW LIFE OF CHRIST IN STEREOPTICAN SLIDES

Interesting Program Tonight At the Wesley Memorial Church

For three Sundays, beginning with the service this evening, the life of Christ will be shown in stereoptican slides at Wesley Memorial church.

The pictures are reproductions of masterpieces in the world of art. A brief lecture accompanies the picture, and is followed by a ten-minute gospel sermon.

Anoth feature of the service are the illustrated hymns by soloists, the choir and the congregation. Tonight "The Ninety and Nine" will be sung as a solo.

The church is cooled by electric fans, and is comfortable even on the hottest night. The illustrated picture sermons will continue throughout the summer months.

PELLAGRA IS SPREADING, SAYS GOVERNMENT REPORT

Statistics Indicate That Disease Is Invading New Territory

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Pellagra, for which physicians have found no cure, is spreading beyond the zone to which it previously has been confined and is invading new territory, according to officials of the United States public health service, who base their belief upon statistics on the prevalence of the disease in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas from 1907 to 1912, which were made public today.

Reports from these three states, bordering on the area in which pellagra has most extensively existed in this country, show, says Surgeon G. H. Lavinder, the prevalence of the disease "to no inconsiderable degree."

"This suggests rather strongly," he adds, "that pellagra is increasing in the area in which it was prevalent, and invading new territory. Further inquiry is needed to determine this with any degree of accuracy."

The figures indicated an increase in the disease during 1912. The total number of cases in Oklahoma during the six years was 472, with a death rate per hundred cases of 54.91; in Texas, 2,628 cases, death rate, 46.61, and in Arkansas, 945, death rate, 41.90. The figures for Arkansas for 1912 were incomplete.

Today's report, which supplemented a previous pellagra report giving statistics for other states, is of peculiar interest at this time in connection with the bill of Representative Johnson, of South Carolina, for a large appropriation for theerection of a hospital at Spartanburg, S. C., for the study of pellegra. The public health service has been urged to support the bill.

L. & N. MAY DROP ITS ALABAMA RATE FIGHT

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 26.—Because the Alabama railroad commission won its fight for a 2 1-2 cent passenger rate in the Luiisville and Nashville railroad case, the litigation brought about by the enactment of statutes providing for lower passenger and freight rates may be dropped.

Governor O'Neal stated yesterday that the decision of the federal judges Thursday gives the railroad commission power to regulate freight and passenger rates and that he considers no reason why the fight about the statutory rates should be continued. Final decision about the matter will not be made until the Louisville and Nashville railroad has decided whether or not it will appeal from the decision of the judges.

Differences of opinion exists as to whether the Louisville and Nashville will be required to put the 2 1-2 cent rate into effect August 12, if it decides to appeal. Pending Judge Thomas G. Jones' decision in the case involving the legislative enactment, the Louisville and Nashville charged the lower rate but raised it to 3 cents a mile immediately after Judge Jones made his injunction permanent.

Indications are that the jduges will have to decide the question and it is probable that the railroad will be required either to charge the 2 1-2 cent rate pending an appeal or give a sufficient bond as a guarantee that patrons will be refunded one-half cent for each mile raised if the supreme court decides in favor of the railroad commission.

STATE WILL BUILD CASE AGAINST FRANK AROUND CONLEY'S STORY; DEFENSE WILL UNDERTAKE TO SHOW THAT NEGRO ALONE IS GUILTY

Defense Will Ridicule Conley's Story and Endeavor to Show That It Was Made to Save His Own Neck

MANY WITNESSES CALLED TO CORROBORATE FRANK

Though Attorneys Are Silent, The Journal Presents Below Outline of What the Defense Is Expected to Be Complete innocence on the part of Leo M. Frank, the young superintendent of the National Pencil factory, and absolute guilt on the part of James Conley, the negro sweeper at the factory, are the two cardinal points upon which Frank's defense will be based when he is called to trial for the murder of Mary Phagan, the little girl, whose body was found in the pencil factory basement on Sunday morning, April 27.

Frank's attorneys, Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, two of the south's ablest lawyers, have carefully concealed the plans of the defense, but enough has come to light to conclusively indicate that they not only expect to convince the jury that Frank is innocent and that it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have committed the murder without detection, but that Conley, the negro, did have such an opportunity and that robbery was his motive for killing the girl.

The defense evidently holds to the idea that to satisfactorily establish Frank's innocence and bring about his exoneration it is necessary to clear up the murder mystery. This it will attempt to do by convincing evidence as to the guilt of the negro.

Ever since Conley made his last famous affidavit of confession in which he swore that at Frank's instance he helped to carry the dead girl into the basement and wrote the notes found by her body Frank's attorneys have worked on the theory that singlehanded Conley murdered Mary Phagan and that he sought to implicate their client as the principal in order to save his own neck.

The alleged inconsistencies in Conley's confession will be stressed and its alleged improbabilities will be dissected before the jury. A piece of Mary Phagan's pay envelope and a bloody club, said to have been found in the dark recess near the factory stairs, where Conley admits he was in hiding on the morning of the murder, will be produced as corroborative evidence, as will an affidavit from W. H. Mincey, an insurance agent, who swears that on the afternoon of the murder Conley, stupefied with drink, told him that he had killed a girl.

A vigorous attack will be made upon the state and the Atlanta city detectives for the alleged "protection" which has been accorded Conley since he made his confession and it will be asserted by the defense that had not the negro been so "wet-nursed" as it has been charged, he would have long ago admitted his guilt and exonerated Frank.

PURPOSE OF DEFENSE.

The main effort of the defense will be to break down Conley's statement, which makes Frank the principal in the murder. It will be contended that the girl was killed on the first floor of the factory instead of on the second floor where Conley said he found the body when he was called up by Frank.

By Conley's own statement it will be shown that he was in hiding behind a pile of boxes, near the staircase on this floor, from 9 o'clock on the morning of April 26, in his statement the negro claims to have gone to the factory at the suggestion of Frank whom he says he met at the corner of Nelson and Forsyth streets, some time between 10 and 11 o'clock that morning.

He describes a number of persons who came and went in the factory while he was secreted there. Some of these persons will be introduced by the defense to prove that they came in and went out of the factory between 9 and 10 o'clock, more than hour before the time Conley says he left Nelson and Forsyth streets to go to the factory, and before Frank ever left the factory to go to Montag Brothers, on Nelson street.

Various different versions of the negro's story will be submitted to the jury to show that he began by lying and only admitted that he had knowledge of the crime after he had been caught in lies. It will be claimed that Conley is a cunning negro; that he was perfectly familiar with the factory and its operations; that he has kept posted on everything that has been printed in connection with the murder and that he has shaped his confession to fit the published facts.

The defense will insist that with Frank safely indicted for the murder and that with a considerable public sentiment aroused against him the negro sought to clear himself by fixing the crime upon Frank.

Conley's statement will be analyzed in detail. He declares that Frank told him on Saturday before the murder to meet him at Nelson and Forsyth streets about 10 o'clock next morning. It will be asserted that Frank could not have premeditated the murder for he had no knowledge that Mary Phagan would come for her pay on Saturday or at what hour she might come.

Conley said that when he met Frank according to appointment the superintendent told him to go over to the factory and shine his shoes. He says he also called him; that he wanted him to do some work, but that he didn't wish Manager Darley to know about it because Darley had forbidden work in the factory on holidays. This statement will be ridiculed on the ground that Frank being the superintendent and a stockholder in the factory there was no necessity for him to observe secrecy in the performance of any work which he deemed advisable.

CLAIM FRANK WAS ALONE.

Conley says that he came back to the factory with Frank from Nelson and Forsyth streets and was introduced to show that Frank came alone.

Conley says that he remained in hiding until about 1 o'clock, and that while he was secreted in the boxes he saw a number of persons come in and go out of the factory. This portion of the negro's confession will be accepted as a fact, for it will be proven by persons described by Conley that they did enter and leave the factory during the morning of April 26. Some of these, however, will swear that they were there long before the hour when Conley says he came to the factory.

Conley says that Frank whistled to him to come upstairs and when he obeyed the superintendent informed him that he had picked up a girl back in the metal room and had let her fall and that her head had struck against something; that Frank had directed him to move the girl and that when he approached the body he found that the girl was dead. He says a moment later he returned to the front of the building and noticed it was four minutes after 1 o'clock.

The defense will introduce witnesses to show that Frank was not alone more than five minutes at a time up to 1 o'clock, when he claims to have left the factory to go home to lunch, and will contend that this being true, he could not have had opportunity to kill the girl up to that hour.

Conley declares that he never saw the Phagan girl enter the factory. He was very positive about having seen others who came and went, and was able to describe their clothing, but says he must have dozed off when the Phagan girl came in.

The defense holds to the theory that the negro did see the girl enter the factory; that he remained in hiding until she came down swinging her mesh bag, and that knowing that she had come for her week's pay he stole up behind her, hit her in the head and after grabbing her handbag containing the pay envelope, shoved her through the elevator shaft which was only a few feet from the foot of the stairs.

Conley says that after he came back to Frank and told him that the girl was dead the superintendent ordered him to go and get the body and bring it out; that he stopped in the cotton room and got a gunny sheet in which to tie the body, which was lying face downward in an areaway near the women's lavatory.

NO EMPTY GUNNY SACKS.

It will be contended by the defense that on the day of the murder there were no empty gunny sheets in the cotton room; that the only sheets there were filled with cotton and that these were still in place on the following Monday.

Conley says that after tying the body in the gunny sheet he shouldered it and started toward the front of the building, but that when he reached a point just in front of one of the dressing rooms it became so heavy that he dropped it. At the place where he says he dropped the body the floor was stained with what appeared to be blood, but at the spot where he says he first found the body there was no evidence of bloodstains. This fact will be cited by the defense, which will insist that if the negro is telling the truth there would have been bloodstains where the body was first found and where it must have lain for some time. Witnesses will be introduced to show that there was a wound on the girl's head which must have bled profusely.

Little credence will, it is said, be placed by the defense in the alleged blood spots near the dressing room door where the negro says he dropped the body. It will be argued that these spots may or may not be blood. And to explain them if they are blood it will be shown that several times each week employes cut their hands and fingers in the machinery and that the wounds frequently bleed upon the floor.

Witnesses will testify that large quantities of antlines and patins resembling those are used in the factory and that possibly the spots upon the floor near the dressing room are nothing more than paint.

Conley says that after he dropped the body he called Frank to his assistance and that together they carried it to the elevator and upon which they lowered it into the basement.

Evidence will, it is said, be submitted which will prove beyond a doubt that the elevator did not and could not have been operated on the day of the murder. Just what this evidence will be has never been revealed.

Conley says that after the elevator reached the basement Frank assisted him to take the body off the car and helped him carry it for a few feet; that he then took the body on his shoulder and carried it back to the sawdust bin in the rear of the basement where it was found.

Conley says that he and Frank ran the elevator back up to the second floor and that after Frank washed his hands he took him into the office and that while he was there two young women employes, whom he names, came in for their pay envelopes; that while they were there Frank shut him in a wardrobe.

It will be insisted by the defense that the two young women named came to the factory and left it before 1 o'clock and they will be put upon the stand to testify to this fact.

Conley claims that after the young women left Frank let him out of the wardrobe and dictated two notes for him to write, explaining to him that he intended to send these notes to his (Frank's) mother in Brooklyn and that she would send him something.

The defense will take the position that a negro of even lesser intelligence than that possessed by Conley would never have written those notes unless he were guilty, and only then in an effort to divert suspicion from himself.

Conley says that Frank handed him a roll of money but later took it back, saying that he would see him Monday. The defense will argue that if Frank had been guilty of murder and had allowed the negro to share his secret, he would not only not have taken back money given him but would have kept on supplying him with money, fearing that unless he did so the negro might expose him.

DEFENSE'S THEORY OF CRIME.

A brief and connected outline of the theory of the defense concerning the murder of Mary Phagan, which was printed in The Journal a day or two after Conley made his confession, and which it is said is still adhered to, follows:

After Mary Phagan got her pay envelope she immediately left the office on the second floor and proceeded down the stairs toward the street; that just as she reached the bottom, the negro, Conley, who was in hiding and who had seen her swinging a mesh handbag, stepped out from behind the boxes and struck her a blow on the head with a stick.

Attention will be called to the fact that the big doors leading to the street were closed, and it was entirely possible for the girl to have been felled without anyone outside on the street or anyone upstairs in the office being any the wiser.

Having knocked the girl down and rendered her unconscious, it will be contended, it is said, that the negro quickly pushed her through the elevator shaft. Fearing that the girl may have recognized him and apprehending that she was not dead, the negro climbed down the ladder through the cubby hole and quickly tore off the hem of her underskirt, which he knotted around her neck, it being the most available instrument to check any possible outcry; after which he hunted around the basement and found a length of cord.

Looping this cord around the girl's neck so that when it was pulled the knot would tighten, the negro dragged her back to the sawdust bin in the rear of the basement, where her body was found, it will be contended.

When he went back to the elevator shaft he found her hat and her purse, it will be argued. He placed the purse in his pocket, took the hat and started back toward the rear of the basement. On the way he picked up one of the girl's slippers, which had come off while she was being dragged. The hat and the slipper he tossed on the trash pile by the boiler.

In the darkness of the elevators shaft he overlooked the parasol, which he had tossed down from the girl's body.

OBJECT OF NOTES.

With a view, it is said, to directing suspicion to the other negroes employed in the factory, Conley wrote the two notes found near the body. The tablet paper upon which these were written, it will be asserted, can be found in all parts of the factory.

When the negro got ready to leave the factory it will be asserted he found that Frank had gone to lunch and had locked the front doors. Then there was nothing left for him to do but pull the stable from the back basement door and make his escape from the factory through it.

The defense will put Frank's previous good character in issue to show that he was not the type of man who would commit such a crime, and it will call attention to the fact that so far the state has never been able to successfully challenge a single statement made by Frank during his three-hours' grilling by the coroner.

Witnesses will be introduced to explain the circumstantial evidence which the state will offer against Frank and other witnesses will be put up to discredit the negro Conley's story. The defense has carefully prepared its case and it will, doubtless, spring a number of surprises during the trial.

BRILLIANT LEGAL BATTLE PROMISED AT TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

An Outline of the State's Case Against Frank Is Given Here as Nearly as It Can Be Forecast

TESTIMONY OF EXPERTS UNKNOWN TO THE PUBLIC

Statements of Drs. Harris and Hurt Carefully Guarded by Solicitor, May Have Important Bearing on Trial

When the preliminaries of selecting a jury and otherwise clearing the decks for action have been dispatched (and that may take one day, or two, or longer), the state, appearing as prosecutor of Leo M. Frank, and represented by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, will attempt to prove by circumstance principally that Frank killed Mary Phagan, fourteen years old, on the afternoon of April 26, 1913, deliberately and with malice aforethought.

The state will not attempt to prove that Frank laid his plan to kill Mary Phagan long in advance of the actual deed that it charges against him.

It will endeavor merely to show that he injured her, accidentally or otherwise, and then deliberately tied the cord about her neck and left her to choke to death so that she might never regain consciousness and tell what he had attempted. This is the prosecution's theory in a nutshell.

It is assumed that the public does not know all of the evidence which Solicitor Dorsey will introduce against Frank. The public knows the case generally from start to finish, because since April 26 the Atlanta newspapers have been full of developments. But nobody save Solicitor Dorsey knows it all in detail. Only one man knows the state's theory from start to finish. And it is probable that he, the solicitor, has reserved some details which will become public at the same time that the jury hears them.

Some of these details, which may be of importance to the state's case, are to be testified by by the state's experts. One of these, Dr. J. W. Hurt, the coroner's physician, who examined the dead girl's body shortly after it was found in the National Pencil factory basement, never has stated his conclusion except under the oath of secrecy. Dr. H. F. Harris, president of the state board of health, who twice exhumed and examined Mary Phagan's body after it was interred near Marietta, is known to have testimony which the state considers material; but it has been locked in the knowledge of two or three men, and no one else can do more than surmise it.

The confession of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the factory, who has told the officers that he assisted Frank to dispose of the dead body of Mary Phagan and that he himself wrote the notes which were found beside her body, will be backed up by the state as strenuously as it will be assailed by the defense. Evidence intended to corroborate details of the negro's story will be put before the jury by the state. The negro Conley will be the witness around whom the whole case will revolve.

CASE IN DETAIL.

In their proper sequence, here are related the essential circumstances which the prosecution will endeavor to prove:

That Leo M. Frank was in the factory that day. This can be shown by several witnesses, even if Frank's own sworn statement before the coroner's jury is barred by objection of the defense.

That Mary Phagan called at the factory that day. This can be proven by implication, though Frank and the negro Conley are the only people who so far have stated that they saw her there, and the negro does not claim to have seen her until she was dead. G. W. Epps, a newsboy, playmate and neighbor of Mary Phagan's family will be introduced at this juncture to swear that he rode to town with Mary that day on the same car with Frank and saw him to go to the pencil factory for her pay, and that she had an engagement to meet him in half an hour to witness the Memorial Day parade on Whitehall street, but that she did not return. The boy may testify also that Mary had told him she was afraid of Frank. Conley, the negro, will be the witness to testify that he saw her dead body in the factory. Save by Frank's own statement, or testimony which may be shown (so far as the public knows) that Mary Phagan was seen alive in the factory.

The state probably will endeavor to prove that after she left Frank's office with her pay envelope Mary Phagan went to the women's lavatory in the rear of the first floor of the building the same floor with the office; that Frank followed her, accosted her in the machine room, attacked her when she resisted, and accidentally or otherwise knocked her head against one of the sharp points on a machine there; that then he realized what he had done, what had happened, and foresaw what fearful consequences might fall upon himself if it became known; that he tied a strip of cord from her skirt around her neck as she lay unconscious, and then sought a piece of cord and tied that too on her throat; that he removed her body from the machine room around into the more secluded corner near the lavatory; that then he hurried away.

WHEN SHE WAS KILLED.

But in the meantime, the state will endeavor to prove, someone had entered Frank's office and found him absent from it. The witness on this point will be Miss Monteen Stover, who has sworn that she went to the factory for her own pay at 12:10 o'clock and found no one in or about the offices, and that she waited in Frank's office for about ten minutes, until approximately 12:20 o'clock, and then left without having seen him. The inference will be drawn by the state that it was in this period while Miss Stover waited, that Mary Phagan was killed, and that Frank, hiding behind the doors at the rear of the office, heard and hurried back into his office, arriving there in plenty of time for Lemmie Quinn, one of the factory foremen, to find him there apparently at work—as Quinn has testified he found him.

The state then will endeavor to imply that Frank remained in his office after Quinn had left, and thought over his predicament and realized its probable consequences if he did not hide the crime. If the body was found on the second floor, the state will argue that he reasoned, he would be implicated and suspected at once, because several witnesses would remember having seen him in the office; therefore the body must be moved.

This resolved, he began to lay his

CHRONOLOGICAL STORY OF DEVELOPMENTS IN THE MARY PHAGAN MURDER MYSTERY

April 27—The dead body of Mary Phagan is found in basement of National Pencil factory at 3 a. m. by Newt Lee, night-watchman. Police hold Lee, who later in the day re-enacts discovery of the remains before detectives.

April 27—Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the Pencil factory, called from bed to view Mary Phagan's body at police station.

April 27—Arrest Gantt and Mullinax on information given the police by E. L. Sentell, who declared he saw the murdered girl in the former's company at 1220 o'clock on the morning of the murder.

April 28—Coroner Donehoo empanels in metal room on second floor and blood splotches on the floor lead police to believe the girl was killed there.

April 28—Coroner Donehoo empanels jury for inquest. It meets, views body and scene of crime and adjourns.

April 28—The largest crowd that ever viewed a body in Atlanta sees Mary Phagan's remains at he undertaking chapel.

April 28—J. M. Gantt, former bookkeeper at the factory arrested at Marietta.

April 28—Pinkertons hired by Pencil factory to find slayer.

April 29—Frank taken from factory to police station. Chief Lanford announces he will be held until after the inquest.

April 29—Experts declare Newt Lee wrote notes found by dead girl's side.

April 29—Luther Z. Rosser announces he has been retained by Frank and is present when his client is questioned in Chief Lanford's office.

April 29—Discovery of what is apparently a blood stain near elevator leads police to believe girl's body was dragged to the conveyance shaft and dropped to the basement.

April 29—J. M. Gantt asks release from police station on habeas corpus.

April 29—State offers reward of $200 for apprehension of murderer. City later adds $1,000.

April 29—Miss Pearl Robinson tells detectives it was she that Sentell saw with Mullinax on night of murder.

April 30—Frank and Lee closeted together in office of Chief of Detectives Lanford for an hour.

April 30—Coroner's jury reconvenes. Lee tells his story. Many witnesses called.

May 1—Detectives conclude Mary Phagan never left factory after she entered to receive her pay early in the afternoon of the day of the murder.

JIM CONLEY'S ARREST.

May 1—James Conley, negro sweeper, arrested while washing shirt in factory. Considered unimportant at time.

May 1—Satisfied with alibis, police liberate Gantt and Mullinax.

May 1—Frank and Lee taken to county jail to be held until outcome of coroner's jury probe.

May 2—Solicitor General Dorsey enters actively into case.

May 4—Police search for girl said to have gone to pencil factory with Mary Phagan on day of murder.

May 5—Frank tells story of his actions on the day of the crime. On the stand for three and one-half hours, he tells a straightforward tale.

May 6—Paul Bowen arrested in Houston, Tex.

May 7—Bowen released upon proving alibi.

May 7—Frand and Lee ordered held for grand jury by coroner's jury.

May 12—Mrs. Frank visits her husband for first time since his incarceration.

May 16—Fund to bring William J. Burns, famous detective, to Atlanta is opened.

May 17—Colonel Thomas B. Felder announces that Burns detective is at work on the mystery.

May 18—Burns sleuth turns out to be C. W. Tobie. He says city detectives are on right trail.

May 21—P. A. Flak, New York finger print expert, makes investigation. Result unknown.

May 24—Conley unexpectedly makes startling confession in which he says he wrote notes found near body at instigation of Frank.

May 24—Frank indicted by grand jury for murder; Lee held as material witness.

May 25—Detectives attempt to gain further confession from Conley.

May 26—C. W. Tobie withdraws from case and Burns officials announce their investigation terminated.

May 27—Conley makes another sensational affidavit in which he says he helped Frank carry Mary Phagan's body to basement.

CONLEY RE-ENACTS TRAGEDY.

May 30—Conley taken to pencil factory and re-enacts in pantomime carrying of body to basement. Taken to tower.

May 31—Conley taken from county jail to Solicitor Dorsey's office for grilling.

June 2—Defense theory, embodying, among other features, the belief that the girl was slain on the first floor, becomes known.

June 3—Minola McKnight makes sencook, employed by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank's parents, taken into custody.

June 3—Minola McKnight makes sensational affidavit in which she says she overheard Mrs. Frank tell of strange conduct on Frank's part on the night of the murder.

June 4—Mrs. Frank, in first public statement, declares her husband is innocent.

June 5—Further grilling by detectives fails to change Conley's story.

June 7—Mrs. Frank scores Solicitor Dorsey, declaring that the room in which Minola McKnight made her incriminating affidavit was a "torture chamber."

June 8—Attorney Rosser accuses Chief Lanford of insincerity in search for slayer.

June 13—Solicitor Dorsey wins fight to hold Conley at police station instead of county jail by securing revokal of order designating him as a material witness. Conley released and rearrested at door of city prison.

June 14—Solicitor Dorsey goes to New York. Declares trip has no connection with Phagan case.

June 15—Announcement that Frank A. Hooper will be associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution.

June 18—Announcement made that Reuben R. Arnold, attorney, will aid in Frank's defense.

June 23—Solicitor Dorsey sets trial for June 30.

June 24—Date of trial changed to July 28 at conference between Superior Court Judge Roan and defense and prosecution attorneys.

July 9—Public is told of a portion of Mary Phagan's pay envelope being found at bottom of flight of stairs leading from office by Pinkerton detectives soon after the murder.

July 10—L. J. Fletcher, Bertillion expert at federal penitentiary, fails to find fingerprints on pay envelope.

July 11—W. H. Mincey's affidavit, in which he says Conley, while intoxicated, confessed to killing the girl, made public.

July 12—It is announced that others will corroborate Mincey's story.

PINKERTONS CHANGE THEORY.

July 18—It is intimated that the Pinkertons have changed their theory and believe that Frank is innocent.

July 18—Call issued for grand jury to meet and consider indictment of Conley as principal.

July 21—Grand jury, after hearing statement of Solicitor Dorsey, agrees to suspend action in Conley matter.

July 22—The discovery of a bloody stick near where Conley sat on day of murder is announced.

This leads to belief that Mary Phagan may have been killed with bludgeon.

July 24—Solicitor Dorsey announces he is ready to go to trial on July 28 and will fight vigorously any attempt at postponement.

July 24—Judge Roan, of superior court, says he knows of no reason for delay.

July 25—Defense issues subpenas for witnesses who will testify in Frank's behalf.

WHAT THE STATE WILL ENDEAVOR TO PROVE

plan for moving it, the state will contend. He went to the fourth floor, where Harry Denham and Arthur White were at work, and where Mrs. Arthur White also was waiting, the state will attempt to prove. He ascertained that Mrs. White was about to leave, and hastened her departure, and locked the two men in the upper part of the building when they told him they would work until he got back from lunch.

Then, presumably with no one else (as far as the public knows) in the building, the state will contend, Frank followed Mrs. White down to the street door and locked it after her—and turned to find Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, who had been dozing in the corner by the staircase, behind the elevator. Mrs. White will testify that she had seen the negro there.

With his way to the basement thus shut off by the negro's presence where he could see anybody go down, the state will try to prove, Frank, in confusion and perhaps panic, called the negro into the matter (as the negro will testify), telling him that he had dropped a girl "back yonder" and hit her head against something, and that she was unconscious, and directing him (the negro) to go back and bring her out.

JIM CONLEY'S TESTIMONY.

Here is where the testimony of Jim Conley becomes the case of the state.

By direct evidence again, the state will attempt to convince the jury, upon Jim Conley's testimony, that the negro found girl was dead, and not merely unconscious; that he called this out in fright to Frank, who was waiting on the guard near the front; that Frank told him hurriedly to pick up her body and come on; that the negro got a crocus sack and laid the body upon it, as the girls hat and shoe, which had been knocked off and dragged off; that the negro shouldered his gruesome burden and started toward the front with it, but that it slipped from his shoulder at the little dressing room in front of which bloodstains were found on the floor; that Frank came and helped him from that point to the elevator; that Frank ran the elevator to the basement and directed the negro to take the body away back into the darkness, and stood guard in the trap door at the top of the ladder until the negro returned; that the negro ran the elevator up from the basement, Frank jumping aboard at the street floor and jumping off before the elevator had quite reached the second floor; that Frank went around behind the elevator and washed his hands and then took the negro into the office and dictated the notes and gave the negro money, but took it back, saying he would give it to him (the negro) later, and then gave him a small sum in a cigarette box, dismissing the negro. Conley there steps out of the case.

If Arthur White is sworn that she saw the negro Conley sitting on the boxes behind the stairs when she left the factory, the state will doubtless endeavor to develop that point in argument and corroborative testimony if possible, for if the negro was there then, after Mary Phagan had disappeared in the factory, the state will seek to convince the jury that he could not possibly have committed the murder himself, as the defense will seek to show. It will probably be argued that no negro would kill a person, particularly a white girl, and then sit around aimlessly where he would be seen and suspected.

The state will endeavor to show that Frank's behavior on the afternoon of the murder was unusual. The night watchman, Newt Lee, will testify that the superintendent let him off for several hours and told him to go out and enjoy himself; that Frank appeared agitated when at 6 o'clock, as he was leaving the factory, he met J. M. Gantt, a discharged bookkeeper, at the foot of the stairs; and that Frank called up the factory that evening by telephone to ask if everything was all right. Gantt's testimony will be used by the state to corroborate that part of Lee's testimony about Frank seeming agitated.

WAS ELEVATOR MOVED?

Further, the state will try to prove that the elevator was moved on April 26. It will introduce witnesses tending to corroborate portions of Conley's statement. It will get before the jury, by the testimony of witnesses, that Frank was agitated on the following morning when the firsa investigation of the mystery was under way, and that he was fraid of the negro's body. Mrs. nola McKnight, negro cook in the Frank household, may be called by the state as one of its own witnesses.

What more than this the state will attempt to prove is problematical, beyond establishing, of course, the fact that Mary Phagan was murdered. This will be proved by the testimony of Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, who found the body in the cellar an hour or two after midnight, and by the testimony of the police officers. The state may seek to establish further details implying motive or attempted purpose or accomplished purpose by the testimony of Drs. Hurt and Harris.

PLENNIE MINOR FACES TASK IN HANDLING COURT ROOM DURING TRIAL OF LEO FRANK

PLENNIE MINOR.

Genial Deputy Sheriff Will Have Seats for Only 250 People, and Hates to Think He Won't Be Able to Accommodate Everybody, for That's His Disposition

Plennie Minor is going to have the hardest job in Fulton county during the next two weeks.

Plennie, she doesn't allow people to call him Mr. Minor, for he is everybody's friend) is a Fulton county deputy sheriff and has the arduous task of keeping order in the court room while the Frank case is in progress. Incidentally, he will have to look out for witnesses and personages, and generally be the handy man about the trial.

Probably the worst job coming to him will be to keep the crowds out.

There are 250 seats in the court room for 250 people and after they are filled everybody will be barred.

Plennie hates not to accommodate anybody, and declares that he wishes every man who wants to hear the trial could get a seat. But they cannot, and it would be a serious handicap to the progress of the trial if people were allowed to stand in the narrow aisles and in the corner in the court room. Judge Roan has given instructions that people not be allowed in the court room after the seats are filled.

An efficient corps of bailiffs will be placed on each door and Plennie declares that he is going to see that perfect order is maintained throughout the trial of the case.

Deputy Minor was in charge of the court during the trial of Mrs. Daisy Grace and during other famous criminal trials, and as the result of his work he has received many compliments not only from Judge Roan, but from Judge Thomas and other visiting judges, who have presided here.

Especially hard will be the job of keeping out the crowds on the first day of the Frank trial, for then only a hundred spectators can be seated in the court, as there must be seats for the 144 veniremen who have been drawn.

HERE IS CONLEY'S CONFESSION AROUND WHICH BITTER FIGHT IS EXPECTED IN THE FRANK TRIAL

THERE is little doubt that the storm-center, so to speak, of the Frank trial will be the testimony of the negro sweeper, James Conley. He will be the pricipal witness for the state and all of the other evidence of the prosecution will be shaped with a view to corroborating and strengthening his story when places the murder of Mary Phagan upon the factory superintendent.

And the defense will chiefly concern itself with the task of discrediting the negro's testimony. It will bend its energies to prove that Conley has lyingly accused Frank and will offer evidence designed to fasten the crime upon the negro.

These facts being true the public will be interested in reviewing the sworn confession made by Conley to the city detectives. It follows:

"On Saturday, April 26, 1913, when I came back to the pencil factory with Mr. Frank I waited for him downstairs like he told me, and when he whistled for me I went upstairs and he asked me if I wanted to make some money right quick, and I told him yes, sir, and he told me that he had picked up a girl back there and had let her fall and that her head hit against something—he didn't know what it was—and for me to move her and I hollered and told him the girl was dead.

"And he told me to pick her up and bring her to the elevator, and I told him I didn't have nothing to pick her up with, and he told me to go and look by the cotton box there and get a piece of cloth and I got a big wide piece of cloth and come back there to the men's toilet, where she was, and tied her, and I taken her and brought her up there to a little dressing room and carried her on my right shoulder and she got too heavy for me and she slipped off my shoulder and fell on the floor right there at the dressing room and I hollered for Mr. Frank to come there and help me; that she was too heavy or me, and Mr. Frank come down there and told me to pick her up, dam fool,' and he run down there to me and he was excited, and he picked her up by the feet. Her feet and head were sticking out of the cloth, and by him being so nervous he let her feet fall, and then he brought her up to the elevator, Mr. Frank carrying her by the feet and me by the shoulder, and we brought her to elevator and then Mr. Frank says, 'What, let me get the key,' and he went into the office and come back and unlocked the elevator door and started the elevator down.

FRANK RAN THE ELEVATOR.

"Mr. Frank turned it on himself, and we went on down to the basement and Mr. Frank helped me take it off the elevator and he told me to take it back there to the sawdust pile and I picked it up and put it on my shoulder again, and Mr. Frank he went up the ladder and watched the trapdoor to see if anybody was coming, and I taken her back there and taken the cloth from around her and taken her hat and shoes which I picked up upstairs right where her body was lying and brought them down and untied the cloth and he brought them back and throwed them on the trashpile in front of the furnace and Mr. Frank was standing at the trapdoor.

"He didn't tell me where to put the thing. I laid her body down with her head toward the elevator, lying on her stomach and the left side of her face was on the ground the right side of her body was up and both arms were lying down with her body by the side of her body. Mr. Frank joined me back of the elevator and he stepped on the elevator when it got to where he was, and he said, 'Gee, that was a tiresome job,' and I told him his job was not as tiresome as mine was, because I had to tote it all the way from where she was lying to the dressing room and in the basement from the elevator to where I left her.

GOT IN THE WARDROBE.

"Then Mr. Frank hops off the elevator before it gets even with the second floor and he makes a stumble and he hits the floor and catches with both hands and he went around to the sink to wash his hands and I went and cut off the motor and stood and waited for Mr. Frank to come from around there washing his hands and then we went on into the office and Mr. Frank, he couldn't hardly keep still. He was all the time moving about from one office to the other. Then he come back into the stenographer's office and come back and told me, 'Here come Emma Clark and Corinthia Hall,' I understood him to say and he come back and told me to come here and he opened the wardrobe and told me to get in there, and I was so slow about going he told me to hurry up because it was getting late, and Mr. Frank, whoever that was come into the office, they didn't stay so very long till Mr. Frank had gone about seven or eight minutes, and I was still in the wardrobe and he never had come to let me out, and Mr. Frank come back and I said: 'Goodness alive, you kept me in there a mighty long time,' and he said: 'Yes, I see I did; you are sweated.' And I told him I was. Mr. Frank sat down in a chair. Mr. Frank then took out a cigarette and he give me the box and asked me did I want to smoke, and I told him, 'Yes, sir,' and I taken the box and taken out a cigarette and he handed me a box of matches and I handed him the cigarette box and he told me that was all right I could keep that, and that I could keep the money in it and he told me that was all right I could keep that. Mr. Frank then asked me to write a few lines on that paper, a white scratch pad he had there and he told me what to put on there and I asked him what he was going to do with it and he told me to just go ahead and write, and then after I got through writing Mr. Frank looked at it and said it was all right, and Mr. Frank looked up at the top of the house and said, 'Why should I hang? I have wealthy people in Brooklyn,' and asked him what about me and he told me that was all right about me, for me to keep my mouth shut and he would make everything all right.

HANDED HIM ROLL OF BILLS.

"And then I asked him where was the money he said he was going to give me, and Mr. Frank said, 'Here is $200,' and he handed me a big roll of greenback money and I didn't count it. I stood there a little while looking at it in my hand and I told Mr. Frank not to take out another dollar for that watch man I owed, and he said he wouldn't—and the rest is just like I told it before. The reason I have not told this before is I thought Mr. Frank would get out and help me out, but it seems that he is not going to get out, and I have decided to tell the whole truth about the matter.

"When I was looking at the money in my hand, Mr. Frank said: 'Let me have that and I will make it all right with you Monday if I live and nothing happens.' And he took the money back and I asked him if that was the way he done, and he said he would give it back Monday.

LEO M. FRANK WILL GO TO TRIAL MONDAY FOR PHAGAN MURDER

these subpoenas will probably come the first day, as the solicitor is not expected to surrender the affidavits without a contest.

It became known Saturday night that the state has subpoenaed a number of negroes who claim to have been with Conley on the afternoon of April 26, after Mary Phagan is supposed to have been murdered. This indicated that the state will endeavor to corroborate those parts of Conley's story which redate to his movements outside the factory after he claims to have helped Frank hide Mary Phagan's body in the cellar of the pencil factory.

Two of these negroes will testify, it is said, that Conley entered a near beer saloon close by the pencil factory about 1:30 and found them there and drank with them, then offered to set 'em up, but on their refusal drank alone.

These negroes will testify, it is said, that Conley was not nervous nor drunk at that time, and that they walked several blocks with him, he turning off into a street which led to his home.

Then will come the choosing of the twelve men who will decide whether Leo M. Frank is guilty or innocent.

The choosing of a jury is expected to consume all of the first day of the trial, and probably part of the second day.

The venire for the trial consists of 144 names, and probably twenty of them for one reason or another will not be in court. Another twenty or more will be excused because they are conscientiously opposed to capital punishment.

So widely discussed has been the Frank case that it is expected that many veniremen will be excused because they have formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused.

SELECTING THE JURY.

While there are only thirty peremptory strikes, ten for the state and twenty for the defense, it is generally believed that they will not have been exhausted and that all twelve jurors will not have been chosen when the venire has been exhausted.

This will mean that talesmen will have to be hastily summoned into court by the sheriffs before the jury can be completed.

The names of the veniremen were drawn by Judge John T. Pendleton, of the superior court, last Thursday, and among them are a number of leading Atlanta citizens. In fact, the venire contains an unusual number of men who are prominent in Atlanta and Fulton county.

FRANK'S STORY OF HIS MOVES ON DAY OF CRIME

Accused Superintendent's Story Is Unbroken by Any Save a Negro

Leo M. Frank's sworn statement of his whereabouts each hour on the day of April 26, when Mary Phagan met her death, is of unusual interest in the case, especially since no witness except Conley has been found, at least as far as the public knows, who can break his story.

Frank's statement of his whereabouts, as given at the coroner's inquest, when he was under oath, follows:

SATURDAY APRIL 26.

7 o'clock a. m.—Arose and dressed at home.

8—Left home for the factory office.

8:20—Arrived at the factory office.

8:30 or 9—M. D. Darley and others entered there.

10—Went over to the office of Sig Montag, factory manager, on Nelson street.

11—Went back to the factory office.

12—Stenographer and office boy left him alone in office.

12:10 p. m.—Mary Phagan came for her pay; got it and left. He heard her footsteps die away, and went on with his work, thinking no more about her. When she left he thought he heard her voice in the outer office.

12:15 or 12:30—Lennie Quinn, foreman of the department where Mary worked came in.

1:20—Arrived home.

1:40—Finished lunch with his father-in-law.

2—Left home for factory.

2:05—Spoke to Miss Rebecca Carson, forewoman in his factory, in front of Rich's store on Whitehall street.

3—Arrived again at the factory.

3:10—White and Denham left; he remained alone in the factory.

3:20—Latched, the street door behind him.

3:45—Night Watchman Newt Lee, negro, came. He let negro go away again.

5:30—Finished work on the financial sheet.

6—Finished balancing cash; night watchman came back. Frank washed his hands, and left factory, leaving night watchman with J. M. Gantt.

6:25—Arrived home.

6:30—Wife and mother-in-law came in just as he was telephoning to the factory. Got no answer there.

—Telephoned again. Night watchman told him everything was all right. He ate supper.

9:30—After smoking and reading since supper, he went upstairs and lit the gas heater.

10:30—Bathed.

11—Went to bed.

SUNDAY, APRIL 27.

7:30 a. m.—Awakened by the phone. Informed of the tragedy. Went to undertaker's shop and identified Mary Phagan's body as that of girl whom he had paid the afternoon before.

SEASHORE EXCURSION AUGUST 7th.

EASTERN TRAINMEN NOT TO GO ON STRIKE

Both Sides Sign Agreement to Arbitrate Under Newlands Act

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 26.—The threatened strike of 80,000 conductors and trainmen of forty-five eastern railroads for higher wages and improved working conditions will not be called. Articles of agreement to arbitrate, under the Newlands act, the question at issue, were signed today by the employes' representatives and conference committee of railroad men.

The agreement was not reached until the managers had withdrawn the proposal that their own grievances against the men also should be arbitrated. This claim, the members announced today, they had relinquished to "protect the public" from a tie-up which they said the employes intended to force if the railroads persisted in pressing their point.

Today's peaceful outcome of the dispute was the result of efforts made by the board of mediation and conciliation recently created in the hurriedly passed Newlands act to meet the situation. The board, consisting of Judge William Lea Chambers, Judge Martin A. Knapp and G. W. Hanger, brought about today's agreements, after conferences with the disputants which continued more than a week.

With the elimination of the eight grievances for which the railroads desired consideration, the articles of arbitration comprise, without alteration, the sixteen original demands presented by the conductors and trainmen. The only point gained by the railroads was the provision that the award of the board of arbitration to be constituted later of six members shall take effect October 1 next instead of May 1 last, the date requested by the employes.

The articles were signed on behalf of the men by W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and for the railroads by Elisha Lee, chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers.

The members of the mediation board returned tonight to Washington, where they will report to President Wilson. The board will not again be called into action unless the four arbitrators nominated by the railroads and men fail to agree on a fifth and sixth to complete the arbitration board, in that contingency the mediation board will select the two necessary members.

COLLEGE PARK TO ENFORCE SPEED LIMIT FOR AUTOS

It Is Ten Miles Per Hour, and Violators Will Be Fined $25

Today is the day the new speed limit of 10 miles an hour goes into effect in College Park.

So, motorists, have a care. Otherwise there's a fine of $25 waiting, with the alternative of 20 days' hard work upon the streets of College Park.

The new speed limit was promulgated by an ordinance adopted by the College Park council last Monday.

Formerly the signs upon the roads and streets giving entrance to College Park read: "No speed limit. Reckless driving prohibited." The town authorities found that some automobilists sped around town at a rate of 45 and 50 miles an hour, in reckless disregard of pedestrians' safety.

CALLS ATTENTION TO OAKHURST SPEED LAWS

B. E. Thrasher, secretary of the Atlanta Athletic club, wishes to call the attention of his club members to the speed laws of the town of Oakhurst.

In going to the Atlanta Athletic club's country club house on East Lake in autos Oakhurst is passed through and the marshal of that town has complained that many of the club members go much fastr through the town than the fifteen miles an hour permitted by the municipal law.

NEGRO LAD TERRORIZES BLACKS WITH OLD GUN

Using an antiquated rifle which had seen service in the Civil War, Jesse Oliver, a 16-year-old colored youth, drove a score of other blacks from Larkin street and terrorized the neighborhood of his home, 71 Hennesaw alley, late Saturday afternoon. He is held at the police station in default of $500 bond.

The youth was captured by Call Ocer Gorman after a chase of two blocks.

WRITE FOR A SELECTION OF DIAMONDS

It is naturally a big advantage to select a diamond leisurely in the privacy of your home.

Without any expense or obligation on your part, we gladly ship diamonds of assorted qualities direct to you for inspection. We realize that the selection must contain diamonds which will sell themselves, and we naturally pick out our choicest values.

The diamond selected can be paid for in cash at its marked price, or settlement can be made on an attractive deferred payment plan. If no selection is made the package is returned by collect express.

Our booklet, "Facts About Diamonds," quotes net prices on all weights and grades besides explaining our liberal plans.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Gower's Special School Tax Bill Would Guarantee Teachers' Pay.

Friends of the bill introduced by Representative O. T. Gower, of Crisp county, providing for an amendment to the state constitution which will require every county in the state to levy a special tax of not less than and not more than five mills for maintenance of their public schools, assert that if this bill is adopted every county in the state will be in position to pay its teachers promptly.

This bill will not, it is said, affect the school systems in the thirty-one counties where the unit tax system already prevails and where a special tax levy is already made to supplement the state funds, but will apply to those counties which now depend entirely upon the state without trying to help themselves.

Those counties now operating under the county unit tax system are doing so under their own volition and were voted under the McMichael law of 1906, and the number of such counties are now thirty-one. This amendment to the constitution offered in the bill introduced by Mr. Gower will operate in every county of the state. The board of education will be the judge of the needs of their respective counties of city systems and will levy in proportion to the needs of the schools.

Sheppard Wants Georgia to Try Printing Its Own Schoolbooks.

One of the strongest supporters of the McCrory schoolbook bill is Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter. He not only believes the people of the state are paying too much for schoolbooks, but he would like to see books used in the schools of Georgia written and compiled by southern men and women, and possessing a local coloring.

Mr. Sheppard was disappointed that the educational committee of the house did not recommend a bill which provides for the publication by the state of all readers in the schools. The bill as reported would authorize the state to begin its experiment with the publication of one reader and perhaps one or two other text books.

A companion resolution to this bill, which has been favorably reported by the committee, provides for the appointment of a commission to investigate the schoolbook question to ascertain whether it would be feasible for the state to publish all its schoolbooks and whether such a plan would result in a saving to the purchasers of these books.

As Receiver of Telegrams Shelby Myrick Gets the Palm.

If the house committee on amendments to the constitution had any more new county propositions to hear at this session of the legislature, then Representative Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, chairman, would have to be treated for writer's cramp. And it is not his correspondence that would be the cause, either, though let it be known said correspondence is not light.

Since the convening of the legislature and especially on days when new county hearings were due to come up, he has been kept busy signing for telegrams. Up to date he has signed for and received over six hundred messages over the wires from all parts of the state entreating him either to kill or create some county. The record for wires received in one day was established last week when he wrote his name in the little messengers' books one hundred and twenty-six times. On Friday, the last day for county hearings, he received over 50 telegrams.

They were fired at him from every section of Georgia. One would read: "We earnestly implore you not to create the county of so-and-so. All residents of our section are unalterably opposed to the move." Another would say, "It is essential that such and such county should be made from certain territory. We have the goods and there is no material opposition."

And these messages were signed not by an individual, but by families and scores of residents in one town. Some carried as many as thirty names. Mr. Myrick received all of them with equal fortitude and calmly turned each and every one over to his committee. He has enough, he says, to paper his office in Savannah, and is seriously contemplating carrying out the unique idea. "I could never forget my days in the Georgia legislature then," he said.

Experiment Station is Popular; South Georgia Wants It Now.

There is no one general issue in the house that is creating more talk or more speculation than the ultimate future of the Georgia Experiment Station, at Griffin.

Some time ago The Journal printed an exclusive story to the effect that a plan was on foot to move the station to Athens and make it an integral part of the State Agricultural college. Just such a bill was introduced during the early part of last week by the Wilkes county delegation, Representatives Garnet A. Green and F. G. Booker.

And now comes another bid for the honors from no definite town or county but from south Georgia in general. A bill introduced in the house Friday morning by Representative R. C. Ellis, of Tift, and others, would make the matter of removal competitive insofar as south Georgia is concerned. The measure provides that proper legal notices be printed in the papers relative to bids for the station from the lower section of the state and that the most attractive offer be accepted and the farm located in the county fortunate enough to outbid her competitors and offer the greatest advantages and inducements.

At the same time Representative W. H. Connor, of Spalding, who hails from Griffin, where the station is located, has introduced a bill asking an appropriation of $5,000 with which to make certain improvements on the present property.

The desire to secure the station appears to grow more popular each day. All parts of the state are clamoring for it and incidentally for that federal appropriation of $30,000 for its maintenance. And so it may be readily seen that the floor of the house promises to be the scene of a merry fight when these matters come up for consideration, one by one. In the meantime, the fate of the station remains in the balance, but the chances largely favor its getting the $5,000 appropriation and remaining just where it is.

EMBLEM OF PURITY AND EXCELLENCE SINCE 1860

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, and as none but sound, clean grain can be malted, it is made from the most carefully selected grains. It is a predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whiskey; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is invaluable for the prevention or alleviation of distressing summer complaints.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by most druggists, grocers and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottle, $4.30
6 Large Bottle, $5.90
12 Large Bottles, $11.00

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and we make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

REPUBLICANS QUIT TRYING TO AMEND TARIFF BILL

After Several Hours of Fruitless Effort They See It Is No Use

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—After several hours of long, orthodox tariff discussion in the senate today, during which the Republicans were consistently defeated on amendments, the minority leaders began to tire of fruitless efforts to amend the bill, and rapid progress was made. The chemical schedule practically was approved without change when the senate adjourned.

In protesting against the heavy cut on the duty on whiting, Senator Lodge declared he knew it was useless to offer amendments. He also protested against the duty on lithopone, saying he would not uselessly delay the senate by offering an amendment.

Senator Smoot also refrained from offering certain amendments, saying:

"I will not offer an amendment because I see it will do no good."

All the paragraphs of the chemical schedule were approved with the exception of those referring to barytes and lead products, which were passed over by request.

HOLD-UP MEN TAKE $93 FROM VICTIM

M. E. Rogers Robbed of Cash By Two Negro Men Last Night

M. E. Rogers, of 497 East Fair street, reported to the police shortly before midnight Saturday that he had been held up and robbed of $93 by two negro men at the intersection of Mosely and Grant streets about an hour previously.

According to the story related by Rogers, who operates a near beer saloon at 740 Decatur street, he was on his way home last night, when at the point indicated, the highwaymen jumped out at him from behind a brick wall and at the point of revolvers demanded that he turn over his cash.

Officers sent to investigate the holdup returned to the station without having found any tangible clew to work upon.

Garden of Dreams, Borrowed, Blooms in Shadow of Prison In Symbols of Locked Doors

Prisoners at United States Penitentiary Enjoy Real Garden, but Belongs to Their Friend, J. P. Mathiessen

Everybody's heard of a garden of dreams, but whoever heard of a borrowed garden? And a garden that is borrowed and at the same time, perhaps, is a garden of dreams—how impossible, one would say.

Yet there is such a garden, and it's not of pocket handkerchief size, either. It's almost as large as a small city block, and it is a mass of color and beauty. In the grassy slopes that lie on both sides of a gravelled driveway, are yards and yards of rose beds, the little thorny bushes tipped with roses of every color and size. Where the trees cast darkling spots upon the lawn, the shadows waver prettily, and in the sunlight tall lilies and varicolored blossoms nod and quiver in the tiny breezes.

Yet back of the glow of sun and flowers, barred windows break the light, and thick walls of masonry shut out from hundreds of eyes the sight of the borrowed garden. For it is at the federal prison.

On each side of the driveway a gigantic key of flowers symbolizes the locked doors of iron, and in the center front of the lawns on either side are the letters, U. S. P., the harshness of the capitals transformed into loveliness by bright blossoms. In the center, a big circular bed is planted with thickly clustered cannas, surrounded with coleus, heliotrope, verbena and geraniums. The entire lawn is surrounded by narrow rosebeds and a long line of nasturtiums flame brightly on the inner line.

It was designed, planted and tended by men who are paying a debt to society for having broken the law, but it is no whit less beautiful than the garden of a millionaire.

It is a borrowed garden because every single plant and flower in it merely has been loaned to the men of the prison until fall. It is a garden of dreams, because, perhaps, the fragrance and color of the blossoms opens wide a vista of years to men who have known the seamy side of life, but who have not forgotten, far back in their heart, the memory of a sunny bed of old-fashioned flowers planted by a beauty-loving mother long ago, or perhaps a single flower held in some girl's hand —a "blue flower" suggesting the quest for happiness.

Some, too, remember not the flowers they have seen and had, but the flowers that they saw and wanted, but never had. These tend most carefully the friendly growing things at the prison, finding, like the famous prisoner in literature, a keen delight in watching the tender shoots climb to verdant loveliness.

The borrowed garden came into existence through J. P. Mathiessen, the director of the prison orchestra, who owns greenhouses. Warden Moyer wanted a garden for the men and cast about for means of getting one. There was no money forthcoming, however, and the plan was about to be relinquished when Mr. Mathiessen heard of it. He promptly offered to empty his green houses, transplanting them to the lawns of the prison where they have been ever since. That they have not suffered for lack of tending may be seen at once.

As soon as the warden gets enough money he will buy plants for the garden, but even then it still will be partly a borrowed garden, for some of Mr. Mathiessen"s plants will seed themselves from year to year and grow again each spring.

COLLEGE PARK MEN TO TAKE LUNCH TOGETHER

Unique Booster Plan by Trade Board of Suburban Town

Weekly luncheons in Atlanta for all the College Park citizens whose business brings them to the city every day, are being planned by the College Park board of trade. This unique step in community work has been projected as the best method for getting the College Park Atlantians together to discuss their town and agree upon plans for its advancement and improvement.

On Friday night the College Park organization will hold its next meeting. Walter Cooper, secretary of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, and C. J. Haden, one of the leading members of the chamber, will address the meeting.

Scores of suggestions of a new name and a slogan for the College Park commercial body have been received by the publicity committee. In response to the authorized advertisement offering a $25 prize for the best name and the best slogan, entrants have written from various parts of Georgia and even from other states, some replies coming from Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi. This contest will close Thursday night.

CLAIMS HIS BROTHER WAS FORCED TO WED

H. A. Jowers, of Fitzgerald, signing himself a brother of S. J. Jowers, of that city, about whom a story was published recently when his wife came to Atlanta seeking him, saying he had deserted her, writes to The Journal that his brother was forced by the law to marry the young woman in Waycross. S. J. Jowers did not take his bride to his home in Fitzgerald, writes the brother, but left her in Waycross, went alone to Fitzgerald and departed later for parts unknown.

MISSES PRIOLEAU WERE NOT HURT SERIOUSLY

Word has been received by Morris Prioleau that his two sisters, Misses Theo and Dolly Prioleau, who were hurt in an automobile accident near Monroe, La., a few days ago are not injured seriously.

The message was sent by Will Prioleau a brother, who went to Monroe as soon as the news of the accident was received. Miss Theo Prioleau was the most badly injured of the two, but is reported to be doing well.

The Dix Guarantee On Diamonds

Is based upon the soundest business principles, and the fact that there is no such thing as a second-hand diamond, and that diamonds are recognized collateral anywhere in the civilized world.

Our large purchases permit our buying diamonds direct from the larger cutters of the world, in original lots, thereby saving the wholesaler's and jobber's profits.

We are diamond specialists, and our diamonds are graded and classed with exacting care until each one has its actual value, and so marked in plain figures.

Every solitaire diamond we sell is with the understanding that we will exchange it whenever desired and allow full purchase price, together with any meantime advance in value, as part payment on larger diamonds.

We will cheerfully buy back any solitaire diamond at its full cash price, less 10 per cent, if returned within one year of purchase.

Our liberal methods of business sometimes force others to consent to similar terms and to adopt our methods, but have you ever tried to cash a piece of goods?

Our reputation for fair and progressive dealing is excelled by no other diamond house. We live up to our reputation—not upon it; and stand firmly back of our values.

Justice to Motherhood.

It is almost unthinkable, yet pitilessly true, that the law of Georgia recognizes no human or natural right of a mother to her child. Our statutes in this respect are but slightly removed from those of the dark and forgotten time when a wife was legally regarded as the husband's chattel or slave whom he might persecute or even kill and be accounted justified before the courts. The custody of minor children, from the day of their birth until their majority, is now vested in the father alone, unless 'clear and strong proof can be given of his unfitness." In issues of this kind the courts, to be sure, are allowed a measure of discretion as to the best interests of the child but such provisions are merely incidental; the whole burden and tenor of the law is toward the father's special privilege and the mother's special injustice.

Under the law, Judge Henry C. Hammond, of Augusta, was recently forced to render a decision denying a young mother the custody of her two children, one of whom was less than a year old. So deeply did the cruelty of this situation impress him that he has written to Representative Samuel C. Olive, a House member from Richmond county, urging that at the present session of the Legislature a bill remedying the monstrous wrongs of the existing law be enacted. Judge Hammond's comment in this connection is noteworthy:

Under the statutes of our state and the decisions of our courts I think the three following propositions are unquestionably correct:

1. The right to the custody of minor children is alone in the father.

2. If he forfeits this right by becoming an unfit person to exercise it, then the law looks to the best interests of the child.

3. Nowhere in our laws are the rights of the mother as such in the first instance maintainable.'

I urge your very earnest attention to this matter of vital importance. Case after case arises in which courts and judicial officers, mere creatures of the law, are roundly blamed for doing their simple and unavoidable duty. The fault is not with them, but with the law, and this can only be corrected by the legislature.

The wisdom and justice, the simple humanity of this appeal should not go unheeded. Public sentiment and public judgment the State over will undoubtedly welcome the revision of a statute that leaves our law in the shadow of barbarism and mocks our civilization with a cruelty worse than savage. The Legislature should act without delay on this vital, human issue.

China Moves Forward.

The prophets of a speedy downfall or disruption of the Chinese republic are continually disappointed. The new government has weathered one storm after another and now it seems to be emerging safely from the most serious one it has thus far encountered.

The revolution or rather insurrection which had its origin and its only appreciable support in southern China threatened at one time to reach large proportions. But dispatches indicate that the government forces are steadily gaining control of the situation and diplomatic movements are now under way which promise to put an early end to all organized rebellion.

It was only to be expected that the young Republic would meet trouble of this kind. The remarkable thing is that the uprisings have been comparatively few and have been suppressed without great loss of life or destruction of property.

The Chinese people as a whole have shown a really surprising adaptability to the new political regime. Their tendency is not to abuse but to use their new freedom. Events thus far have eminently justified the United States' recognition of the Republic.

The Supremely Important Duty Now Before Congress.

The supremely important duty now before Congress is the enactment of a currency and banking law that will meet the country's urgent business needs. The tariff bill is assured of passage. The far-reaching changes which that measure will bring about and the readjustments it will necessitate demand an accompanying revision of the banking and currency system. Indeed, these two issues are so closely interwoven that they cannot be logically or safely separated. Tariff reform and currency reform must go hand in hand, if either is to yield satisfactory results.

By reducing and, in some instances, removing the tariff taxes that foster monopoly and stifle the spirit of free enterprise, the Democratic Congress will release new forces of commercial and industrial life. But unless this fresh freedom is given the means of sustenance and of practical operation, it will be a blessing more shadowy than substantial; for, "the tyrannies of business, big and little, lie largely within the field of money and credit." Should Congress adjourn without enacting a currency bill to give balance and guidance to the tariff bill, it would leave its great task only half complete and its great pledge to the nation but partly redeemed.

The effect of this upon business interests would be distinctly disappointing and unwholesome. The country expects banking and currency reform as confidently as it expects tariff reform; and it feels the need of the one as sharply as of the other. Until these two related issues are settled, business will stand in a temper of suspense. Everyone realizes that we are at the threshold of important economic changes. No one fears the step that will be taken but everyone dreads delay and uncertainty. Therefore, for the sake of business stability and progress, some adequte measure of banking and currency reform should be agreed upon and put into effect at the earliest possible day. It is continued suspense and agitation that are dangerous and hurtful. But so soon as Congress enacts such a bill as will be even fairly satisfactory, business will move promptly and hopefully forward, knowing the path it is to follow and the means at its command.

It is not to be expected that a final and perfect law of this character can be secured within a single session of Congress or within any definite period of years. Nor will it be possible to secure a law that will completely reconcile all differences of opinion, even though they are honestly entertained. In this, as in all matters of far-reaching legislation, there is a wide diversity of judgment. The most and best that can be hoped for is a measure that will approximately meet the needs of the time and relieve the oppressive sense of uncertainty that now prevails. The errors which such a law might contain could be corrected and would be, as occasion and experience would warrant; but failure to enact any law at all would be a serious and inexcusable mistake.

It is imperative, therefore, that the Democrats in Congress get together in a spirit of party faith and workmanly patriotism and agree upon a banking and currency bill. Dispatches indicate that there are sharply drawn differences among the members of the House committee. It is the duty of the Democratic members to harmonize those differences as speedily as possible. Certainly no member should oppose his particular views to the party's general will to such an extent as to destroy the chance of passing a fairly acceptable currency bill, and whoever does so will prove himself unloyal to the party and the country as well.

The measure which the committee is now considering and which, in the main, has the administration's approval was not introduced as an ideal one, but rather as a practical basis and starting point for constructive legislation. That it is open to improvements, no one denies; sympathetic criticism of any or all of its provisions should be welcome. But it is none the less apparent that the Democrats must rally around the basis principles of this bill, if they are to accomplish anything in the way of currency and banking reform. They must get together and stick together on the principal issues of this bill, if they are to serve their party and their country as they should.

Surely, there is a broad common ground of belief upon which the Democratic members of the committee and of Congress as a whole can meet, if they are not unduly insistent in particulars and in their personal views. All the essential provisions of the pending bill are thoroughly sound and are evidently acceptable to the rank and file of business men. It provides, for one thing, that the control of the system of currency and banking shall be public instead of private, in order that it may operate for the interests and the rights of the country as a whole rather than for the special advantage of particular groups and centers. Furthermore, provision is made for a currency that will be elastic and responsive to the needs of sound credit, instead of rigid and unresponsive as now. And provision is also made to prevent the undue concentration of the nation's monetary resources at particular points or by particular interests. These are the broad principles embodied in the present bill. They afford, as we have said, a practical basis and starting point for legislation of which the country is in vital need. They should have the hearty support of every Democrat and, for that matter, of all Congressmen who are sincerely interested in currency and banking reform.

A law framed on these lines will prevent financial panics. It will give us a flexible currency. It will give us a banking system under the impartial and responsible control of the Government. It will establish certainty and order where uncertainty and dangerous confusion now exist. It will relieve the business mind of that disquieting suspense which will continue to spread and deepen until Congress speaks the word which Business is waiting anxiously to hear.

Democracy now faces its crucial test of statesmanship. Shall it falter and fail as Republican Congresses have done, or move unitedly forward in the performance its great task. President Wilson insists that an adequate currency and banking bill be promptly passed. In this, as in the tariff issue, he is backed by public sentiment and public judgment. The country is watching Congress, demanding that it be given a practical measure of banking and currency reform with the least possible delay.

Prompt Action Needed for The Vital Statistics Bill.

The House committee on hygiene and sanitation can render no better service than by reporting favorably and promptly the bill providing for the establishment of a State bureau of vital statistics.

From the standpoint of the people's practical and human interests, this measure is clearly one of the most important now before the Legislature. Its enactment will mean more intelligent and more fruitful work in behalf of public health. It will mean the saving of money and the saving of lives. It will place Georgia on the health map of the nation, giving her an official standing in the health records of the federal census, where she now has no mention.

The bill before the House committee is a model one. It has the indorsement of the federal census bureau and the American Medical Association. It is supported unanimously by the physicians of Georgia and by enlightened public opinion throughout the State. There is thus every reason to believe that it will become a law at the present session of the General Assembly, if it reaches a vote. But in order that it may reach a vote, the committee on hygiene and sanitation must act with all possible speed.

It would be extremely disappointing and unfortunate, should the State longer be denied the benefits of an adequate system of vital statistics when a satisfactory bill making these benefits possible awaits only the committee's recommendation to be pressed successfully forward to its passage. Georgia is sorely in need of such a law, for the sake of her vital interests at home and her good name abroad. Let the committee act without further delay in order that this enterprise, so fundamentally important to public welfare, may be consummated.

Maybe the Mexican ambassador will bring back a solution of the Mexican boll weevil problem.

The fact that a school teacher landed in the presidency doesn't console certain other members of the profession for the delay in their pay.

Vitalize This Law.

Laws that are "dead to infliction," we were told long ago, "to themselves are dead," so that "Liberty plucks justice by the nose, the baby beats the nurse and quite athwart, goes all decorum."

Such a law now lies listless on the statute books of Georgia; it is the measure enacted by the Legislature several sessions ago, providing certain sanitary and safety regulations for hotels. Its violation was made subject to punishment as for a misdemeanor but no effective means for its enforcement was established. It is much as if a game protection law had been passed without any provision for a game warden. As a result, it is largely a matter of individual choice with hotels as to whether or not they shall measure up to the requirements of the statute. The better class of such establishments do so but those for which the law was chiefly intended are left virtually without supervision.

This condition of affairs will remain unimproved until the office of State hotel and sanitary inspector is created and filled by a competent man. A bill to this end, introduced by Representative Stone, of Taliaferro, has been favorably reported by the House committee on hygiene and sanitation. Its purpose is so obviously sensible and fair that it should pass without difficulty or delay. There is no room for debate over the proposition that places in which public welfare is so vitally concerned as in hotels, restaurants and lodging houses should be sanitary and safe. But the present law on this subject amounts to little more than an abstract statement. It should be made concretely effective.

President Wilson, however, generally responds to the cry that he won't with the determination that he will.

The man who awhile back heeded the call of the land by this time has a fairly practical working knowledge of it.

The Journal's Letter Box

Atlanta Ga., July 25, 1913.

Editor The Journal:

So much has been said about providing cheaper text-books for the school children of Georgia that something should be done looking to that end.

But it would seem to be the part of prudence that the state incur no unnecessary expense.

If a committee were appointed to inquire diligently into this matter and report to the general assembly one year hence, the Georgia legislature could probably frame and pass a better law than would be possible at the present session.

It may be better to continue the present contracts with the publishing houses that now furnish our school books for one or two years, until a plan can be perfected which will, upon a permanent and safe basis, secure the object so much desired.

Cardinal Gibbons

So streng a hold has Cardinal Gibbons upon the confidence and affections of the American people, irrespective of creed, that they dislike to think of him as growing old; still upon this, his seventy-ninth birthday, they can offer their sincere congratulations that the years have not dimmed his spirit or impaired those faculties which constitute the real man. It is his definition of youththt if his soul be young, so also is he, and according to that Cardinal Gibbons is a young man in the prime of his regal powers. He has ruled his spiritual principality with firmness yet with gentleness, and a sweet humility that few of his subjects have equalled. More than that, he is an Abou Ben Adhem of his generation, loving his fellow men, and, next to God, loving his country and jealous of her best traditions and institutions. He has been a force for wide usefulness and a source of beneficent influence, during his long and busy life, irreproachable in all its relations, and wise in its dealings with the tens of thousands who have looked up to him for guidance and counsel. May he still for years to come continue to hold that primacy, literal as well as conferred, not only in his church in this country but also in the hearts of millions of American citizens.—Boston Transcript.

A Song from the New Laureate

(NOTE: The following poem, distinctive for its graceful craftsmanship and airy fancy, is by Dr. Robert Bridges, England's new poet laureate.)

I have loved flowers that fade,
Within whose magic tents
Rich hues have marriage made
With sweet unmemoried scents;
A honeymoon delight—
A joy of love at sight,
That ages in an hour—
My song be like a flower!

I have loved airs that die
Before their charm is writ
Upon a liquid sky
Trembling to welcome it.
Notes that, with pulse of fire,
Proclaim the spirit's desire,
Then die and are nowhere—
My song be like an air!

Die, song, die like a breath,
And wither like a bloom;
Fear not a flowery death,
Dread not an airy tomb!
Fly with delight, fly hence!
'Twas thin love's tender sense
To feast; now on thy bier
Beauty shall shed a tear.

That Pickwick Wine List

(The New York Times Review of Books.)

The Atlanta Journal has been moved, by the recent announcement in The New York Times of the discovery of twelve several drinks of alcoholic stimulant in sixty pages of "The Avenger," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, to analyze the alcoholic content of "Pickwick." In the fifty-seven chapters of that masterwork there are only seven, it seems, quite devoid of rum. The enemy which steals away one's brains is mentioned 249 times:

Nor is the variety less remarkable, than the volume of the Pickwickian sideboard, which offers, in addition to cold punch and hot gin, Dantzic spruce and pineapple rum "warm vanity," and "something short," such curious concoctions as "bishop" and "dog's nose," "drams a la Solomon," negus, and "old crusted Port." Pickwick presents, all told, sixty-two different kinds of drinks.

An examination, in this spirit, of most of the novels of Dickens, and some of Thackeray's especially "Pendennis" and "Philip," would produce equally astonishing results. Liquid flowed also through the stories of Charles Lever, Samuel Lover, Marryat, and many of their contemporaries. In comparison, the twelve drinks of six different kinds of liquor in Mr. Oppenheim's book seem moderation's self. The conclusion of the Atlanta critic is that "we abide in an age of buttermilk and grapejuice."

G. Washington and W. J. B.

(Kansas City Star.)

Mr. Bryan, by the way, is not the first "higher up" at the national capital to complain about the cost of living. If the Nebraska statesman is forced to it he may call upon some very eminent authority on the subject.

There was Mr. G. Washington, for instance. While the capital still was located in Philadelphia and Mr. Washington was occupying the executive mansion, wages $25,000 per year, no provision for "board and keep," he was once overheard to remark (to Mrs. Washington perhaps) according to no less accurate historian than Mr. John Spencer Bassett: "Why, the average citizen of Philadelphia, who gets as much as $2,500 a year, can live better than we live on $25,000."

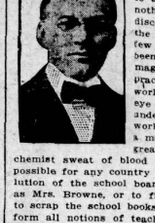
There was no chautauqua platform in those days, so the farmer from Fairview, Neb., may draw his own conclusion as to what the farmer from Mount Vernon, Va., would have done if there had been such a thing as a chautauqua at $250 each performance.

What Americans Believe

American: One who believes that George Washington never told a lie, that a dark cigar always a strong one, that Charles Klein is a great dramatist, that the night air is poisonous, that a horsehair put into a bottle of water will turn into a snake, that champagne is the best of all wines, that it snowed every Christmas down to fifteen years ago, that a bloodhound never makes a mistake, that the jokes in Punch are never funny, that the Mohammedans are heathens, that a sudden shock may cause the hair to turn gray overnight, that a cat has nine lives, that "The Holy City" is a musical classic, that Moses wrote the Pentateuch, that maternal longings cause birthmarks, that Chili is less civilized than Ohio, that preaching is a learned profession, that the Ibsen plays are obscene, that newspaper reporters carry notebooks, that whiskey is good for snakebite, that sugeons kill patients fo the sheer pleasure of it, that the music of Richard Wagner is all played fortissimo and by cornets, and that all women who smoke cigarettes go further.—Owen Hatteras in August Smart Set.

THE NEW RURAL SCHOOL

VI.—ITS FUTURE.
BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.



The relation of the experimental rural school at Rock Hill to the future of the rural schools of the country, and especially to those of the southern states, is that of the chemist's laboratory to the manufacturing plant. The chemist in a tiny room, has to all the ages but the slave of nothing that is past, makes a discovery that one might hide in the hollow of his hand. But a few years, and that discovery has been magnified, and not only magnified, but adapted to the practical ends of a work-a-day world, and is represented to the eye by acres of roofed buildings under which toil thousands of workmen, each of them doing as a matter of course and with the greatest ease what cost the chemist sweat of blood to do. It is manifestly impossible for any country school district by mere evolution of the school board to acquire a teacher such as Mrs. Browne, or to find sufficient public support to scrap the school books and desks and radically reform all notions of teaching school. It simply can't be done. Reforms, even the most radical, are not accomplished that way.

Rock Hill has merely showed what may be done. The shell of tradition is pipped. The impossible has been done and the heavens have not fallen. A standard has been raised and the event is in the hands of the future.

Therefore, it remains now to tell not of what has been done, but of what is planned to be done, of how the far-seeing men who have this problem near to their hearts are endeavoring to make use of this experiment to do good to the whole country.

• • •

It must be manifest even to the most casual reader that the activities of such a school as that at Rock Hill would require so much of a teacher's time in working with the younger children that it would be quite impossible for her to deal with the needs for older pils are all too rare. But it already has been demonstrated that the pupils will stay in the school if the school is made attractive—that much has been shown at Rock Hill.

The plan, therefore, is to use the more rational methods of instruction to bring the children up to the point where they will demand more, and then to furnish that additional instruction in school centers advantageously placed in the county. This will tend to fall in with the plans for consolidating school districts so that eventually the one-room, one-teacher school will be all but eliminated, or will survive only as a neighborhood center for the training of the young children.

Take one county in Kentucky, for instance, where a school center is being worked out. Here at hand was a three-teacher country school, working along conventional lines. It was a better school than the one-room school, but its excellencies were all those copied from a city school and it was making little or no attempt to make itself a live and vital factor in the community by relating its activities to the activities of the people—farming and stock raising.

Here is the plan of reform: The principal of the school is a teacher of agriculture, for agriculture is the main thing. Now as the ordinary teacher doesn't know much about that science it is necessary, first, to teach the teacher. So the demonstration farm agent is called into willing co-operation, and the state school of agriculture helps. Each boy in school goes into a corn club, and each has his club acre at home and his plot in the school demonstration farm. Each girl joins the canning club or the chicken club, and in this way home life and school life are intimately related, and it is demonstrated daily that an education has as much to do with growing corn or selling eggs as it has to do with grammar or the Rule of Three. And at the same time this principal takes charge of the more bookish studies of the advanced pupils.

The second teacher, a woman, has charge of the canning clubs and the poultry clubs, of the instruction in domestic science, and together with the principal, teaches her charges not only how to can tomatoes, but how to sell them, not only how to grow chickens, but how to market eggs.

The other teacher, also a woman, has charge of the younger children and will attempt as rapidly as may be, to give her little ones the introduction to a true education that comes from relating activities to the business of learning—her feet being guided by the lamp lighted at Rock Hill.

Eventually this school would grow until it would become a county center. The principal of this school would supervise the two-room and one-room schools throughout the county and would unify the spirit and, therefore, oppose the diffusion of effort that has brought the present system of rural schools to grief.

This will lead, it is the lively hope of those who are determined to bring the rural schools in their field up to the highest possible efficiency, to the establishment in every county of an educational center, a county school which would itself train the older pupils from all sections of the country and at the same time supervise and direct all the minor schools.

It may seem a long way off, but plans are already made for such a school. It will have, according to the present outline, no less than eight teachers, and would demand an equipment of no less than eight buildings. The principal would be a master of plant life—for agriculture is the basis of all rural life. Farming, forestry, fruit culture and gardening would be in his province. One associate would teach animal life—live stock, dairying, poultry, insects, bee culture etc. Another would teach human life—physiology, hygiene sanitation, nutrition and food values, and psychology.

Another would teach human industry, beginning with drawing and hand work in the carpenter shop and working up through the metals to farm manufactures, thence naturally to industrial and social history of the world in general and of Europe and America in particular.

• • •

One associate would devote her energies to instruction in the household arts, drawing, sewing, weaving, basketry and music. The teacher of chemistry would give instruction in mathematics, in physics and in cooking. The teacher of language would teach the use of speech and letters in such a way as to make of every pupil a book lover. And, of course, there would be the children's teacher who would give the little ones a natural and normal introduction to this practical system of education. It is on her work, as demonstrated at Rock Hill, that the whole superstructure is reared.

The chief building would be the Home, the children's house, and it would be a model home, its rooms devoted to such uses as were those at Rock Hill. Another building would be the farm house with a laboratory each for the class in plant life and animal life, for the class in chemistry and for the plant breeding equipment. A workshop would be necessary for the industrial classes. A book house—how much better these two words than "library"—would serve also for the auditorium and for the social life of the school. A poultry house and barn would be necessary, of course, and then there would be two boarding homes, one for boys and one for girls.

LADIES KNOCKED DOWN BY DELIVERY WAGON

Mrs. John W. Dickson and Mrs. E. L. Scoville Hurt in Inman Park

Mrs. John W. Dickerson, of 21 Wavcrly way, Inman Park, was seriously hurt and Mrs. E. L. Scoville, of 9 Wavcrly way, was painfully injured when both were knocked down by a speeding delivery wagon.

The accident occurred on Elizabeth street near the corner of DeKalb avenue about 8 o'clock Saturday night.

The two ladies were walking across Elizabeth street together when a delivery wagon drawn by a mule, turned the corner at a rapid pace. The negro was whipping the mule, with apparently little thought as to where the animal was taking him. The ladies tried to jump out of the way, but the wheels of the wagon caught them both and knocked them to the pavement. Mrs. Dickerson was badly injured, receiving two long gashes about the head. Mrs. Scoville suffered bruises about the arms and shoulders, but otherwise was uninjured.

The two ladies were carried into the residence at A-62 Elizabeth street, where they remained until a physician, who carried them to their residences in his automobile, arrived.

A number of small boys saw the accident, and they chased the delivery wagon, which did not stop. The boys were outdistanced and lost trace of the wagon after a few blocks.

The police have a description of the driver and are looking for him.

1912 CLASS OF BOYS' HI HAS TIME AT ANSLEY

Annual Banquet Is Held at the New Hotel Ansley

A most enjoyable event of yesterday evening was the second annual banquet of the Boys' High school class of 1912 at the new Hotel Ansley.

Stories of their school days and of accomplishments during the past year, both in the business ranks and at college, featured the occasion. This class, the first to be graduated under the four-year course installed several years ago, has reason to be proud of itself and its ambitions to establish a higher record for efficiency than any of the other grads of former days.

The dinner was well served, the "eats" were good and all expressed themselves as having spent a most enjoyable evening.

CAPT. CHARLES NORRELL DIES ON SATURDAY

Captain Charles Martin Norrell, aged seventy-five years, a veteran of the Mexican and the Civil wars, and for many years a citizen of Conyers, died suddenly at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. F. R. Jablonski, 28 Fortress avenue, at 1:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Captain Norrell was in Atlanta on a special visit to his daughter, and death came suddenly as the result of a stroke of paralysis. The body has been removed to the chapel of the F. J. Bloomfield company, where it will be held until the arrival from Conyers of M. B. Norrell, son of the deceased.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY TO GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

The Woman's Missionary society of the Gordon street Methodist church has issued invitations to the public to attend "A Missionary Spectacle" to be held Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at the church. Beginning at 7 o'clock a special program will be given by the Epworth league.

Skidding Auto Hits Tree

The automobile of J. H. Rousey, with Mr. Rousey at the wheel, skidded against a tree and was damaged, at the corner of Whitehall and Hood streets Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Two other men were in the car. No one was hurt.

THOUGHT HE WAS IN ANOTHER MAN'S OFFICE

Tacco Made an Invasion Into Business Office and Made Great Changes

"I'll be hanged if this is my office. Yes, this is the right floor and my key unlocked the door. But look at the furniture. It's all spank new. My furniture was all old and nobody could have placed an order for new equipment."

Such were the rantings of an Atlanta business man who had just returned from a vacation.

Somebody had revolutionized his office in appearance. The old furniture had been turned into new. Soon a business associate came in and offered an explanation. This Tacco that has proven so popular in Atlanta and whose popularity is increasing with great rapidity had visited this business man's office. With Tacco's appearance and with but little assistance from the business man's co-worker, the office furniture was transformed from the old dilapidated appearance to that of the really new and prosperous look.

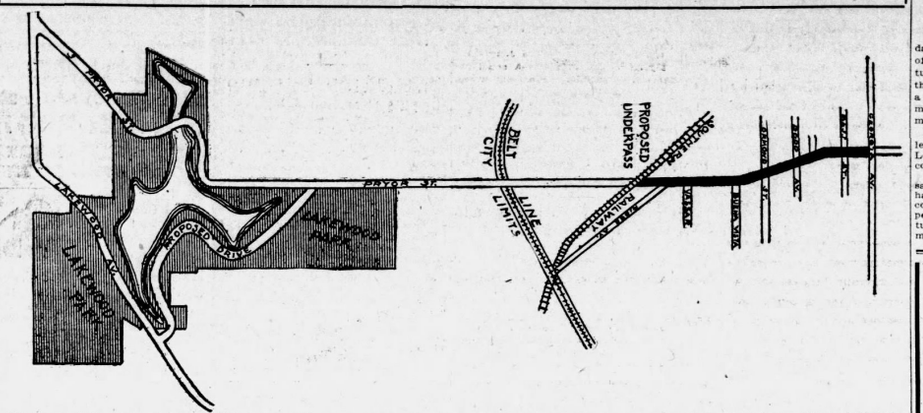
This Tacco is some wonder, declared the business man. That night Tacco spent the night at the home of the business man. Tacco slept on the mantel, but next day was found on every piece of furniture in the house. Tacco's only vocation and purpose in life is to turn old furniture into new. Tacco is a varnish that is simply applied with a piece of cheese cloth.—(Advt.)

Easy To Get Rid of Corns.

When you know HOW. But you can't do it by peeling, paring, gouging or slicing at them. These barbarous methods are cruelly painful and sertously dangerous, for frequently the sore bleeds and then there is always the possibility of blood poisoning. Furthermore, these methods do not remove the corn completely, for the root usually lives deep into the toe to the bone.

Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid is a scientific formula from our own laboratory, which we have thoroughly tested and guarantee to be successful with any corn, whether hard or soft, and no matter how stubborn or how deep the growth. It removes the corn completely and positively without pain or danger. The first application instantly stops the corn from hurting you. Use tonight and end your agony. 20c, by mail 22c.—(Advt.)

DIAGRAM SHOWING PROPOSED EXTENSION OF SOUTH PRYOR ST. TO LAKEWOOD



The proposed improvement to South Pryor street will bring great development to a large portion of the south side section other than to this immediate street, so it is claimed by hose behind the movement.

Lakewood park property, that magnificent tract belonging to the city, will reap a large part of this benefit, and will be brought within a fifteen minutes' drive from the center of the city, if the plans outlined are carried out.

For two or three years the property owners on South Pryor street have been urging a new pavement for this street from Georgia avenue to Ridge avenue. It has now a rough Belgian block pavement. It is being planned to widen, regrade and repave with a smooth pavement. The city engineering department has prepared a profile showing a cut of about three feet at Bass street and a fill of three feet at Dodd avenue. The south side improvement committee, at its meeting last Thursday night, approved this profile. Nearly all the property owners, it is said, have signed waiver cards granting two feet of ground for widening purposes, and when the matter is finally shaped up the city and county are going to be urged to do the work.

In the meantime the committee is working through the city and county for an underpass at the Southern railroad. Those behind the movement believe all this work can be accomplished next year.

PROFILE ON EXHIBIT.

The new profile is on exhibition in the windows of the McCord grocery, corner Georgia avenue and Pryor street. The committee meets there every Thursday night, and all interested citizens are invited to meet with them.

As is shown in the drawing, South Pryor street leads directly by the Lakewood property, but the road is not paved, and needs other improvements. It is understood the county officials have agreed that when South Pryor is put in good condition, with an underpass at the railroad, they will continue a splendid paved road on and beyond the Lakewood property, running into Lakewood avenue.

In addition the county commissioners have already discussed, and it is believed they will construct, a sixty-foot driveway following the water's edge around the north end of the lake. This would make a beautiful and continuous drive completely around the lake.

South side citizens generally are very much interested in these proposed improvements, and are organizing solidly to urge them, but just at present are centering their efforts on the improvement between Georgia avenue and Ridge avenue and on the underpass at the Southern railroad.

Chief to Recommend Women Bluecoats for Atlanta Police Dept.

Police Chief Beavers is collecting data from other cities on the subject of police women, and in the near future will lay his information before the board of police commissioners with a recommendation that police women be made a feature of the Atlanta department, beginning with three or four.

The chief on Saturday received a letter from Police Chief Sebastian, of Los Angeles, Cal., the first city in the country to employ police women.

In this letter the Los Angeles chief says he has three women officers who have given good service and are now considered a necessity. They have supervision over dance halls, motion puture theaters and other places where men and women congregate.

Negro Man Serves Five Hours in Cell As Proxy for Wife

Payton Jones, colored, of 12 Myrtle street, spent five hours in jail Saturday as proxy for his wife, Mollie, who was unable to appear for trial on account of illness.

Mollie was involved in an altercation with Missouri Scruggs, another negress. Several times a hearing of her case was postponed because she was unable to come to court. Saturday Payton was before Judge Broyles to announce that he would accept the punishment due his wife.

After hearing the evidence of several witnesses the recorder fined Molly protem ten dollars and costs. Payton had only eight dollars and he had to stay in jail until friends raised the balance.

SCHOOL-BOOK PRICES DISCUSSED BY PROFESSOR HAYCOOD S. BOWDEN

BLAKELY, Ga., July 22, 1913.

Editor The Journal: Prof. McNair, of Macon, makes a feeble effort and a desperate argument to discredit Representative McCrory's stand in the present general assembly for cheaper and better common school text books.

Prof. McNair bumps his knows (?) on the position that he takes that the state of Georgia has not a printery or educators competent to turn out a product worthy of patronage. Or does the old-time educator prefer that the state of Georgia continue to be a party to a contract that will take 100 to 200 per cent profit from an innocent school child endeavoring to get an education, perhaps an orphan or the one of several children of a hard worked laborer, and place this hard-earned money in the hands of fat foreign book companies by the due process of law?

Can a man who has taught "a great number of years" in Georgia public schools be so prejudiced and ungrateful grateful?

Does he really want to see the big profits continue to go to New York publishing houses rather than be left in the businesses of Georgia printers and the homes of country school children? Does he select for his own use foreign made books rather than those of Georgia authors and publishers? Are Georso far behind their trade and calling that their productions are not worthy of the Georgia school child's patronage?

The Canadian books that are offered as examples of what can be done are not as Prof. McNair would have readers believe, for he says that Georgians would not use them. If the "dependency of a monarchy" can furnish the state of Georgia at the university such men as Dr. Soule, of the agricultural college, the time is fully ripe for taking on a few Ontario stunts in school book making. A school grammar or reader would be none the worse if a few pages of advertising were in the back. It would be a good proposition for the state of Georgia to save a few thousand dollars or reduce the cost of publication by selling a few pages of each book to legitimate advertisers when she begins the printing of her own common school text books. The federal government looks after its own printing and binding.

The state of Georgia publishes her own code and court decisions and sells them to lawyers six to eight dollars cheaper than when individuals prepared them. Should the state treat her attorneys better than her school children? What is good for the king is wholesome for his subject. The great mass of school children comes from homes of the working people. The expense of purchasing school supplies weighs heavily upon the father, widow or guardian of a large household of healthy growing children. One of the main reasons why so many pupils never enter the high schools is that the course of books cost from $5 to $15 at the beginning. If some states and municipal schools see the need of free textbooks certainly the broadminded and the liberal can at least comprehend the necessity of this state publishing them at cost.

The common school texts sold in this state during the present five-year contract amounts to $978,525, an average of $195,705 per year. There are twenty-one texts in the free school course of seven grades. We take the present text on civil government to approximate the cost and profit of these books. The American Book company, of New York, has the contract at fifty-four cents.

An Atlanta printing company in a letter to the writer last January closed a contract to publish a similar book in size, binding and paper for twelve and one-half cents a copy. The plates of the same cost the writer $1.10 per page, totaling an outlay of $250 for plates and cuts. Some twenty thousand copies of civil government of different publishers were used in the state last year. At the printing and binding cost of 12 1-2 cents, the sum is $2,500. Sell the book at 15 cents with a profit of 2 1-2 cents and the state would make $500, from which $250 could be taken to pay for plates and cuts. The other $250 could be used in paying for the copyright and illustrations. The second year the state owning the plates would net a profit of $500, which could be used for employing experts and buying copyrights. Five hundred dollars on one book would be $10,500 on the whole course which would handsomely pay the office expenses of maintaining the publishing department. Thus what is true of one common school text book is true to all in proportion to number of pages and size. Compare a book costing 15 cents with one costing 54 cents and there is a saving of 39 cents to every seventh grade school boy and girl in the state of Georgia. Thirty-nine cents times 20,000 copies means a saving of $7,800 a year on civil government alone. A five-year contract means a profit of $39,000 on this text alone. There are twenty-one texts in the course, making a profit in all of $819,000.

Can Prof. McNair dispute these facts? Schley county is a member of the Georgia aggregation and suffers in proportion to Bibb county. The money of a Schley county farmer boy is as hard to earn and should buy as much as anybody's money. Twenty-five cents is 25 cents whether in the pocket of an Ellaville lad or Macon Fourth street alley urchin.

Switzerland, one of the small countries of Europe, publishes her own school books to a happy advantage. This small European country appropriates three times as much money for education as Georgia, notwithstanding the area and population is nearly the same. If the state publication of school books in Switzerland is profitable to the people and satisfactory to the teachers, certainly Georgia, the Empire State of the South, should profit by the experience of that mountainous democracy.

Arizona, one of the smallest states of the middle west, furnishes a striking illustration. The United States commissioner of education, Dr. Claxton, says this on page 73 of 1912 report:

"In a few concise paragraphs the whole knotty problem of text-book supply is solved at a stroke. The simplicity of the thing is such that one wonders after it is done why it had never been done before. The state board of education adopts a series of books for the entire state and buys them; the county superintendent orders from the board what his estimates show that his county will need, and he supplies the district trustees, who in turn supply the pupils. Payment is made from the state school fund before apportionment, and the books remain the property of the state. What could be more simple? There is no question of prices to be paid by districts or pupils, no requirements for supply depots, no need of stern penalties for failure to use adopted books, no difficulty in enforcing the state course of study—none of these complications which produce almost endless chapters of laws every year."

Solomon said go to the ant thou sluggard, and learn of its ways and be wise. Is it possible that one of the smallest states of the United States and one of the smallest nations of the world leads the way in solving educational problems? Georgians should not be in the rear on this all important question. Woeful waste makes woeful want. Keep the savings at home. Manufacture and produce at the smallest possible cost. Diffuse and educate the masses. Raise the standard of citizenship. Equalize opportunities.

Yours truly,
H. S. BOWDEN.

TOWERMAN'S QUICK WORK SAVES SCORES OF LIVES

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 26.—Scores of lives were saved today when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio river special on the Pennsylvania railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at a high rate of speed. The locomotive was overturned but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

"WHAT A LIAR," SAYS BLEASE OF EDITOR

South Carolina Executive Replies to Article in Army and Navy Journal

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
COLUMBIA, S. C., July 26.—Governor Blease made a vitriolic attack on the Army and Navy Journal today in a letter to the editor of that paper replying to an article which stated that the people of South Carolina had not given the governor support in his recent controversy with Secretary of War Garrison.

The governor recites the paper that the three colonels and the brigadier general approved of his course in printed resolutions, and tells the editors "What a liar you are!"

He says the military men are delighted with his action, and he gained his point in not having the eleven companies muster out.

"Please publish this letter to show to the people what a liar you are," concludes the governor's letter.

Acting Secretary of War Breckinridge today wrote Governor Blease that it was solely within the power of the governor to say whether or not the Bamberg, Barnwell and Orongeburg military companies, sent home from the Third regiment because they did not have the required minimum personnel, could encamp with the Second regiment here next week. The governor immediately advised the companies that he would issue orders permitting them to do so if they expressed such a desire.

WOMAN THOUGHT SLAIN NOW BELIEVED SUICIDE

Chicago Police Discover Letters Near Lake Where Body Was Found

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, July 26.—Letters found in a clump of bushes near where the body of a young woman was recovered from Lake Michigan last night, convinced the police tonight that she had committed suicide because of her failure to obtain employment.

The victim was supposed to be Miss E. Lee, of Elmo, Wis., although she has not been positively identified. The pistol which brought her death was found on the beach. The weapon was traced and found to have been sold here Wednesday to a Miss Lee, who gave her residence as Elmo.

The two letters which explained the woman had been out of employment and had been unable to procure work, bore no wording to indicate the city from which they had been sent. The coroner's inquest was continued until Thursday to allow police to make further investigation.

HERE'S WHAT TIFTON'S PROPOSING SOON TO DO

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
TIFTON, Ga., July 26.—Among the things which the Tifton chamber of commerce proposes to put through during the remainder of the summer are:

Begin a series of monthly farmers' meetings.

Take steps to aid the farmers in marketing their products.

Provide facilities for handling the meat, grain and like products of the farmers, for which there is not a steady and ready market.

Begin a campaign for securing a new union passenger station.

Get out a small booklet advertising Tifton and Tift county.

And co-operate with the board of county commissioners in seeing that all public highways leading to Tifton are in first class shape for the hauling of cotton and like products to market.

Crow Creek Dam

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 26.—The site of the Crow creek dam, to be constructed by the government, across the Tennessee river at a point about thirty miles below the lock and dam at Hales-bar will be determined Monday at a meeting of government engineers of this district to be held in the office of Captain R. C. Moore, engineer in charge of the Tennessee river here. Those who will be present, besides Captain Moore are J. H. Walker, Nashville; J. S. Butler, Nashville; W. S. Winn, Sheffield and C. E. Bright, Riverton.

Sentenced to Death

(By Associated Press.)
DENVER, Colo., July 26.—Harold F. Henwood today was sentenced to death within the week of October 24 for the murder of George E. Copeland, for which he was recently convicted after his second trial. The judge, however, recommended that the governor commute the sentence to life imprisonment.

Some Notes of the Forest

The Balkan war has brought about a rise in certain lumber prices in Europe because of the big demand for wood for ammunition boxes.

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

Coroner Orders Grave Opened to Probe a Crime and Finds Cat

DALTON, Ga., July 26.—To a defunct Catoosa county cat has come the distinction of having an "inquest" held over its body, according to a story which reaches here from Ringgold and over which people of the county north of here are enjoying a hearty laugh.

The inquest, however, considerably relieved the aroused feelings of the good people of the county, and came after the officers had been fairly besieged with requests that a "crime" be uncovered and the "criminals" punished.

The county was shocked this week when it was broadcasted that some farmers had pulled from the creek the lifeless body of a child and had buried it without notifying anyone.

When the officers went to investigate, they had little trouble in locating the grave, and it was decided to exhume the body and hold an inquest. Among the officers were the ordinary, sheriff and justice of the peace.

Care was exercised in opening the grave, for it was decreed that nothing be destroyed which might in any way disclose the identity of the "murderers."

An old sack, used as the "winding sheet," was pulled from the grave, and when the body was finally revealed it was found to be that of a cat.

The officers who conducted the investigation are taking the grins of their friends with the best of grace.

GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA SUES N. O. DAILY STATES

Litigation Grows Out of Grand Rapids Land Deal—$100,000 Damages Asked

(By Associated Press.)
NEW ORLEANS, July 26.—Governor L. E. Hall today brought suit for $100,000 damages against the Daily States, J. Walker Ross and Robert Ewing, managing editor and publisher, respectively, of the States.

The suit is based upon statements published in the States concerning a deal whereby the Tensas levee board, a state institution, sold 900,000 acres of land to a Grand Rapids, Mich., company.

The deal was made in 1898, and some time later as suit was brought by the attorney general charging irregularities in the transaction. The federal court of appeals handed down a decision July 11 ordering a retrial of the case, and since then the matter has been commented upon generally by the papers over the state.

LOWNDES COUNTY SHOWS BIG PROPERTY INCREASE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
VALDOSTA, Ga., July 26.—The property values of Lowndes county during the present year have shown an increase of $259,296. Tax Receiver Silas Bacon has figured his returns. The increase is from each district in the county and embraces almost all kinds of property.

The total values of the county for the present year are $8,228,257, against $7,963,961 for last year. If the bill creating tax assessors becomes a law it is more than probable that Lowndes county values will go above $10,000,000 next year. The tax receiver's books show that returns in this county are given in at ridiculously low figures when compared with what the same returns can be sold for.

Other kinds of property also are given in at prices far below what it can be bought for.

I. B. HALL MAKES LAST FIGHT TO SAVE HIS LIFE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
TIFTON, Ga., July 26.—I. B. Hall, who has been sentenced to hang August 22, has retained Attorney John R. Cooper, of Macon, to represent him in his petition for new trial which will be heard before Judge W. E. Thomas, in Valdosta, Saturday, August 2.

Hall remains optimistic over the final outcome of his case. In fact, he seems to have little doubt that a decision will finally be reached in his favor. While Hall is apparently unconcerned, his immediate relatives are much concerned.

Pruritis a Severe Form of Eczema

A Method of Home Treatment that is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you S. S. S. is the large profit made on something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVIS FOR U. S. SOLICITOR GENERAL

Has Been Nominated by President Wilson—Congressman and Prominent Lawyer

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 26.—John William Davis, of Clarksburg, W. Va., representative of the First West Virginia congressional district, was nominated today by President Wilson to be solicitor general of the United States. Mr. Davis was the choice of Attorney General McReynolds from a long list of prominent lawyers to fill the important $10,000 post. He will be second ranking legal officer of the country and the government's representative before the supreme court of the United States.

Mr. Davis, who is forty years old, has had a prominent legal career. He is serving his second term in congress, having entered that body in 1911, and is a member of the house judiciary committee. He formerly was assistant professor of law at Washington and Lee university, member of the house of delegates of West Virginia, where he was chairman of the judiciary committee, and president of the West Virginia Bar association. The position has been vacant since the resignation of John Marshall Bullitt, of Louisville, Ky., several months ago. James A. Fowler, who was assistant to the attorney general, acted as solicitor general during the interim.

FEW TYPHOID CASES ARE FOUND IN ROME

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
ROME, Ga., July 26.—An investigation by the city physician and the sanitary inspector discloses the fact that there was an epidemic of typhoid in the fourth ward, forty or fifty cases in all, had caused uneasiness among the people.

Every endeavor is being made to enforce the sanitary ordinances and the health of the city is unusually good this summer.

SIX-YEAR-OLD CHILD IS KILLED ACCIDENTALLY

TAMPA, Fla., July 26.—A revolver which was hanging behind a picture on the wall of a room at the home of Giuseppe Gastano, accidentally exploded this afternoon and killed six-year-old Rosia Gastano. With a playmate the child had been swinging the picture by pushing it with a broom. The picture and the gun came down from the wall and the revolver exploded as it struck the floor, the ball entering the little girl's brain.

Danger of Forest Fires

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 26.—Danger of forest fires in California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho is increasing, according to reports received here from the district foresters. The fact that the summer camping season in California is at its height adds to the danger. This season so far has seen a number of small fires but no big ones.

Dynamite Cap: Small Boy and a Hammer; Explosion. Surgeon

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
DALTON, Ga., July 26.—A small negro boy, a dynamite cap, a hammer and a nail, coupled with an earnest desire on the boy's part to possess a "whistle"—a surgical operation was needed, and the boy is now without the services of a thumb and two fingers.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, July 26.—Nominations of James Gerard, of New York for ambassador to Germany; Frederick C. Penfield, of Pennsylvania, for ambassador to Austria, and Charles S. Hartman, of Montana, for minister to Ecuador, will be reported favorably by the senate foreign relations committee.

GEORGIA FARMER KILLED BY AUTO IN TEXAS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
DALTON, Ga., July 26.—The body of H. J. Cucksee, a farmer ,of Texas, who moved from this county in 1902, was brought here and taken to Sumach for interment. Mr. Cucksee lost his life near Hereford, Tex., when he was struck by an automobile as he was crossing a road out from Hereford. He had an extensive friendship here. He is survived by three sisters and two brothers.

Special School Prize

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
DALTON, Ga., July 26.—Desiring to see Whitfield county win the distinction shared by about three counties in the state in having a "model school," Buell Stark has offered a prize of $10 to the first teacher who puts a school in that select class.

SON SLAYS FATHER AND THEN SURRENDERS SELF

Jim Shellnut Is Slain After Dispute Over Son Attending Family Reunion

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
FRANKLIN, Ga., July 26.—Jim Shellnut, a farmer living seven miles north of here, was shot and instantly killed by a son late this afternoon following an argument in a blacksmith shop as to whether or not the boy should attend a family reunion.

According to reports from the scene of the tragedy the father became angered at the boy's determination to carry his point and threatened him with a pistal. The son took flight and sought refuge with other members of the family.

Shellnut, it is reported, followed and chased all of them around the house several times. The boy finally succeeded in getting into the house where he procured a shotgun. He then went to a window and emptied both barrels of the gun into his father, killing him instantly.

Young Shellnut then went to Franklin and surrendered and is now incarcerated in the Heard county jail.

DALTON FIREMEN ON OUTING TO BEACH

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
DALTON, Ga., July 26.—A majority of the members of the Dalton fire department will leave here over the Southern road on August 9, for a ten-days' outing at St. Simons island. The road has made a special rate for the firemen who will go in a private car.

"You really ride on Goodrich Tires"

You have seen the above headline in our magazine advertising, with the picture of people who forget they are in an automobile because of the supreme service they are getting from their Goodrich tires.

As a motorist you know the vast importance of your tires to your car.

Also you know their vast importance to yourself—and you should know the service that Goodrich Tires give.

Your car does not render maximum value unless it is equipped with tires that give you the greatest service—Goodrich Tires.

The Goodrich principle of Unit Molding — which embodies forty-three years' knowledge of rubber and experience in rubber manufacturing—is one of the reasons why Goodrich Tires give you such long, uniform, satisfactory wear.

It is that principle which enables us to say of Goodrich Tires that they are "Best in the Long Run." Day in and day out, summer or winter, rain, snow or sun, Goodrich Tires are the economical tires for you.

In every Goodrich Tire the different layers of fine fabric, and pure rubber, from the sturdy backbone of the tire to the thick, tough, Goodrich tread, are literally molded into a single piece — a live, resilient, road-resisting unit, from which the tread does not strip, nor do the layers separate, because the whole tire is all one.

No matter what car you buy or own you can have it equipped with Goodrich Tires if you simply specify them.

Your dealer is ready to supply you with whatever style of Goodrich Tire is best for your car, whether it is gas or electric. We will send you free our set of folders giving valuable information as to how to get the most and best service from your tires.

SENATOR SWEAT'S PLAN TO EXTEND STATE ROAD

Proposes St. Marys as Coast Terminus, and Commission to Investigate

Among the many plans that have been advanced for the disposition of the lease of the Western and Atlantic railroad or its extension to the sea, is a joint resolution introduced in the senate June 27 by Senator J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth district.

The resolution, which seeks the concurrence of the house of representatives, provides for the appointment of a commission of private citizens to investigate and report upon the extension of the road to the sea and the re-leasing of it.

This resolution is in effect somewhat the same as the house resolution of Representative W. T. Paulk, of Ben Hill which provides for a commission to investigate the advisability of linking the state's property to the sea through the purchase of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlanta railroad, recently ordered sold under foreclosure proceedings.

THE SWEAT RESOLUTION.

Senator Sweat's proposition, which is self explanatory, follows:

"A joint resolution to provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report upon the extension of the Western and Atlantic railroad by the state and the re-lease of same, by bill or otherwise, and for other purposes.

"Whereas, The state of Georgia now owns the Western and Atlantic railroad extending from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Atlanta, Ga., which is under lease to the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad company for a term to expire in the year 1919; and

"Whereas, The Southern Railway company is the owner of a line of railroad extending from Atlanta to Fort Valley, which it is understood said company would dispose of; and

"Whereas, The Atlantic, Waycross and Northern Railroad company is the owner, and which it is also understood said company would dispose of, of extensive terminal facilities at the port of St. Marys, claimed to be among the best deep water ports on the south Atlantic, with a line of railroad extending from said port of St. Marys to Kingsland, and a route surveyed and located from thence to Waycross, and on to Fort Valley, the same being what is known as the 'Ridge Route,' where the conditions are such as to render the cost of railroad construction unusually cheap; and

"Whereas, It is only a short distance from said port of St. Marys to Jacksonville, Fla., the railroad center and gateway of the state of Florida; and

"Whereas, It is claimed and believed that with the state's railroad so extended as that said railroad would constitute a continuous grand trunk line from Chattanooga, Tenn., to Atlanta, Ga., and thence to Fort Valley, and on to the port of St. Marys, via Waycross and from said port of St. Marys to the city of Jacksonville, Fla., being operated under the control and direction of the state would tend to fix and establish reduced rates for freight and passenger traffic, thereby benefiting the public at large, and especially all the people of the state; or, if leased would yield the state an immense revenue sufficient to largely relieve the people of the state from the burdens of taxation; therefore

COMMISSION OF FIVE.

"Be it resolved, by the senate and the house of representatives concurring, That a commission consisting of five citizens of this state, to be selected and appointed by his excellency, the governor of this state, two of whom shall be expert railroad builders, one a lawyer, and the other two practical business men, shall investigate and ascertain upon what terms the state can acquire the line of railroad aforesaid from the Southern Railway company, extending from Atlanta to Fort Valley, and also upon what terms the state can acquire all the terminal facilities at the port of St. Marys belonging to the Atlantic, Waycross and Northern Railroad company, and its line of railroad aforesaid extending from said port of St. Marys to Kingsland; and also to ascertain the probable cost for which the state, with the use of a portion of its felony convicts, could construct the said line of railroad from Kingsland, through Waycross, to Fort Valley aforesaid, and also to ascertain the probable cost of constructing and extending the said railroad from the port of St. Marys to Jacksonville, Fla., and what terminal facilities, if any, the state could procure at said city; and also what improvements, if any, in the depot facilities of said Western and Atlantic railroad should be made at Chattanooga, and also at Atlanta, and whether or not the state should dispose of any portion of the land owned by it in connection therewith at either of said places, and if so, for what purpose and upon what terms an advantageous disposition could be made of same.

"Resolved further, That said commission shall also investigate and report upon what terms the said Western and Atlantic railroad, the Northern Railroad to be extended or not, should be released by the state upon the expiration of the present lease.

EXAMINE THE ROAD.

"Resolved further, That said commission shall be continued until the session of the legislature in 1914, and in the meantime that they be authorized to make at least one trip over the entire line of railroad, including that portion as proposed to be extended and completed, and also to hold meetings from time to time and at such places as may be deemed best, not to exceed altogether, ten (10) days, and that said commission be authorized to employ a stenographer, subpoena witnesses and take evidence.

"Be it further resolved, That the members of said commission shall be entitled to the per diem paid members of the general assembly of the state for the time required in making the trip aforesaid, together with the ten (10) days, or such portion thereof as may be required, in holding the meetings and taking evidence as aforesaid, and that the expense of the stenographer shall be paid by the state upon such terms as may be fixed by the said commission.

"And be it further resolved, That said commission be authorized, empowered and required to make a full and complete report of all its acts, doings and findings to his excellency, the governor, at least thirty days prior to the next session of the general assembly to be held in 1914, and also to recommend in connection therewith the passage of such bill or bills as may be agreed upon by said commission, the same to be transmitted by the governor to said session of the general assembly immediately upon its being convened in said session of 1914."

EXERCISE AS BEST CURE FOR ALL THE STOMACH'S ILLS

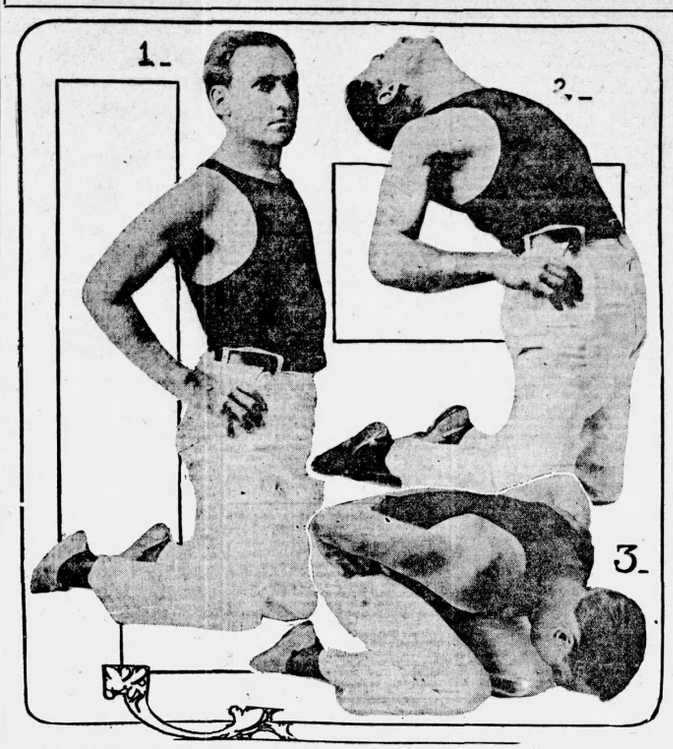

Illustration by Prof. Magee of exercises for correcting weakness of the stomach.

BY PROF. F. B. MAGEE, PHYSICAL CULTURIST.

If there is one universal ailment it is indigestion, mal-assimilation, stomach trouble under various names. And, if there is one sickness that yields to exercise, it is affection of the stomach.

My theory is that the way to strengthen any vital organ is by building up the external muscles; for, by so doing, you quicken the circulation, throw off old tissues, and strengthen the system.

Lets start with exercises for the stomach, that much used and always abused part of the body. Upon the digestion depends the condition of most if not all of the body. A sound stomach means good health and a clear head. Then, whey not adopt a simple course of exercise that will do much toward curing you of dyspeptic ailments?

Take a position with the hands on the hips, as shown in the illustration. Bend the body forward until the head is close to the knees, and at the same time sit on the heels, if possible. Then bend the body backward as far as possible. Keep up these movements for sixteen times.

Now, take the position with which you started, let the hands drop down at the side, raise the arms horizontally and inhale. Let the arms drop down and exhale. Repeat this exercise at least five times. Next, repeat the first exercise sixteen times.

TAKES THREE POLICEMEN TO CONQUER ONE BLACK

It took the combined strength of three policemen to drag Charley Allen, alias "Slick," to jail Saturday evening. Charley and another negro were fighting at the corner of Decatur and Butler streets, a few feet away from police station. The other negro got away.

Officer Paine struggled with Charley, who had a big knife open in his hand. Officer Askew and another policeman joined in, and Charley, somewhat damaged, was registered at headquarters and then removed to Grady hospital to get patched.

FINDS DAUGHTER AFTER CHASE ACROSS CONTINENT

Mrs. Lily Lamar Martin Traces Husband and Child From Georgia to Pacific

Word comes from California that Mrs. Lily Lamar Martin, formerly of Atlanta, has located her little daughter, Sarah Alice, in Los Angeles, after a search of two years, which led the mother almost across the continent.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamar were divorced in the Fulton county courts in 1911, and the child was placed in a local orphans' asylum. Later the little girl was given into the custody of her grandfather, F. L. Pye, when the father took out a writ of habeas corpus and left for the west with his daughter.

Mrs. Martin trailed the two through seven states, finding them in Los Angeles this week. A writ of habeas corpus has again been sworn out and the other and father will appear in a California court Monday to contest the child's possession.

CHANGES WILL BE MADE IN NICARAGUAN TREATY

United States Has No Desire to Prevent Central American Union

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Important modifications are to be made in the proposed treaty with Nicaragua by which the United States would establish a protectorate over the southern republic. It has been discovered that by the terms of the agreement originally outlined by Secretary Bryan, Nicaragua would have been prevented from ever joining with other republics to form one Central American union.

This was not contemplated by the administration when the treaty was proposed, and the suggestion has created suspicion among other Central American countries. At a conference today between Secretary Bryan and members of the senate foreign relations committee, it was agreed that the original draft of the treaty should be changed and definite statements be included in the compact, providing that it should not stand in the way of any future action Nicargua might decide to take toward joining a Central American commission.

GOVERNMENT'S ATTITUDE.

Secretary Bryan assured the commission today that the government is making no direct proposals to other Central American countries for similar treaties. The Nicaraguan situation is peculiar, he said, because that country proposed the negotiations and asked for the establishment of the American protectorate. In the case of other countries the United States is "holding itself open" to treat with them, if the suggestion comes from their governments. The United States will not adopt an aggressive attitude, Secretary Bryan said, in attempting to negotiate any additional treaties.

The unexpected turn given to the Nicaraguan matter resulted from the fact that Secretary Bryan had incorporated in the treaty the general terms o fthe so-caled Platt amendment relating to Cuba.

TERMS OF TREATY.

Among other things, the treaty would stipulate:

"That the government of Nicaragua shall never enter into any treaty or other compact with any foreign power or powers which will impair or tend to impair the independence of Nicaragua."

Another section would provide:

"That the government of Nicaragua consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Nicaraguan independence."

The United States has no intention of preventing a Central American union, it is understood, and will modify the rigid language of the proposed treaty, to make this clear.

The senate committee proposed to go over the treaty in detail next week, and will recommend other amendments, chief among which, it is understood, will be one designed to protect the United States against any obligation for the outstanding debts of Nicaragua. A further conference with Secretary Bryan will be held Tuesday.

CLAPP URGES AMENDMENT TO ALDRICH-VREELAND LAW

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Senator Clapp today proposed an amendment to the Aldrich-Vreeland law to permit emergency currency issued under it to circulate at the same tax for three months as it now would circulate for one.

"There is a growing feeling," said he, explaining his argument, "that it would be unwise to have general currency revision at this special session. Bankers have advised me that if this rate of tax can be extended to cover three months, the currency available would suffice to meet any emergency at this time."

WESTSIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL NAMES NEW OFFICERS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., July 26.—Officers for the West Side Sunday school convention were elected Saturday as follows: Luther Boyd, president; T. D. Bates, vice president; Miss Ruth Griffin, secretary; S. R. Hassler, chorister; Miss Ruth Jordan, organist. The convention at Mount Vernon attracted more than 2,000 people and an interesting program was given.

THE GROWTH OF ANDREW COLLEGE

Any one who knew Andrew college as she was seven years ago, when Dr. J. W. Malone became president, and who has not been back to Cuthbert since that time, would scarcely recognize the present institution as the one which he then knew. For during this time there have been some great changes and improvements.

For one thing, the building of Cuthbert hall and the beautifying of the campus have made the college look like another place. During the seven years that Dr. Malone has presided over Andrew the value of the college plant has been increased by one-third. Twenty thousand dollars has been expended within the past year upon improvements. A loan fund of $8,000 has been secured and $12,000 has gone toward debts which were resting upon the college when the present administration took charge.

The faculty is now a third larger than it was seven years ago. The student body has not been able to grow as it might have done owing to the fact that there has been room for no more pupils than have been enrolled during the past two years. Yet, even under this condition, the enrollment has been increased by one-sixth. Next year, with larger boarding facilities, there will undoubtedly be a very great increase in this respect.

Improvements in courses of study, personnel of faculty and student body and in the general spirit and atmosphere of the school cannot be expressed in figures. Yet the advance in these respects has been far greater even than the material progress that has been.

The enlarged plant, the improved

equipment, the broadened scope of work and the ever-growing popularity of the institution guarantee that next year will be the greatest in Andrew's history.

TIFT COUNTY FARMERS PLANNING BIG MEETING

Best Methods for Harvesting and Marketing Crops Will Be Discussed in Detail

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TIFTON, Ga., July 26.—A meeting of the farmers, corn club boys and business men of Tift county has been called for Saturday, August 2, at the Tifton chamber of commerce. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss plans and methods for harvesting and marketing the crops.

The farmers will tell their experiences of the year at the meeting and discuss crop conditions and methods of fertilization and cultivation. The corn club boys will tell how it is that they can beat their fathers growing corn and do it cheaper.

One of the important matters to be considered at the meeting will be the establishment of a truck packing house and the employment of experienced packers to pack Tift county's truck. Tift county truckers are determined that all truck from this county shall be of standard grade and packed by experienced men. It is quite certain that a packing house will be established before next spring.

This meeting will probably be the beginning of a series of farmers' institutes which will continue throughout the year.

WATER COMPANY GIVES UP WARRANTS ON TWO CITIES

(By Associated Press.)

PITTSBURG, July 26.—Receivers of the American Waterworks and Guarantee company were authorized by the United States court here today to surrender certain warrants held by them. One order authorizes the delivery to the officers of the Arkansas Water company warrants for supplying of water to the cities of Little Rock and Argenta, Ark., totaling $23,038.65.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROYSTON, Ga., July 26.—Royston's college was struck by lightning at 7:30 o'clock last night and was destroyed. The building was worth about $20,000 and was insured for $10,000.

Want City Hospital

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., July 26.—There will be an effort made during the coming week to secure a city hospital in Rome. Several attempts have been made to build this much-needed institution, but all heretofore have failed. The physicians of the city and the M. & M. association are behind the present movement.

LOBBY COMMITTEE TO DISCUSS TARIFF BILL

Claim Made N. Y. Merchants' Association Influenced Changes by Committee

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Senator Lippett today had referred to the senate lobby investigating committee a published interview with Chairman Downing, of the New York Merchants' association tariff committee in which it was claimed that the association's committee had much to do with modification of administrative features of the tariff bill by the senate finance committee.

Chairman Simmons, of the finance committee, said he never had heard of Downing.

The senate resumed consideration of the chemical schedules.

Senator Lodge moved to strike the duty off peanut oil, declaring it was used largely in the manufacture of butterine.

PALMETTO BANKER NOT COMING TO ATLANTA PEN

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 26.—President Wilson has decided to permit Newton A. Carlisle, former president of the National bank at Newberry, S. C., convicted of misapplying its funds, to serve his sentence of one year and a day in the Newberry jail instead of at the Atlanta penitentiary. The prisoner is an aged man and in ill health. The president will permit the transfer so that Carlisle may be close to his family and friends. His five-year sentence was recently commuted by the president to a year and a day.

Stret Improvements

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., July 26.—Five of the city's leading residential streets, Thornton avenue, Cleveland, McCamy, North Hamilton and Selvidge streets, are the streets designated by city council for permanent sidewalk improvements.

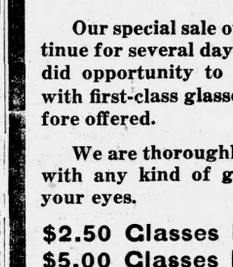
Either tile or cement walks will be laid.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

Newly refitted throughout, Lynch's new motion picture show makes its bow to the public this coming week. It is the policy of this house to offer the best in motion pictures and high cass music. Beginning Monday and continuing through the week Mr. Lynch has engaged Mr. Al Johnson, a character singer of unusual merit, and the celebrated violinist, Miss Verna Sterx, to entertain the patrons of his theater. Tuesday is to be ladies' day at this house and any lady presenting the coupon published in today's paper will be admitted free. A rare treat is offered to the patrons of "the movies" this week at Lynch's Theater.

Montgomery opens the week with Harry Bickford, the famous Dixie tenor, in song hits of the day. Three first release pictures are to be shown: "The Stolen Face," a Selig production; "The Vengeance of Galora," a biograph western, and a Pathe Weekly. Manager Clark is untiring in his efforts to give the best that can be had for the patrons of his house.

The Vaudette offers a two-reel American, "The Scapegoat," for Monday, featuring Warren Kerrigan, the matinee idol of the movies, and Jack Richardson in the heavy role. A Keystone comedy, "Just Kids," is also offered for Monday. During the week several two-reel features, including "Darrit," Dickens' masterpiece, a broncho war picture that always give the Boys in Gray the best of it, and a Japanese photo play will be shown at this popular playhouse.



The realistic duel scene from the "Prisoner of Zenda" in which James K. Hackett will be featured at the Alcazar Theater commencing August 5, for a five-day run, is one of the most thrilling parts of the wonderful play.

The Savoy starts the week with a three-reel photo-play, "The Greater Call," from the famous magazine story of the great northwest. It abounds with thrills from the beginning to the end, and the many scenes give an opportunity to note the grandeur of this great and partially developed country.

"That Texas Quaret" bid farewell to the music loving patrons of the Alcazar this week, and it is the final opportunity to hear these harmonious singers. The best of photo plays as usual will be shown all week.

GRAND JURY TO PROBE MURDER OF W. PARRISH

Judge Fite to Call Extra Session—Hatfield May Be Indicted

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., July 26.—Judge A. W. Fite will, when court meets Monday, call a special session of the grand jury for the purpose of investigating the killing of Will Parrish by Dan Hatfield, it is charged, in North Dalton several weeks ago.

Hatfield, who was caught by Bradley county officers near Cleveland, Tenn., is now in jail at Rome, where he was taken by local officers fearing mob violence if he remained in jail here.

If the grand jury returns bills of indictment against Hatfield, who is charged with murder, and John and Tom Nicodemus, charged with being accessories to the crime, the men will be tried next week, during the regular July term of court.

FARMERS' CONFERENCE AT THE BERRY SCHOOL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., July 26.—On July 31 and August 1 and 2 there will be a three days' farmers' conference conducted at the Berry school. Experts from the State College of Agriculture will be present, and will make addresses. The gathering will be of unusual interest, inasmuch as practical demonstrations with the school's splendid equipment will be given.

AARON KAHANOW RETURNS TO J. M. HIGH CO.

The friends and acquaintances of Mr. Aaron Kahanow will be delighted to know that he is back again at the J. M. High company. Mr. Kahanow has been with the J. M. High company nearly all of his life, and will be found in the Silk and Dress Goods department. No better posted man in this line of merchandise can be found in the south. His long experience behind the counter has enabled him to learn this particular line thoroughly. He has been in this department continuously since he was ten years old, with the exception of past two years. He extends a cordial invitation to his friends and acquaintances to come to see him.—(Advt.)

Find the Want Ad Meant for You

JOURNAL WANT AD Horoscope

JULY 28.

A woman born on this date will have a great love for children. In the management of the children and in ordering of home affairs these women are especially happy and successful. Men of this birthdate have power to hold and sway great multitudes.

For instance, Ballington Booth, the organizer of the Volunteers of America, was born July 28, 1859. A study of this man's life and influence will assert others having a similar birthdate.

Women of this birthdate are angels in mildness and gentleness until some one of their family is maligned and attacked and then they become almost ferocious.

These women are hard to advise. They have a good idea of their own judgment and will not allow any question as to its being the best to enter it.

All musical trades are under favorable planetary conditions and musicians should both read and use The Journal Want Ads for finding new positions and extra work.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal—see first Want Page. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone them to Main 2000 or Atlanta 423.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Short Weight to Buyers

ONE of the most wasteful and most expensive things that the buyers of food products and fertilizer of the south has to contend with is the short weight in millions of sacks of food that are sold in this state. There are but few people who would believe there is a waste of hundreds of thousands of dollars connected with this one item, but nevertheless it is fact, and from careful observation and weighing of hundreds of sacks of not only cotton seed meal, fertilzer but many sacks of food in different parts of the state during the past few months it has been proven that hundreds of sacks that are sold for 100 and 200 pounds weight will not weigh up to the standard. In fact there has not been one in ten of the large number of sacks weighed that has balnced the scales at 100 pounds, the majority ranging from 92 to 96 pounds. Especially is this true of cotton seed meal.

Now I do not know whose business it is to see that these weights are given in return for money received to pay for the same, but I do know that if the tremendous output of this country has fallen as far short to the weight it is sold for according to the number of sacks I have seen weighed at various places during the past three months this loss alone would run into more than $1,000,000 to the buyers of this country each year, and especially is this true with the cotton seed meal products. In one sense of the word this is a small item, but in another it is a tremendous big item. For instance, with the number of sacks of cotton seed meal that are sold in Georgia alone each year a shortage of an average of six pounds weight to each 100 pounds means about 10c per sack, and with the thousands of sacks of meal that are sold in this state you can readily figure what this amounts to. Last year Georgia produced nearly two million bales of cotton. It is estimated at 25 bushels of seed to each bale you can readily see what an immense amount of money this represents, and also estimate the amount of cotton seed meal that is produced from this amount of seed, and if the mills make from 6c to 10c per sack on this short weight on the number of sacks that are sold you can see how it will run into thousands of dollars that the farmer and consumer has to pay for, or in other words he loses or does not get that which he is paying for. This same thing applies to fertilizer. I had one fertilizer manufacturer tell me not long ago that the sales of his company alone had run as high as $6,000,000 in one year. However, this was not all sold in Georgia but in adjoining states. You can readily see how much money the farmer is paying for this fertilizer and this feed, and while it is a small amount he loses on each sack when it comes to a total amount it will easily go into thousands of dollars and the loss probably will be $1,000,000 or more.

This is seemingly a small item but it is someone's business to see that the weight and measures are maintained and the buyer receives what he is paying for. Probably the buyer himself is the one who should see to this and is the man that is losing the money, but he is not interested enough to look after this for himself. I suppose the state authorities do not feel it their duty to look after it for him. However, it should be done and should not go unnoticed a day longer. This wasteful method is, practically speaking, highway robbery on the public, seemingly in a small way, but in the end it means thousands of dollars to the people who are benefited by this waste. It may not be intentional and it probably is not so, but nevertheless it is a fact, and it is the duty of every farmer and something he owes himself hereafter to carefully weigh every sack of fertilizer, cotton seed meal and other food products that he buys and demand from the seller the actual weight he is supposed to receive for his money. This buying of such a vast amount of feed all over the entire south is one of the things that has kept this country in the condition that it is today, and just so long as the credit system pays to be practiced this wasteful state of affairs will always exist. It is one of the big leaks that the southern farmer is paying dear for, and is where one of our big leaks could be stopped. How soon this will be done is a matter to be decided entirely by the farmer or the producer of these products as no one is more interested or affected than the man who buys these goods, and if he does not see to it himself that full weights and measures are given him there is no reason why he should expect someone else to demand it. It is strange but nevetheless a fact that this state of affairs exists over the entire country and is one method by which a small saving to each producer would at the end of the year amount to thousands of dollars that the consumer is now losing.

Yours very truly,

NOTICE

One of the most interesting and most valuable assets to the poultry business in the south has been given the poultrymen through Mr. H. F. Reils, of Atlanta, Ga., in the shape of a poultry directory. This book contains the address of most of the leading poultrymen of the United States, the poultry magazines, experiment stations and much other valuable data that is invaluable to every poultryman. Mr. Reils should be congratulated on getting out such a valuable book for the poultrymen, and it should be in the hands of every farmer and fancier in this section of country. This book is something that has long been needed, and any poultryman can find in the valuable little booklet anything they desire to know about connected with the poultry industry.

POULTRY FEED	POULTRY FEED

San Francisco, Cal., June 28th, 1913.

MR. J. P. GENTRY,
Care Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co., Memphis, Tenn.,

Dear Sir:—If the freight from Memphis to San Francisco is not more than $1 per cwt., please ship me 50 bags of Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

I came to California last fall, from Tennessee. When I got here the property on which I located had on it quite a number of hens and a few turkeys. Among the turkeys were some young ones, just hatched. The hens were not laying at all, but with the aid of Aunt Patsy, which I brought with me, I soon had them going nicely. I raised the young turkeys altogether on Aunt Patsy, and was surprised to find them laying when only six months old, so you may know that I am pleased with Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, and would like for you to get my order out as soon as possible.

My neighbors are all surprised at the great yield of eggs from my hens, and if you could get the right freight rate I have no doubt but that a great deal of your feed could be sold in this state, as the poultry interest here is large, and the people disgusted with the poor feed on the market.

Very truly,

G. W. FRANCIS.

Ask Your Dealer for Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

HOW TO SECURE EGGS In the LATE SUMMER AND EARLY FALL MONTHS

IF YOU want eggs in the latter part of the summer and the early fall, you must feed your hens on a thoroughly balanced ration, in the shape of a dry mash. We claim Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed to be the best dry mash on the market, from the fact that it is composed of the highest grade of raw material that can be secured. There is no filler or adulterated cheap stuff used in it at all, but it contains every ingredient of which the egg itself is composed. Hence, if you will think a moment, you will agree with me that if you put into the hen's craw the ingredients of which the egg is made, you will have a right to expect her digestive organs to convert these ingredients into the egg and to obtain from your hens a greater yield of eggs than if fed otherwise.

Ask any successful poultryman what he thinks of Aunt Patsy, and give us a trial order.

We have for rent several 6, 7 and 8-room houses in Inman Park—let us show you.

ATTENTION, PROPERTY OWNERS!

WE [illegible] exceedingly heavy demand for houses of every description, particularly [illegible] on the north side, and have on hand a long list of good tenants waiting for us to place them. Notwithstanding the fact that July is usually a dull season, we have rented during the first three weeks of this month 153 houses, and have been unable to supply the demand. We anticipate very few changes this season, owing to the scarcity of good houses for rent, and for this reason it will be to your interest to see our Renting Department and list your vacant houses or those expected to go vacant, and let us place good tenants in them for you. We are well equipped to handle your business and refer you to nearly 700 satisfied landlords now on our books.

SHARP & BOYLSTON

WE HAVE a number of attractive homes, both furnished and unfurnished, ranging from five to ten rooms in all the most desirable parts of the city. Get our rent list, or call us, or if you will come in we will take pleasure in taking you to see these places in comfortable conveyances.

ON EAST SEVENTEENTH street, in Ansley Park, we have a beautiful eight-room, two-story residence, thoroughly modern and up-to-date and very prettily furnished. On a large lot with servant's house, and garage. Of location it is unnecessary to speak, splendid neighbors, and just a short distance off Peachtree street. Possession can be had any time and at a very reasonable rental.

INMAN PARK.

WE HAVE a lovely 11-room house in the pretty part of Inman Park, on large corner lot, with all conveniences, large porches, plenty of closet room and abundance of back yard, just the location for splendid private home or large enough for a few first-class boarders, just put in splendid condition. Price $75.00 to A-1 tenant.

DESIRABLE PEACHTREE LOTS

There is no use in going into detail in regard to Peachtree street property. Every person in Atlanta knows Peachtree street, knows its desirability and also knows its PRICE, which is a rule is just a little beyond some of us.

We have had listed with us some unusually pretty building lots, some this side of Buckhead, and some just beyond. These lots have a frontage of 100 feet on Peachtree with a depth of about 425 feet, being beautifully shaded.

The price on these particular lots is from $10.00 to $15.00 under the market, making the PRICE within the reach of anyone who contemplates a Peachtree Home.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

W. E. WORLEY REAL ESTATE

415-16 Empire Bldg.

Atlanta Ave.

WE HAVE exclusive sale of Atlanta avenue. A beautiful 60-foot street, running from Capitol avenue to Grant Park. Water, sewer and tile walks are all in. We have been out and inspected the property and will recommend it to anyone looking for a home site or an investment, at the low price and easy terms we have on the property.

Atlanta Ave. Prices

THE PRICE of each inside lot is only $800, or $16 per foot. The corner lots $20 per foot. If you can beat this price in Atlanta on a wide street like Atlanta avenue, with all the improvements down, I do not know about it.

Best Terms Ever

YOU CAN pay $75 cash and $15 per month, with 7% interest. You cannot possibly beat these terms. These lots are in reach of most anyone. $75 cash is a small amount, and $15 per month is a small monthly payment. Call at our office for plats, and pick your lot before the best ones are gone.

Lot For $300 Cash

IT'S A beautiful lot facing the Marietta car line, beyond the river, in a section where some of the best people in Atlanta live. It's worth $700 now, but the owner says get him $300 cash.

380x1,100 Feet

ON A leading north side street we have a big 8-acre corner lot at $30 per foot, with a depth of 1,100 feet. A gentleman's home site; five streets lead off from it, so it's located at five points, and about the finest lot you ever put your two eyes on. One-fourth cash.

Virginia Ave.

WE HAVE three lots on Virginia avenue, 100x200 feet each, that we would like to sell to three good people, and we would also like to build for you. Not anything more attractive in Atlanta. See us about Virginia avenue.

Peachtree Road Lot

81x325 FEET on Peachtree, will trade for auto, but it must be a high-class car, Stearns preferred. The lot is worth $60 per foot.

Mortgage Loan for Sale

WE HAVE a mortgage loan of $4,000, bearing 7% interest, that we would like to sell. Security the best. Loan runs for two and a half years, 7%.

Ponce de Leon Ave. Lot

WE HAVE a fine Ponce de Leon avenue lot, 60x234 feet, that we would sell for $100 per foot, or exchange for a nice residence in Ansley Park, or any good cross street between the Peachtrees.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Bottenfield Agency Leases Half a Floor in Empire Building, Second Floor of Peachtree and Forrest Avenue Corner Is Leased for Conservatory—Several Sales in Fernwood—North County Sales—Bottenfield Sales—Legislation

Several subdivision sales and two leases were reported yesterday.

Two indications are showing stronger and stronger—the growth of inquiries and the tendency toward easier money. Another agency reported yesterday that it had had several inquiries from loan agents for loan applications.

This is the third or fourth report of this kind made during the past week. The general situation is also good. Crop reports are uniformly fine, and cotton picking will begin in August.

Dispatches from New York show that the stock market is picking up after months of dullness, and stocks are generally the first to show signs of changing business conditions. The dispatches added that this condition was due to better railroad and other earnings throughout the country, and to easier money both in New York and in Europe.

All these things, while general, at the same time have a direct effect on local conditions, and this effect is shown in better inquiries for property and a better disposition on the part of lenders to turn loans.

And to this the condition that has never changed during the past year—a record breaking demand for houses to rent, and a considerable activity in business leases. There will probably be two or three leases during the week that will establish a new rental value on semi-central property and will show that the speculators who boosted the prices in the past had some basis to work on.

Big building is quiet, but it is hard to see how the town could stand many more large buildings of the type that is now being completed.

A lot of out of town concerns are looking around quietly for locations in 9tlanta and a Pennsylvania capitalist let it be known to one agency that he has money to put in Atanta real estate loans.

EMPIRE BUILDING LEASE.

The L. P. Bottenfield agency has leased from the Empire building fourteen offices, or half of the eleventh floor, in that building, and will move into them from their present quarters on the tenth floor on November 1.

The term of the lease is for five years and the consideration, including certain renovations, is $4,000 a year, or $20,000 for the term.

This agency began with one office on the second floor of the Empire building. It then went to the tenth floor in a suite of several offices and now takes a whole floor.

The agency has added various features to its subdivision business and will add more later on, when a detailed announcement will be made.

CONSERVATORY ON PEACHTREE.

Another lease on Peachtree street in what not long ago was considered a residence section was announced yesterday.

The C. L. Bovard agency has leased for the Peter Francisco estate to A. Gerard Thiers and Kurt Mueller the second floor of The Forrest, at the southeast corner of Peachtree street and Forrest avenue.

The term of the lease is for three years, but the consideration is not named.

The second floor of this building, which fronts about fifty feet on Peachtree street, has been used as apartments, but the lessees will make certain changes and use the floor as a conservatory of music.

FERNWOOD SALES.

The Charles P. Glover Realty company has made several recent sales in Fernwood, a subdivision of their ninety-seven-acre tract in the Brookhaven district. This subdivision is opposite the Capital City club's country club. The lots are from a half to one and a half acres, and face large parks reserved for residents.

Following are recent purchasers:

Miss Nina Hornady, Miss Lizzie McCauley, Mrs. R. H. Williamson, Miss Augusta Scruggs, Miss Ruby Jones, Miss Annie Hetzel, Mrs. Ella Chisholm, J. T. Roberts, Lavonia, Ga.; Paul Donehoo, T. J. McWatera, Miss Nannie C. Harris, Mrs. Fannie C. Hillyers, H. D. Ivey, S. L. Hillyer, Mrs. J. O'Keffe Nelson, M. E. Needles, C. S. Upson, Edward H. Holloway, Knightstown, Ind.; Ray Almond, Newil H. GOVERNOR BLEASE GUEST AT PICNIC AT POMARIA

Commissioner Watson Back From Farmers' Meet—Other South Carolina Notes

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 26.—Governor Blease spent today at Pomaria, in Newberry county, where he made an address at a picnic there. He went up on the morning train, returning to Columbia in the afternoon. A barbecue was served by the neighborhood and a good crowd is reported as having been present.

ATTEND FARMERS' MEETING.

E. J. Watson, commissioner of agriculture, commerce and industries, returned this morning from attendance on the meeting of the State Farmers' union in Charleston and a conference with secretaries of chambers of commerce along the Savannah river in Augusta, Ga. Mr. Watson reported a splendid meeting of the Farmers' union and a bright prospect for that order. As to the conference in Augusta he said a good roads meeting would be held there in November during the time of the Georgia-Carolina fair.

WILL ADDRESS FARMERS.

Commissioner Watson and Demonstration Agent Long will go to Easley, in Pickens county, on August 9 to make addresses at a farmers' gathering, and on that afternoon will speak before another farmers' meeting near Prosperity, in Newberry county.

NEWBERRY CROPS GOOD.

Senator Alan Johnstone, of Newberry county, one of the best known and most popular members of the upper house, was a visitor in Columbia today. Senator Johnstone said crops in his county were looking good except that the tassels of old corn were dead in a great many instances, while the "silk" was still alive. He said this was a strange condition for corn and he hadn't seen anything like it so general before. Said he did not know whether the corn would fill out under the circumstances.

Solicitor J. K. Henry, of Chester, was a business visitor here today.

The Watts Lumber company, of Branchville, was commissioned today by Secretary of State McCown with a capital of $6,000, petitioners being J. W. Watts and W. M. Mills.

The Jumper Clothing company, of Columbia, received a commission. Its capital is $3,000, the petitioners being W. L. Jumper, E. A. Blackwell and A. D. Reid.

the Brookwood Real Estate Co. to a client lot 4 on Piedmont avenue, formerly Plaster's Bridge road, just east of Peachtree road. The lot is 100x300 and the price was $3,500, or $35 a front foot.

The same agency sold for W. A. Lumpkins to Mrs. T. G. Bryant lot 20 of the Brookhaven estates, facing the country club. The lot is 100x200 and the price was $3,000.

ROTTENFIELD SALES.

The Rottenfield agency has made the following sales during the past week:

Peachtree Highlands subdivision: Lot 2, block B, price $1,750; lot 6, block C, price $1,600; lot 7, block C, price $1,600.

Peachtree Hurst subdivision: Lot 8, block E, price $600; lot 30, block D, price $750.

William and George McKenzie sold through J. D. Rivers to A. Pellitore a four-acre tract on the Mount Perrian dead for $1,590.

Clairmont park subdivision: Lot 7, block 2, price $1,100.

REALTY LEGISLATION.

Ralph O. Cochran, who is one of the Fulton county representatives in the legislature, will on Monday introduce a measure making equities in property as well as deeds subject to levy and sale. The measure has been drawn by Eugene and Gordon Mitchell, the well known abstract lawyers.

Under the present law all outstanding notes against property must be paid up before levy and sale can be made.

Another important measure, already before the legislature, is that making it possible for counties and municipalities to invest sinking funds in real estate as well as in stock and bonds. Under the present law such funds may be put only in stocks and bonds, although real estate mortgages are just as safe and as a rule yield a higher income.

Still another measure is that repealing the present law which requires a real estate agent who happens now and then to sell a piece of property in another county to take out a license in that county.

Mr. Cochran sees no reason why every one of these new laws cannot be passed at the present session of the legislature.

WEST DEFEATS THE EAST IN CLAY COURT MATCHES

Strachan, of California, Wins Over Hall, of New York

OMAHA, Neb., July 26.—The West defeated the Easttoday for the championships in singles and doubles of the fourth National Clay Court Tennis tournament. In the singles John Strachan, San Francisco, defeated Merrill Hall, New York, and the doubles match was forfeited to Strachan and his partner, Clarence Griffin, by Fred Harris, and Hall, because of the former's illness. Harris' physicians forbade him to play.

Strachan played brilliantly. Hall, though at times playing a spectacular game, was unable to best his opponent. The score was 6-0, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

The first was a love set for Strachan. Hall strengthened in the next set, but his adversary continued his terrific pace and won. In the third setthe easterner won the first game, but Strachan tightened and Hall craftily drew him to the center of the court and won the set.

It was at this point that the East lost its chance for the championship. Strachan was very weak. A short intermission, however, recuperated the Californian greatly and he came back into the contest stronger than ever and won the match and the title.

CREDITS COMMISSION BACK FROM EUROPE

Their Conclusions Probably Will Be Reflected in New Currency Legislation

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The return to the United States from Europe yesterday of the members of the joint commission on rural credits, followed by the arrival in Washington today of many members of the commission, has revived interest in the question of farm credits. It is not improbable that the investigations of the commission abroad and some of its conclusions will be reflected in the currency legislation now being framed in congress. It is accepted as certain that the report of the commission will prove invaluable in the consideration of rural credits.

The joint commission on rural credits had its inception with the Southern Commercial congress, and Senator Fletcher, president of that organization, met the commission upon its return Friday. He was the chairman of the commission, but at the request of President Wilson remained on the job in Washington while the commission toured Europe. The commission was composed of two delegates from each state, and seven distinguished gentlemen who were appointed by the president.

Harvey Jordan, of Atlanta, who was a member of the president's commission, passed through Washington today en route to his home. He was accompanied by Miss Jordan, who went abroad with him.

"I am pleased beyond expectations with the work of the commission," said Senator Fletcher today upon his return from New York, where as chairman he received first-hand reports of the investigations and study in Europe. "I think the Southern Commercial congress deserves great credit for originating the inquiry, and pushing it to so successful a conclusion. Great good to the farmers of the nation will result, and I expect that the United States congress will be enabled to legislate intelligently on the subject of farm credits as a result of the great mass of information gathered by this commission in foreign lands, where rural credits have been tried. The indications are that the commission will make recommendations looking to both state and national legislation, and it is possible that some of the conclusions reached by the commission will be incorporated in pending currency legislation. If a complete system of rural credits is determined upon, that will come later in the form of a square bill."

BLEASE AND M'LAURIN FORM NO COMBINATION

Blease Will Make His Own Fight for Senate, Says Rembert

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 26.—George R. Rembert, Blease leader in the house of representatives and a candidate for governor, today made emphatic answer to the interview sent out from Spartanburg recently in which it was stated that a "slate" had been fixed up between Governor Blease and State Senator John L. McLaurin whereby the former was to run for the United States senate and the latter for governor, McLaurin to have Blease's endorsement.

The interview was purported to have been given by W. P. Beard, who was secretary of the "Bull Moose" party in the last state campaign and is said to be "boosting" McLaurin for governor.

"The interview of W. P. Beard is amusing," said Mr. Rembert. "Whenever Sotuh Carolina is ready to go Republican or join the "Bull Moose" party it then will be time for the people of this state to be led by Mr. W. P. Beard and Mr. John L. McLaurin. In the coming race Governor Blease has his own fight to make for the senate and I have not asked for nor do I expect him to give me his active support in my race for governor. It is true we are on the same side in politics. It is further true that I have been and still am his friend and supporter but if I can't win the governorship of this state on my own merits and upon the fight I have made and propose to make for the people I don't want the job."

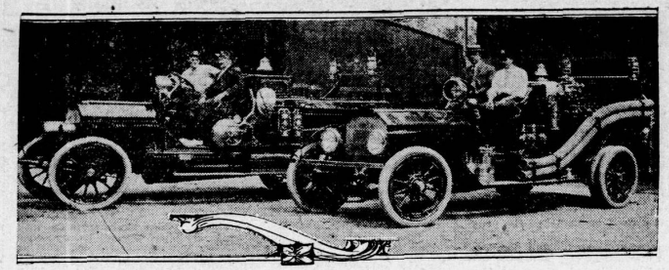
Following the publication in The Journal of the conference at Hendersonville between Governor Blease, State Senator John L. McLaurin, and Editors Grist and Green there was much speculation in political circles in this state as to what the result would be. It is very generally known that both Representative Rembert and Senator McLaurin would like to have the advantage of the endorsement of Governor Blease in their race to succeed him and Mr. Rembert's friends do not like the impression which they attribute to Mr. McLaurin's friends of trying to make it appear that the governor will throw his strength to the latter for his successor.

Governor Blease repeatedly has stated that he was going to be hands off in the race for Governor unless a candidate is attacked simply because he is a Blease man whereupon he will take the stump for him.

Representative Rembert made a speech at Cheraw recently at which he scored W. P. Beard severely. The latter has on several occasions linked the names of McLaurin and Blease together and in his interviews intimated that Mr. McLaurin was looking forward to succeeding Senator B. R. Tillman in the United States senate, he having been driven from political life several years ago by Senator Tillman when he got up his "Commercial" Democracy during the administration of President McKinley.

Both Messrs. Rembert and McLaurin are to be at the big political gathering at Flibert in York county on August 1 and some people look for interesting developments there. Governor Blease also will be present and make a speech and it is expected that United States Senator Smith will attend. Lieutenant Governor C. A. Smith, Speaker M. L. Smith, Railroad Commissioner John G. Richards, all announced candidates for governor, will be there that day and make addresses. A tremendous crowd is looked for and some issues which will play a prominent part in the next state campaign are expected to be brought forward.

WAYCROSS' NEW FIRE-FIGHTING APPARATUS



Automobiles that have replaced the horse-drawn apparatus in enterprising South Georgia city.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 26.—No city in Georgia is making greater strides in the improvement for fire fighting facilities than Waycross. Practically every condition imposed on the city by the Southeastern Underwriters' association for a reduction of fire insurance rates has been met and this week inspectors have gone over the changes in order that the association may pass on the claims made by Waycross.

Horse-drawn apparatus has been replaced by automobile apparatus, the most recent addition being a $9,000 auto pumper, shown on the right in the picture above. Seated on the right in the machine at the left is E. C. Hall, chief of the department. A modern electric fire alarm system has been installed at a cost of $10,000, new hose purchased, a hook and ladder truck added to the department, and to insure plenty of water in case of a prolonged blaze a third artesian well has been bored by the city waterworks department. Water mains are to be extended in all sections of the city.

Another factor that will aid the city in its fight for lower fire insurance rates is the steady improvement of streets in all sections of Waycross. Quite a number of streets, reaching out to different parts of the city, are being paved and concrete bridges are replacing wooden ones. It is expected that the association will make some announcement regarding the rates at Waycross by the first of September.

MR. R. P. DECKER BURIED SATURDAY

The funeral of Mr. R. P. Decker was held Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Greenberg & Bond's chapel, the interment being in West View cemetery. Mr. Decker died Friday evening, after a long illness. He was the father of Miss Maybelle Decker.

No Room for Cream

(Farm and Home.)

"My dear," said the young husband, "did you speak to the milkman about there being no cream on the milk?"

"Yes. I told him about it this morning, and he has explained it satisfactorily; I think it is quite a credit to him, too."

"What did he say?"

"He said that he always filled the jug so full that there was no room on the top for the cream."

KILLS BABY BY ACCIDENT; TAKES BODY HOME TO FIND TWO OTHER CHILDREN DEAD.

(By Associated Press.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 26.—George Hogg, a farmer, of Searle, Tuscaloosa county, lost his children yesterday in a series of unusual accidents. While he was cutting wood his axe flew from the halve and struck his infant in the head, killing it instantly. He carried the body to his home and there learned that two of his young sons had been kicked to death by a mule.

To Make Live Stock Profitable

(Progressive Farmer.)

If you desire to make live stock profitable, the thing to do is to join in with the more progressive of your neighbors; select a breed of hogs, or cattle, or poultry; all of you get the same breed and then stick to it until you give your community a reputation for the production of good stock of that particular breed. It will take only a few years to do this if you go at it in earnest, and the result will be a steady increase in the prosperity of the community.

MASSEE IS ALLOWED THIRTY DAYS TO APPEAL

South Carolina Supreme Court Allows Macon Capitalist More Time

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 26.—The supreme court today extended for thirty days the time in which the remittitur in the case of W. J. Massee, the rich Macon, Ga., capitalist is to be sent down in order to give the defendant time in which to apply for a writ of error to take his case to the United States supreme court.

The court recently ordered Mr. Massee turned over to the Tennessee authorities, to which state he had been fighting against extradition and declared his bond of $10,000 forfeited when Massee failed to appear and surrender. He is supposed to be at his home in Macon.

Reports of Rain in Southwest Caused Heavy Selling of Cotton

General Improvement in Conditions Over Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi Was Shown by a Trade Paper

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 26.—It was the opinion in cotton market circle here today that by Monday the drought in the southwest, particularly in central and southeast Texas would be thoroughly broken. A low barometer trough from the central west promoting showery conditions and the official forecast indicated unsettled weather over most of Texas and Oklahoma tomorrow. With this in mind room traders became heavy sellers of cotton, and after opening steady at a decline of 1 to 5 points, the market worked off constantly until at the close, which the opinion in cotton market circles here constantly until at the close, which was steady at a net decline of 7 to 14 points, about the lowest levels of the present downward movement were reached.

The fact that most authorities agree that the Texas crop has not been damaged beyond repair gave assurances that the expected rains, if heavy and general enough, would restore the magnificent crop outlook in that state. A number of private advices received during the day were generally favorable although calling attention to the need of rain in the southwest. General improvement in conditions over Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi during the past month was noted in the crop report of a local trade paper while a prominent house here issued a crop condition figure of 83 against 83.3 on June 25.

A southern crop expert wired that west of the river the crop was above the average better than last year although general rain is needed over a large area. Some of the cotton goods market late yesterday on fears that the predicted rains might not materialize was put out again today on every fresh assurance of rains in Texas.

Aside from a little trade demand and occasional scattered covering there was little support at any time during the forenoon.

AUSTIN & HAIT COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Cotton:

As stated in our last letter, caution was about to come out of its lethargy and move on its own merits, which would be primary for the few weeks preceding to the end of July. As last was written, the high temperatures which had been prevailing in the southwestern belt were such as to cause grave apprehension if continued long. The fact that rain or showers was being done in the checking of boll weevil damage. At the same time the eastern belt was being visited with the plague of grasshoppers seen in a generation in some places and the cotton crop was diminishing at the rate, in price, a small crop. Commencing last Sunday, however, just as this damage was becoming serious, the entire belt received copious and beneficial lowering of temperatures and a general rainfall which gave remarkable relief and this has since been followed by magnificently beneficial rains pretty much throughout the belt. The period of this writing, gives promise to continue until sufficient moisture is received to put the plant in good condition.

Disinterested parties have stated that with 12,000,000 American farmers producing $9,000,000,000 annually on a borrowed capital of $8,000,000,000 and which farmers pay interest and commission of $550,000,000 annually, the banking interests of the country are fighting against the passage of any legislation which will graduate our present crop marketing system and the benefits of bona fide operations in future contracts, as they could not safely loan this money without knowing the market for the commodities raised. Spinners have also shown their unwillingness for bodge protection in purchasing future contracts for the reason of their fixation of their finished goods 6, 12, 24 and 36 months ahead. Some realize if this is done they still receiving cotton two cents under present market, probably through to trade in the fall, 1911, which would not be possible without the great future markets of our world's cotton exchanges.

The execution of hedge purchases of future contracts in the face of overwhelming crop was what turned this market at 8¾ cents in December, 1911. Many are still wondering what sent it up to 12 cents eventually instead of down to 05 of .06 cents under the weight of our never before seen 16,000,000 bale crop. The grower has the same opportunity to sell his crop ahead at tempting prices when his cotton is not yet grown. The entire south is in danger of this bearish price-making legislation, and should continue to pour in their protests to Washington.

With the Balkan situation apparently in better shape than before for some time, we are now confronted with a troublesome situation in the southwest, which, if it continues the latter of which might enter into the consuming possibilities situation would it continue. The improved considerably, and of a political nature, we unspoiling days of a fine staple crop. This should witness a handsome trade revival in near months. The dry goods trade should be the first to pick up, as they were the first to feel the pinch of the way from the mill to the retail counter. But we must keep our eyes on the weather and the crop situation; we need an early clarification there to release hoarded money to finance the handling soon and speed up the activities of their consumptive power.

The weather will dominate the market for the moment, as it should; the present rains will probably dissipate the drought in Texas, but if they are not general we believe the present setback will be a temporary one and the rally of the spinners to procure their requirements by means of hedge purchases, and we would buy for a long pull. If the rains are sufficiently beneficial we have prospects of somewhat lower prices, especially if related to unfavorable political news. Considering the possibilities either way, we shall continue to count our best commitments by wire of changing conditions marketwise.

Cotton seed oil: Our readers now know the reason for our unbounded enthusiasm in this market for a number of months past. It has been a most profitable bought proposition with us. The census department reports that 13,500,000 bales of cotton will be produced from 4,570,000 tons of seed crushed, out of a total production of 6,104,000 tons of seed, and in all instances the statistics are of course second to the "big show" of 1911, the year of the unprecedented crop value, which exceeded 1911 by $2,500,000. Oil has been going into consumption at a rate that hardly appreciated by the trade in general, much less the public, which accounts for the unusual scarcity at the end of the season. The high price of lard continues to create a demand for cotton seed oil and with the strong interests in the trade, buying all the October that the market offers, we believe they foresee much higher prices than even the present high level, and we continue willing following of this position and recommend purchases of October. Sellers of December and January should expect to continue on a scale up until the crop is known.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

Considering the Season of the Year, the New York Banks Made Very Strong Showing

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Financier says today:

"Considering the season of the year of New York are in a very strong position as regard cash and reserve. Despite the drain to which they have been subjected by reason of gold exports, they have not only maintained a satisfactory percentage of reserve but according to the statement issued Saturday have during the week increased that item by $7,345,500, making the surplus above the 25 per cent minimum $28,157,700.

"Within the next thirty days it is safe to assume that seasonal demands for money from the interior will to some extent deplete the cash reserves of New York banks, but in view of the present it is interesting to note that the movements of money is still in this direction."

STOCK GOSSIP

Wall Street summary:

As predicted, the Mexican situation has begun to adjust today. Mexicans condemn mediation plan. Electrolytic Copper reached 15c. Steel earnings for the first half of 1913 were greater by $5,000,000 than in first part. Tariff vote expected Sept. 15th. Bank of England raised discount rate. Twenty rails advanced .2%.

Tue reaction may go little further, but on any weakness buy strong holdings in stocks like Union Pacific, Copp, Reading and Steel, Missouri Pacific on the rights, Interborough and long pull. Earnings are showing up well and it is one of the best management and would make it one of the big properties of the country.—Potter.

We hold buy Brooklyn Rapid Transit; bear it is one of the best 6 per cent stocks on the list; 87 to 90 will secure a good advance next week.—Potter.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say:

Wheat—The continued favorable reports from the northwest are causing a great deal of local and outside selling and new buying.

Corn—The market has been heavily sold during the past few days by those who were figuring a great deal of liquidation. We think the market has had break enough.

Oats—As a whole, there has been both heavy short selling and general liquidation.

Provisions—The buying on the break yesterday was of a good character and largely by packers.

Peoria, Ill.—Complaints becoming more general through this section as to corn going back and not coming on.

Minneapolis wires: Crowd here bullish wheat on some talk that Canada would buy from Kirkhaven, Minn.

Reports of Damage From Black Rust in Minnesota Caused Rise

Buying That Started With One of the Largest Houses in the Trade Lifted Wheat Prices After Early Decline

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 26.—Buying that started with one of the largest houses in the trade lifted wheat today after a show of weakness at the outset. Black rust reports from Minnesota tended to aid the bulls. The market closed steady at a net advance of 1-8@1-4 to 1-4@3-8. Corn finished with a gain of 1-4 to 1 3-8@1 1-2c, oats up 3-4 to 1 1-4c, and provisions ranging from 2 1-2 off to an upturn of 12 1-2c.

Bearishness in wheat early resulted from weak cables and from reassuring domestic advices concerning the outlook for the spring crop. Purchasing, however, soon became general, helped by reports that every bushel of wheat which can be bought in any quarter of the country finds ready sale for eastern shipment at about 3-4c over the September option. Export sales at St. Louis and New York counted also against the bears. Black rust talk seemed to make no impression on the wheat pit until the last hour. The fact that Minneapolis quotations appeared to be influenced by fresh developments regarding danger from the fungus was to a considerable extent what held Chicago prices finally at the top level reached.

Exchanges clearances of wheat and flour equaled 371,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,816,000 bushels, a year ago 1,564,000 bushels.

Failure of expected rains in the southwest brought about general buying of corn. High temperatures in Kansas served also to increase the desire for a material advance in prices. There were extremely bad crop reports from Illinois, Indiana and Nebraska.

Continued unfavorable threshing returns made oats readily move upgrade with corn.

LIBERAL WHEAT RECEIPTS IN BIG WESTERN MARKETS

Export Trade Better Than for Years; Is Taking Much of the Winter Surplus

CHICAGO, July 26.—In spite of the vast merchandising of wheat, including the heat export trade in years now being handled, primary receipts recently were more than double the shipments. That looks like good crops, but farmers feel prices are too low to cash or less west of the Missouri river. A very large part of the new winter wheat pressed upon the market represents calling of loans by banks and the needs of farm owners. Wheat growers are adopting the policy of coarse grain growers in recent years of selling promptly on bulges and holding on declines. Weather has been such to allow them a good deal of latitude in this matter so long as they know a liquidating attitude. The crop prices are low 20 cents

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

AN announcement of wide social interest is that made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rahrbach, of Maryland, of the engagement of their daughter, Frances Eagle, and Mr. Joseph Victor Gollbart, of Whiteside, Tenn., the marriage to take place early in September.

Miss Rohrbach is a beautiful young girl with a wealth of friends and is of a very prominent family. Her sister married the groom's-elect brother, Mr. Simon B. Gollbart, Jr. and is one of Chattanooga's most popular young matrons.

Mr. Gollbart is the nephew of Mrs. Robert L. Washington, of Atlanta, and of the late Mark J. O'Brien and a great nephew of the late Major M. J. O'Brien, of New York. He is well known and popular in Chattanooga, where his exquisite tenor voice is in great demand. The young couple will make their home in Whiteside, a suburb of Chattanooga.

* * * * * *

POLO and the organization of an Atlanta polo club is the interesting subject of discussion among the stay-at-homes. No sport of the out-of-doors is so generally absorbing as the exciting one of polo, both from the viewpoint of the onlooker and of the participant.

In a recent number of Vogue a full page was given to pictures showing the women who have taken up the game within the last year and who are becoming experts in the fascinating sport. Another page showed pictures of well-known women wearing their prettiest summer toilets who were intent spectators—pictures which will be reproduced by members of our own social register set on August 6 at Fort McPherson, when Atlanta will have its first local glimpse of polo.

The Atlanta club has been notified that it will be included by the Polo Association of New York in the southern circuit and eligible for the southern circuit cup.

Through the courtesy of Colonel Van Orsdale the game will be played on the parade grounds at the post and will be played by a number of the officers against the Atlanta men and the visiting players from the Aiken and Sumter clubs.

The army colors, red, white and blue, will be the colors of the day, and England, the home of polo, will be represented by the referee, Colonel M. E. Carthew-Yorston, retired, a British army officer and one of the crack players of India, where his regiment was stationed a number of years.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton will be special guests on the 6th, and a number of young women riders have been invited to view the game on horseback. Atlanta's first game will be perpetuated on a moving picture film and will make an interesting item among the pictured weekly events.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy Give Beautiful Dinner

A beautiful event of Friday evening was the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy at the Piedmont club, the occasion being in celebration of Mrs. Murphy's birthday.

The round table was placed on a corner of the terrace and presented a beautiful appearance adorned with many many exquisite flowers, which were sent by the friends who remembered the anniversary of the popular hostess.

A large basket holding gladioli graced the center of the table, the flowers shading from palest pink to flame color, and at intervals were four French baskets holding the pink and coral blooms, golden candelabra held unshaded tapers, and ices and bon bons continued a color scheme of pink.

A birthday cake, the gift of Mrs. Maddox, was brought in with the sweet course, sixteen tapers burning on its embossed surface.

There were happy toasts and clever little speeches, dinner being followed by informal dancing.

Keely Company's Clearance of Suits and Dresses

For your choice of $7.50 Two hundred dresses

We shall speed the going of our dainty Dresses and Suits at a one-price disposal sale on Monday morning.

For the woman who would like a fashionable frock at less than half its value, we would suggest a prompt response to this offering.

$7.50 for Linen Crash Outing Suits.

These are popular for golfing and outings.

$7.50 for Ratine Suits and Dresses. Stylish for street and general wear.

$7.50 for English Voile and Tub Dresses. These have been in the front of fashion.

$7.50 for Cotton Crepe afternoon Frocks. Nothing so cool and dainty as these.

$7.50 for Striped English Voile Dresses. Good dressers have hungered for these.

$7.50 for Dotted Cotton Voile Dresses. Smart for afternoon functions.

$7.50 for Embroidered Linen Dresses. Useful for hot weather mornings.

Really Fine Suits are scarce in the bargain sales much heralded hereabouts---

Here They Are For You.

$7.50 for Stylish dresses tomorrow.

Values were up to $10, $12.50, $15, $16.50, $17.50.

Of course, there would be no saving to you, buying these dresses, because they are $7.50 in price.

They would be a decided loss to anyone buying them unless they carried style, quality and value.

The wisdom of the purchase of one or more of these dresses will be shown by you, because you are buying one of the most needed bits of dainty outer apparel at the time when you need it most.

These are of the needed now sorts.

And they are of the up-to-date styles.

In view of these intrinsic merits, when you find them one-half price or less, you would do yourself an injustice to pass them.

Every dress and suit shows good taste in the selection.

The best costumers in America made them on lines suggested by the best designers.

When these be gone you will not see their like again for this season.

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

(From Outdoor Life.)

If you are freckled, tanned or sunburnt, dab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain overnight. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine, flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but very gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles yield to this treatment. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing I know to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. It is fine for a discolored neck. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.—(Advt.)

FOR
mothers have for many years used
TEETHINA
with happiest results, in taking their babies safely thru the trying, dangerous teething period.

Teethina is a prescription for many years used regularly by Dr. C. J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in his long and successful practice. He considered it the best known remedy for Cholera-infantum, dysentery, diarrhea, cholera morbus, colic, and worms—the dread diseases that cause most of the deaths of children. Successfully used for 40 years.

Teethina soothes and eases the child and makes teething easy. Saves many long, anxious, sleepless nights for the mother.

Sold only at druggists for 25 cents.

Your Unrestricted Choice of Any Summer Dress Formerly Selling Up to $23.50 at

The offer is even better than stated—some dresses in the lot were priced earlier at $27.50 to $35. But to make the headline broad and sweeping—to include "ALL DRESSES"—we had to stop at $23.50. Choose, therefore, from all lingerie dresses; all voile dresses; all crepe, ratine or linen dresses, whether the former price was $18.50, $20 or $23.50, at $9.85.

One hundred and twenty-seven dresses (127) in all—all new this summer; many not in stock over thirty days. Scarcely a dress in the lot worth under $18.50; many worth to $23.50; some formerly priced to $35. Choice $9.85.

$8.50 to $12.50 Dresses at $5.85

Just the fresh, captivating summer dresses of which one likes to have a plenty. There are cool, crinkly crepes, dainty dimities, smart ratines and linens, lovely lingeries; just a whole host of the very fabrics highest in fashion. Styles are legion, as you would expect in a grouping of one hundred and thirty-nine new dresses. Choice $5.85.

(Ready-to-Wear, Second Floor.)

$1 Waists at 59c

A grouping of broken lines, including:
—$1 silk mull shirts with sailor collars.
—$1.75 linen shirts, detachable soft collars; soft or stiff bosoms.
—$1 lingeries and voiles in high or low neck; long or short sleeves.
—About 265 waists in all. Choice 59c.

$1.50 to $2 Waists at $1

Charming summer styles in soft white lingeries and voiles, high or low neck models.

$2.85 for $4 to $8.50 waists—the one's and two's of a kind of our best sellers. Lingerie and voile; beautifully made. High and low neck.

$1.95 for shirts worth to $4—all silk shirts, mannish style. Stripes on white or colored ground. Soft detachable turn-over collars.

(Ready-to-Wear, Second Floor.)

Last Call on Linens: Save a Half

A rummage of the stock for oddments, soiled pieces and short lots results in these BARGAINS:

Soiled Table Linens

Because these table linens need a tubbing we don't want to invoice them. That, and the fact that they are odd lots, accounts for these absurdly low prices. Bargains for the thrifty.

Linens are pure 100 per cent flax. All size cloths from 2x2 yards, 2x2 1-2 yards, 2x3 yards, up to 2 1-2x4 yards. Possibly not all sizes, however, at each price. Choose from $6.50 to $8.50 Cloths at $3.90.

$9, $10 to $12.50 Cloths at $4.90.
$13.50 to $16.50 Cloths at $6.90.

Linen Napkins in the Sale

High grade qualities, all sold by the dozen.

$4 and $4.50 Napkins, 22½-inch size, $2.98.
$7.50 to $9 Napkins, 27-inch size, $5.98.
$10 to $15 Napkins, 27-inch size, $7.98.

(Main Floor, Left Aisle.)

39c for 75c to $1 laces—45-inch all-over shadow laces. Bewitching patterns in cream and ecru.

(Main Floor, Right.)

Up to $2.50 Undermuslins at Especially noteworthy in the $2.50 garments is a small lot of thirteen fine nainsook gowns with entire bust of shadow lace. Beautifully ribbon-trimmed. An extraordinary value, indicating our determination to clear all broken lines and odds and ends of garments before inventory.

98c

Grouped on the same big table are just as fine combinations, but somewhat mussed. Also many other gowns, less expensive. The garments consist chiefly of combinations and gowns with a sprinkling of Princess Slips, Petticoats and Corset Covers. Not a garment that originally sold for less than $1.25; many worth $1.50 to $2 and more. Choice 98c.

(Muslinwear—Second Floor.)

$7 & $8 Corsets $3.50

If you don't mind wearing a corset somewhat higher in the bust than present fashions call for, you can save a half and more.

Since these are the well known Madame Grace and Mme. Irene Corsets, you know that the workmanship and materials are Perfection. Imported materials variously in pink, blue or white. Choice $3.50.

(Corsets, Second Floor.)

GREAT VALUES IN SILKS: ALL KINDS

A NEW DISCOVERY FOR REDUCTION OF SUPERFLUOUS FLESH

Recently a prominent society woman returned to Atlanta from a sojourn in New York. Her friends all exclaimed, how slim and stylish she looks! What has she done to reduce her flesh? She confided the secret to the Randolph Co. Hair Dressing Parlors, 58 1-2 Whitehall street, immediately set to work to procure this marvelous discovery. It is now here. "Get Slim." It is called. A simple, harmless fruit combination, containing no medicines, to be dissolved in the drinking water and taken whenever thirsty. Be sure to call this week at the parlors, see "Get Slim" and give it a trial, for it is a very easy certain method of reducing fat without any bad effects whatever.

Have you any combings? If so send them to the Randolph Co. to be made up into hair goods, switches, transformations, etc. The cost is very small and the best work done in the city. A sale of Braids this week in order to reduce stock before the new fall goods arrive. Some great bargains at half price and less.

Take a course of scalp treatments at the Randolph parlors during these dull midsummer days and get a good, new growth of hair before fall sets in. You'll thus avoid that "falling hair" season that everybody dreads.—(Advt.)

Every lady who spends the Summer at the seashore, in the mountains or at some fashionable watering place, should take with her a few bottles of

GOURAUD'S

to improve and beautify her complexion and protect her skin from the burning sun, bleaching winds, and damp night air.

The surest guarantee of its perfection is the fact of it having been in actual use for nearly three-quarters of a century.

Making Your Dollar Do Double Duty

Our dollars come hard enough to most of us to make us interested in anything which will tend to give them greater purchasing power. And so Journal readers will appreciate our repetition of the same idea in these talks on advertising, when we call attention again to the daily possibilities for economy and saving offered by careful and intelligent buying of the year-in, year-out things that all of us must buy.

Clothes, food, recreation---all are better bought, more intelligently bought, more economically bought by those who read the advertising in The Journal with care and understanding.

In saying how much a dollar will buy, it makes all the difference in the world who spends the dollar.

Sleep that Refreshes

No. 4

Depends largely on the mattress you buy. The mattress must be of uniform thickness, gently elastic to conform to the body lines, at the same time supporting the sleeper without pressure.

The Princess Mattress

is made of cotton woven by our specially designed machinery into layers of light fluffy felt, one layer placed upon the other to insure uniformity of thickness. It weighs full 50 pounds, and is encased in ticking artistic in design—plain stripe or fancy—of durable quality.

Ours is the oldest, largest and best equipped factory in the south for the manufacture of mattresses. THE PRINCESS is our specialty. We sell it under a 60 night's trial, promising to refund your money if you are not satisfied. We are safe in doing this because we employ none but expert workmen of long experience who make THE PRINCESS by hand in a large, well lighted, thoroughly ventilated factory.

Ask your dealer. He should be able to supply you. If not, write direct to us. Be sure you are informed before you buy.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

AFTERNOON tea at the Piedmont club and informal luncheons with the usual dinner dances at the Country clubs make up the sum total of the summer gaities.

A few interesting visitors and the small events planned to add to the pleasure of their stay, the return of a number of travelers and the departure of others, have wrought the changes and added interest to the terrace groups at the clubs and the other informal gatherings.

As the guest of Mrs. Samuel T. Weyman, Mrs. Dozier Pou has been one of the attractive reasons of a series of small affairs, most of them bringing together the group of women who formed a house party in the lovely old home of Mrs. Pou in Columbus in the early spring including a charming group of matrons whose homes form a real neighborhood on Fourteenth street. Among them being Mrs. Weyman, Mrs. Frank Callaway, Mrs. Samuel Evins, Mrs. Hugh Lokey, Mrs. Victor Smith, Mrs. Linton Hopkins. The little circle admits numbers of other interesting women and the Columbus house party included Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Mrs. Robert Alston, Mrs. Emily MacDougald, and Mrs. Frank Hardeman, of Athens.

The presence of Mrs. Hardeman as the guest of Mrs. MacDougald gave an additional interests to the gaities of the week.

THE short visit of Mrs. Cora Harris was the reason of a number of affairs, a beautiful dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Lowry were hosts at the Piedmont club and a series of small affairs when the intimate friends of the clever writer met for real talks over the luncheon and tea tables.

Mrs. Harris was here to discuss with her architect the proposed changes in the log cabin where she will make her home—the home where she will do her writing out of sound and sight of disturbing cities. The cabin is one of the two left standing which were built by the Cherokee Indians in 1820 and is in the heart of the Georgia hills she loves so well.

AMONG the younger set the arrival of Mrs. Edgeworth Lamkin and Miss Mattie Wilson DuBose, of Athens, as the guests of Mrs. Hughes Spalding brought together a number of charming young matrons Friday afternoon at a lovely tea at the Piedmont club entertained by Mrs. Spalding.

Such an attractive group and so many of them confiscated by marriage, massfine Atlanta having gone a-wooing abroad, an impersonal retaliation towards the men who have won Atlanta brides—Athens has been a particularly happy hunting ground as the following list will show.

Beginning with the hostess herself, who was Miss Hollins Phinizy, of Athens, the party included Mrs. William Schroder, Mrs. Herbert Dyer (Emile Briggs, of Valdosta), Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., Mrs. Charles Remsen, formerly of Nebraska; Mrs. Samuel Dick (Ruth Tribble, of Athens), Mrs. Robert Woodruff (Nell Hodgson, of Athens), Mrs. Fleming Winecoff (Renee Lustrat, of Athens), Mrs. James Richard Gray, Jr. (Ida Dorsey, of Athens), Mrs. Arthur Gallogly, Mrs. Cam Dorsey (Minnie Adams, of Savannah), Mrs. Luther Rosser, Jr. Mrs. Hugh Dorsey (Adair Wilkinson, of Valdosta), Mrs. Kemp Slaughter (Sybil Kemp of Baltimore), Mrs. Harry Harmon, Jr. (Sophie Luttrell, of Knoxville), Mrs. Philip Alston (May Lewis, of Greenville), Mrs. George Lowndes and Mrs. Holland Lowndes (Inezzz Evelyn Wilkinson, of Texas). Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun (Mary Guy Trigg, of Chattanooga), Mrs. Junius Oglesby, Jr., Mrs. William Shallenberger (Laura Boyd, of Savannah), Mrs. Phillips McDuffie, Mrs. John Wheatley, Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Jr. Mrs. Winship Nunnally, Mrs. F. E. Knapp (Miss Dietrich, of Washington), Mrs. James Austin (Miss Young, of Valdosta), Mrs. Jerome Simmons, Jr., Mrs. Hinton Baker, of Augusta, formerly Emma Robinson, Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, Mrs. Benjamin Tye, Mrs. Hilliard Spalding (Alice Stewart, of Athens), Mrs. James Palmer and Mrs. Sidney Rogerton.

AMONG the younger set there are a number of attractive visitors. Miss Dorothy Robbins is being delightfully entertained as the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan and will be joined Monday by Miss Margaret Bransford, of Nashville. Miss Bransford is a cousin of Miss Elizabeth Boyd, who was the admired guest of Miss Carolyn King during June.

Miss Margaret Buckner, of Virginia, is spending the summer with her cousin, Miss Helen Jones, and is a delightful figure in the summer gaieties.

Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, is the guest of Miss Margaret Rushton and Miss Mildred Hazen will be cordially welcomed as the guest of Miss Mignon McCarty, Miss Hazen to arrive this morning.

THE return during the past week of Miss Jessie McKee after an absence of nearly two years spent abroad has been cordially welcomed by her friends.

Miss McKee spent the winter in Paris, where she studied at one of the smart schools and during the summer following an interesting continental tour. Miss McKee was accompanied home by Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Whitman, who have spent the past six weeks in Europe. Mrs. John Ashley Jones and Miss Mary Atwood Jones being other European travelers who have returned recently.

Miss Josephine Windle returned Saturday after an interesting three weeks' stay in Cuba.

MR. AND MRS. FORREST ADAIR'S beautiful new pool was the scene of a merry swimming party Tuesday evening, when about 150 guests assembled for a delightful evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Adair are noted for their pleasant hospitality, and since the completion of the pool have entertained jolly swimming parties nearly every day.

That of Tuesday evening was the largest since the pool was opened.

After enjoying the water for a while the guests were entertained at a buffet supper.

Vesper Club Dance

Among the events of the coming week will be the dance to be given by the Vesper club on Friday evening, August 1, at the club room in West End.

The chaperones will be Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christensen, Mr. and Mrs. Evan McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Whitenton, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. R. Y. Sanders.

House Party

The Misses Wofford are entertaining at a house party at their home at Murphy, N. C.

A DEBUTANTE OF THE COMING SEASON

MISS MARY RICE.

Miss Rice is the charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rice and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Rice. She is devoted to the outdoor life, and is an enthusiastic automobilist driving her own car. She will be one of the most active of next season's debutantes.

HORSE SHOW AND OTHER GAIETIES OF THE WHILE

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 26.—The fifth annual horse show to be held here on Friday and Saturday, the 15th and 16th of August, promises to be the biggest affair of its kind and the most sucessful social event ever held in the state. The schedule of classes and prizes is to be issued next week and sent out to prominent horsemen and horse show exhibitors throughout the section, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia, which usually send their quotas of horses and prominent members of society for the show.

Some of the exhibitors will include David Dunlop, Dr. Guy Fairfax Whiting, the Misses Whiting, Miss Helen Buchanan, Thomas Atkinson, De Courcy W. Thom, Mrs. Thorton Lewis, General C. C. Watts.

Following the horse show which will be held at the Meadows stock farm will be a series of polo matches and possibly several tournaments will be arranged. William P. Hulbert, of the Cincinnati polo team, who is here with Mrs. Hulbert and their family, and E. W. Hopping, polo manager of the Cincinnati players, will come with their team to meet the army players from Fort Myer, while Shannon Lord Meany, of Morristown, and other members of the Passiforn Hunt club, at the Virginia Hot Springs, are arranging a series of matches with the players here on the Meadows polo field, which is to be the polo center of the middle south.

The half hundred horseback riders here, many of whom have shipped their own mounts down from Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, are looking forward with considerable enthusiasm to the series of drag hunts and foxchases planned for the beginning of August by Lawrence Dickson, M. F. H., of the Grenbrier Hunt, and Ed Gorham, the whip from the Washington Riding and Hunt club.

Southerners Here.

Including those from Richmond and Atlanta, with a score or more divided between Charleston, S. C., and Birmingham, have been making things hum during the past week when a round of dinners, tango teas and suppers, card parties and luncheons in the cottage colony, at the Casino and at Elmhurst Farm, have been varied by tours of inspection through the new hotel, the Greenbrier, which will open on the 1st of October as an all the year round resort.

Mrs. Seth Barton French, who accompanied Mrs. Joseph E. Willard, of Richmond, whose husband has just been named as minister to Spain, on a motor trip here from the Hot Springs, went over the hotel from cellar to garret. Others who have made tours of inspection include Decatur Axtell, Mr. and Mrs. Garret B. Wall, Miss Effie Branch, Mrs. E. T. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. McAdam, Mr. and Mrs. Billips Phinizy, Bradley Saunders, Mrs. Columbus Haile, John B. Cochran, and Frank Colquit, of Atlanta, who has joined friends in the cottage colony.

Judge William H. White, of Richmond, has arrived to spend the season as has Henry W. Anderson, who is convalescing from an attack of typhoid fever.

Mrs. Columbus Haile, of Staunton, and her charming daughter, Miss Elise Haile, spent the week-end here. John B. Cochran, of Staunton, who left on Sunday for his home in Staunton, is returning later for the horse show season.

Recent registrations at he old hotel include H. T. Wickham, Frederick R. Scott, Mrs. Pearl F. Lewis, and Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Pace, of Richmond, O. W. Gardner, of Norfolk, George Baird and H. C. Carl, of Roanoke, and a tramping party of University of Virginia students including H. B. Landes, of Staunton, Vaughn, Camp, of Franklin, and P. Woolfolk, of Richmond.

To Miss Jones

Miss Alice Muse was hostess Friday evening in compliment to Miss Dorothy Jones, of Newnan, who is the guest of Miss Harriet McCullough.

Miss Muse's guests included Miss Dorothy Jones, Miss Harriet McCullough, Miss Frances Broyles, Miss Nina Hopkins, Miss Nellie Dodd, Miss Frances Winship and Miss Madeline McCullough.

Y. W. C. A. Member Writes of Summer Camp in Carolina Mountains

Miss Ada Moore and myself went to the conference at Black Mountain, N. C., June 6 to 16 to represent the Clover club, a social organization of the Y. W. C. A., and I am sure if a large delegation of the "powers that be" (or in other words, board members, and all those who have the interest of the association so much at heart) could attend one of these conferences it would be only a short time before Atlanta would have an association that would be the pride of the city and the whole south Atlantic field.

The conference was like a big happy house party, where the Y. W. C. A.'s of over a hundred colleges of the south were represented, as well as over twenty-five city Y. W. C. A.'s.

The association grounds are situated in a picturesque spot of the Blue Ridge mountains, about three miles from the town of Black Mountain, N. C., and reached over a macadam road, which is lined with beautiful rododendron and fragrant mountain laurel.

The main building stands some 3,000 feet above sea level and commands a splendid view of the valley below, with a background of many peaks such as the Seven Sisters, Grey Beard, the Pinnacle, Clingman's Dome, and Mount Mitchell, the latter having an altitude of 6,711 meet, and the highest peak east of the Rockies.

The main building is called Robert E. Lee hall, and is a spacious four-story structure 200 feet long, and equipped with every modern improvement.

Around the main building there are fifty tents, electric lighted, and comfortably furnished. Also several six-room cottages, a large auditorium, and the dining hall.

Nearly 500 delegates and leaders taxed the capacity of the buildings, and as this is only the second seacon of the Blue Ridge association, it is a matter of speculation as to future conferences.

The morning sessions were most interesting, being devoted to Bible study, mission and community study, and technical councils for the discussion of clb work and the problems of association work.

In the afternoons recreations of all kinds were indulged in, such as mountain climbs, horseback rides, drives, tennis, etc. Indoor gymnasium stunts were also enjoyed, as well as impressive and interesting exhibition by the Camp Fire Girls.

A big reception was held at the beginning of the conference, when "everybody met everybody else," and this was the beginning of the free comradely feeling that grew and radiated throughout the entire session.

Association day everyone put off stiff dignity, and all brow-wrinkling thoughts, and each delegation planned some amusing stunt which was reviewed from the "grand stand" of the hall veranda and steps.

In order for the "show" to be strictly up-to-date, the "footlights" were turned on, and proved to ve thirteen girls with large paper bags on their heads; when the bags were removed (or rather the "lights turned on") everyone of the thirteen was red-headed. Everything was depicted and pantomimed from grand opera to Mutt and Jeff.

Another enjoyable feature was when a splendid view of the valley below, with a background of many peaks such as the Seven Sisters, Grey Beard, the Pinnacle, Clingman's Dome, and Mount Mitchell, the latter having an altitude of 6,711 meet, and the highest peak east of the Rockies.

DINNER DANCE AT PIEDMONT CLUB

Saturday evening the Piedmont club was the scene of the usual informal dinner-dance.

Dinner was served at flower-laden tables placed on the terrace. There were several dinners given in compliment to visitors, and a number of smaller parties of friends were dining together.

Among those entertaining at dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. George Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Fitzsimmons, Mr. and Mrs. Julius L. DeGive.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D Adair, Jr., entertained a party of friends in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Morgan McClung, of Knoxville. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. McClung, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Adair, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. George Kent Varden.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Riley entertained Mr. and Mrs. Nym McCullough and Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Moore.

A party of young people dining together included Miss Marion Goldsmith, Miss Ruth Stallings, Miss Mary Butler, Mr. Hal Hentz, Mr. Lynn Werner, Mr. Lewis Carhart, Mr. Wallace Draper and Mr. William Manry.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lewman had with them Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adger Smythe, Dr. and Mrs. Willis Westmoreland and Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sisson were together.

Others entertaining were Mr. Chauncey Smith, Mr. J. H. Nunnally, Mr. J. O. Harris, Mr. Milton Dargan, Jr., Mr. Jesse Draper and Mr. J. J. Ragan.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

BY THE COUNTESS OF BLANKSHIRE.

LONDON, July 26.—Different little stories about Queen Mary are almost daily coming to light, and each anecdote goes to prove how highly her majesty is esteemed. Many incidents have been related of the king on the famous visit to Berlin, and one we now hear of the queen is worth recording. The chaplain of the English church on the Monbijou Platz intimated to her majesty that by attending the service she would set a very encouraging and good example. "Perhaps this is so, but isn't it rather cheeky of me to say so?" Queen Mary answered in those very words. She thought, no doubt, that churchgoers ought not to need the presence of royalty as a fillip to their piety, and perhaps she remembered that Crathie church, near Balmoral, was unusually crowded when Queen Victoria attended it. The spirit of this "devotion" is wrong, but the sentiments of her majesty are right.

The summer fashion for women of wearing their collars so low as to be noticeably decollete even in the daytime has raised any amount of interesting comment among critical specimens of the male sex. A great ladies' man about town used to say the fashion threw an encouraging influence over a susceptible heart. Lately he has altered his opinion, and has nothing bad enough to say about it, and when a friend attired in a low cut shirtwaist asked what his objection was he told her he had been to a large ball and was horrified at the number of sunburnt necks marked in the pattern of their insufficient collars. A few days later he dined with the same lady, and was cynically amused at the obvious quantity of liquid powder she had applied in a vain attempt to hide what he described as high water mark.

Many people are under a very wrong impression with regard to the character of King George. He is not the casual, easy going monarch one was led to amiable disposition by no means synonymous with weakness, and his majesty has, to use a colloquial phrase, "got his back" on several occasions when it was unlooked for. A story is told of how a government official came to the king's signature to a document and wishing to be off in a hurry he hardly said that as it was of no importance it would not be necessary for the king to waste his time reading it through. His majesty, without glancing at the paper, put it aside with others on his desk, saying: Since it is of no importance it can wait."

A lady of means and position has this season chaperoned her niece, and from her house near Berkeley square has taken her to many social festivities. At a ball given by a friend at the Ritz hotel the young lady met a gentleman, who appeared to take a great fancy to her, and within a short time he made a proposal of marriage. He stated that he had a very wealthy aunt, who had made him her heir, provided he married according to her wishes. The man cautioned the girl and exhorted her to be agreeable to the old lady. He made arrangements for a meeting between the two, and without telling anyone but a maid in her confidence where she was going, she disappeared, ostensibly to meet the imaginary aunt of means. Nothing further was heard of her for some weeks, and lately a letter has arrived from New York saying she is safe and well.

A good deal of indignation exists among members of parliament on both sides of the house at the clumsy manner in which invitations were issued in connection with the approaching parliamentary visit to New Zealand. Members were invited to submit their names for the consideration of the promoters of the visit in the same way as clerks would be invited to a civil service examination. The result has been that no members of any standing whatever in the house will now be included in the party.

The absence of all the most prominent American-born society ladies from a recent ball has created quite a sensation. Speculation is rife as to why the lady, who gave the ball is so bitterly antagonistic to the Anglo-American set. The young society lady was quite unconscious of the fact that she was the cynosure of all eyes a few afternoons ago in Piccadilly, when she was told and informed her that there was something wrong with her attire deserves every credit for his gallantry, more especially as he is known to be exceedingly shy.

A famous American actor, well known on this side of the rolling pond, is stated to have given up the stage and taken a hotel.

"La Boheme" was the opera chosen by the king and queen for the command performance at Coven Garden. There was an all star cast, the principals in that Madame Melba and Signor Caruso appeared together. The gathering presented a brilliant spectacle, and the display of gowns and jewels was almost unparalleled. Her majesty was attired in a pale shade of blue, and diamonds were her ornaments, some stars of these stones being worn in her hair. The prince of Wales sat by the side of his royal mother, and his majesty occupied the omnibus box, which is situated beneath the royal loge. Princess Victoria accompanied the royal party and had a gown of black and white with traceries of diamonds.

A large contributor to the suffragettes' fighting fund is believed to be the wife of a prominent peer.

The authorities of our big hospitals are expectantly looking forward to the coming out of Miss Margaret Carnegie next year. Her millionaire father, in celebration of the event, is believed to be considering the question of granting large sums to many of them.

Who is the gentleman that, after being a member of a West End club for ever twenty years, has been given a hint that the committee would not take it amiss if he were to resign his membership?

A famous Berlin professor has so great an antipathy to women that he will not allow female students to attend his lectures.

Stringent precautions are being adopted at the royal mint to guard against any mallen designs of militant suffra*gettes, visitors to that institution* now being closely scrutinized, In addition to which, privileges hitherto allowed to the public are considerably restricted. Similar conditions prevail at the tower of London, and complaints are frequently heard as to the irksomeness of these restrictions.

Another international marriage is shortly to be dissolved and the lady, who is an Italian marchioness, intends to seek fame and fortune on the operatic stage.

The friends of a well-known lawyer are very much concerned at the frequent visits he pays to the pretty wife of a naval officer. The latter is away on his ship for the maneuvers, and the lawyer in question has been advised to "make himself scarce" while there is yet time, otherwise a sound drubbing will be his lot, in addition to figuring, as he undoubtedly will, in the divorce court.

In more than one West End club the librarian is worried at the present time by the mysterious disappearance of volumes which are in much request. At the same time newspapers disappear or are mutilated with painful frequency. The curious thing is that nobody can ever be detected doing this.

A breach of promise action against a scion of nobility by an actress has been avoided. The money requisite to solace the wounded affections of the young lady, though nothing like the gigantic sum obtained by Miss Markham from the marquis of Northampton, is yet a very substantial amount.

Every effort is being made to prevent the duchess of Orleans apply to the courts for a separation order against her husband, who, it will be recalled, is now in America. The duke is the Bourbon pretender to the French throne, and his recent escapades have given grave offense to his supporters and the Royalist cause generally in France.

Additions to Cox College Faculty

Cox college announces an unusually strong faculty for the coming season of 1913-1914. To the splendid corps already employed there have been several addition made.

Mr. Grover C. Koffman, A. M., of Union university and the University of Chicago, has been elected professor of mathematics.

Mrs. Grace Lee Brown-Townsend will be a splendid addition to the department of voice, being a graduate of New England Conservatory of Music and a pupil of Signor Rotoli and of Jean de Reszke, Paris.

The conservatory announces for the piano department Miss Virginia Pilsingim, a graduate of Cox College Conservatory and recent director of music in Newton college, North Carolina.

The college is to be congratulated on securing the services of Mrs. Curtiss Arnall-North as the head of the department of expression. Mrs. North is a graduate of Cox college and the American School of Elocution, Brooklyn; pupil of S. H. Clarke, University of Chicago.

The school of art has as the director Mrs. Mamie Holifield Montgomery, a graduate of the New York Art Students' league, pupil of Kenyon Cox and J. Alden Weir.

A very valuable accession to the conservatory department is Mr. Alexander von Skibinsky as professor of violin. Mr. Skibinsky is a graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Leipzig, an dalso of the Royal Conservatory of Berlin. He comes more highly recommended perhaps than any musician in America.

Heart-Dice Party

An event of the past week was the heart-dice party given by Miss Ruth Harbin at her home in honor of Miss Ethel Waterhouse, of Macon, Ga., and Miss Ethel Greene, of Columbus, Ga., who are the guests of Miss Lula Jackson.

"A Department of Famous Shoes"

Brenau, South's most Progressive College

BY Mary Carter Winter

"My business is not to remake myself,
But make the absolute best of what God made."--Browning

BRENAU TENNIS GIRL

To make the absolute best of every girl's possibilities is the aim of Brenau, the South's most progressive college for women. In order to fulfil this purpose, every phase of the girl's nature is taken into account; and, as far as possible, the college seeks an intimate knowledge of the girl's environment and training previous to her entry at Brenau.

Mothers and fathers are invited to confidential exchange of ideas as to what is best suited to their daughter's individuality; and, in particular, are requested to inform the management of any faults or undesirable tendencies that need to be corrected.

At Brenau education is not a haphazard cramming of many minds with a given amount of learning. It is an adaptation of knowledge to the needs of each girl and to the demands of the present day.

Literature, languages, history, science and all the higher intellectual studies form a conspicuous part of the college courses, but current history and practical training for twentieth century life are not neglected.

Musical instruction is under the direction of noted teachers and composers, and the School of Oratory offers unequalled advantages.

The Domestic Science work, first established by Brenau as an accredited part of the college courses, is comprehensive and practical, the domestic science cottage offering every opportunity for the student to learn household economy and science through actual experience.

The student's physical well-being is carefully considered. Gymnasium work is a part of each girl's duties, except when excused by physician's certificate, and a graduate nurse is in charge of the infirmary. The college physician is prominent in his profession, and while there is scarcely ever any illness at Brenau, adequate provision is made for caring for the sick.

The dormitories, class rooms and kitchens are beautifully clean, sanitary and most attractive.
Reservations for rooms should be made at once. The regular term will open September 11, and applications are coming in each day.

Illustrated catalogue on request.

MUSTARD COLORED LINEN

Mustard colored linen is made into a chic morning gown with trimming of Irish crochet balls and buttons.

The skirt is plain and not too narrow, with a simulated buttoned lap at the bottom of the front.

The waist is a simple kimono shape brought into a kind of peplum, which carries out the idea of the peasant blouse, with a white linen collar trimmed with Irish lace.

A pretty black and white hat and white low shoes with flat heels completes this costume.

Col. J. C. Woodward, President,
Georgia Military Academy, College Park, Ga.

My Dear Sir: I was recently upon your College Grounds, among your boys at work. I was greatly impressed with the general conduct of your teachers, pupils and entire surroundings. You have unquestionably an ideal school, a great responsibility, young boys from all points of the compass.

I sincerely trust you can teach each young life committed to your care with the same noble, manly purpose that your college life and influence have controlled in three of my boys, Will, Tharin and Brown. There is no mistake of their benefit received at your hands.

With cordial regards and wishes for continued success, I am,

Very truly yours, C. W. COOPER.

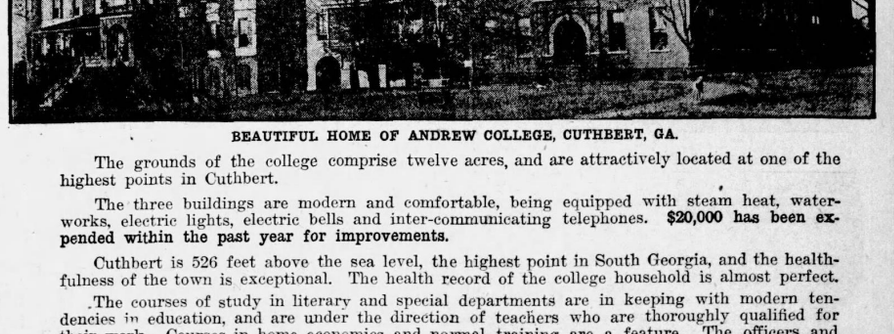
ANDREW COLLEGE

A DEMOCRATIC, CHRISTIAN HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS



BEAUTIFUL HOME OF ANDREW COLLEGE, CUTHBERT, GA.

The grounds of the college comprise twelve acres, and are attractively located at one of the highest points in Cuthbert.

The three buildings are modern and comfortable, being equipped with steam heat, waterworks, electric lights, electric bells and inter-communicating telephones. $20,000 has been expended within the past year for improvements.

Cuthbert is 526 feet above the sea level, the highest point in South Georgia, and the healthfulness of the town is exceptional. The health record of the college household is almost perfect.

The courses of study in literary and special departments are in keeping with modern tendencies in education, and are under the direction of teachers who are thoroughly qualified for their work. Courses in home economies and normal training are a feature. The officers and teachers number 17.

The cost is low, ranging from $178 to $196 for board, tuition and general fees. Additional charge is made for music, art and expression.

The president, his family, and all except one of the teachers, live in the college home. All know all the pupils by name, and take a personal interest in each. Since the boarding patronage is limited to 120, real home life is possible.

The spirit of the school is democratic and the atmosphere is Christian in a true sense. It is a wholesome place for a girl to live and grow in.

Dalton Social News

DALTON.—The marriage of Miss Eugenia Bitting and Dr. Harry Lee Jarvis was an event of Wednesday afternoon, the ceremony taking place at the First Baptist church at 4 o'clock, Rev. Edward Dyar, of Marietta, officiating. The church was decorated in palms, ferns and Southern smilax. The walls were trellised with smilax and about the altar palms, ferns and white lilies were banked. Strands of trailing lilies lights from white tapers spread a soft light. Miss Martha Bitting, of Summerville, was maid of honor. Her bouquet was of Killarny roses. Miss Bitting entered with her brother, Mr. Kelly Bitting, and was beautiful in her wedding gown og white charmeuse. Her flowers were bride roses and valley lilies.

Mr. J. H. Jarvis, of Washington, D. C., was best man.

A beautiful musical program was rendered.

Miss Bitting's beauty and charm of manner have made her a social favorite and it is a source of much pleasure to know that her marriage will not take her away from Dalton.

Dr. Jarvis is popular both in business and social circles since coming to Dalton from Gainesville, Fla. After several weeks at Atlantic Beach, they will be at home to their friends on Perry street.

Among the out-of-town guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Satterfield, of Macon, Dr. and Mrs. Will Patton, of Sweetwater, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Bitting and Miss Martha Bitting of Summerville, and Mr. J. H. Jarvis, of Washington, D. C.

Timely Swats Beat Crackers In Two Games

Neither Conzelman or Price Were Able to Get Away with Billiken Clan – First Score 2-0 and Second 3-2.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 26.—It was a sad day for the Crackers Saturday when the weather man finally decided to let them play the Billies a double header. Both games went to Johnny Dobbs' crew, 2 to 0 and 3 to 2.

In the first game Elmer Brown was invincible and held the heavy slugging Crackers at his mercy. He fanned ten men in the seven innings and only twenty-five faced him. Four hits were all that the Crackers could get off his delivery. Except in the innings when the four hits were made the Crackers went out one, two, three, in quick succession.

The Billies made heir two runs in the first and fourth innings. In the first Walker walked, was sacrificed to second, and scored on Sloan's screaming single through second. Later in the fourth, Elwert walked, went to second on Sloan's hit, and scored when Jantzen singled to center.

Sloan was the hitting star of the game, landing safe three ou of four times at bat. His hits came when needed and helped to drive in the runs.

Conzelman pitched a fair game, but the two men he walked scored, and the Billikins hit opportunely.

Bailey was out of Saturday's battles on account of a fractured bone in his leg. Manush took his place in left field.

The second game was much closer and there was a time when the Crackers had a chance to split even on the double bill. Gilbert Price went in the box for Atlanta but proved rather ineffective against the Billikins. In the two innings he pitched they scored their only run of the game, and hit him for four safeties.

Wallop Smith's wild throw, hitting Wares on the arm when a double steal was attempted, let in the Bill's first run. In the second inning Knaupp started the fireworks by poling a homer over the left field fence. Snedecor's safe hit, which Long let by him followed by Dibbens single scored the other run, the last the Billies made.

With two down in the fourth Manush tripled and scored on Dunn's double to the club house. Later in the fifth Long lost out a hit to short and scored on Alperman's triple to left but there was no one to send Whitey across the rubber.

The Crackers' best chance came in the second when with three men on bases Price and Agler both struck out.

Clark pitched good ball when he relieved Price and the Billikins only got one hit off his delivery.

The series was the Crackers' last appearance of the season in Montgomery. Here Montgomery they go to Mobile for four games and from there they go to Atlanta for a series of five games with the Vols in three days.

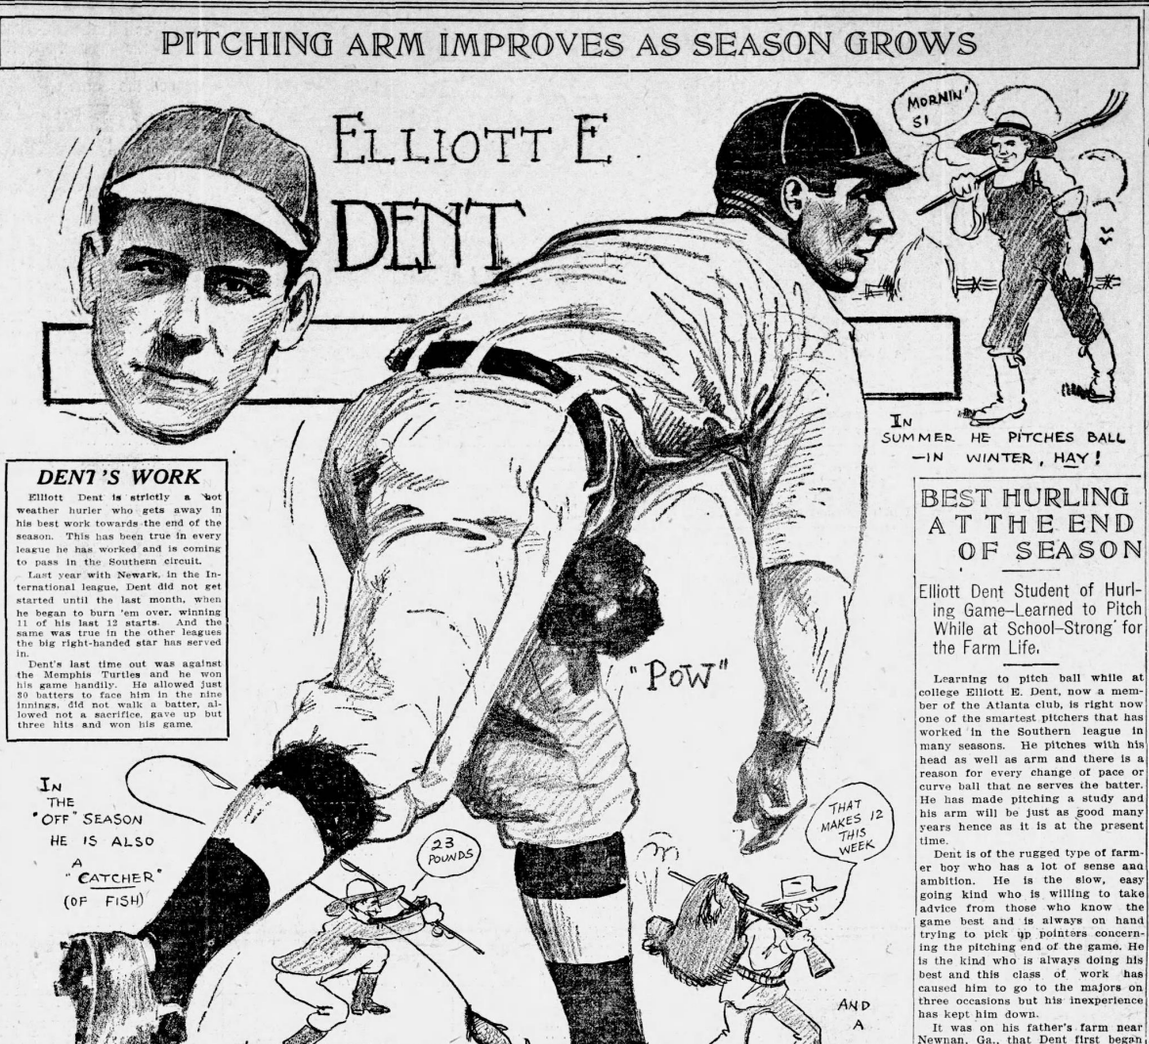
PITCHING ARM IMPROVES AS SEASON GROWS



DENT'S WORK

Elliott Dent is strictly a hot weather hurler who gets away in his best work towards the end of the season. This has been true in every league he has worked and is coming to pass in the Southern circuit.

Last year with Newark, in the International league, Dent did not get started until the last month, when he began to burn 'em over, winning 11 of his last 12 starts. And the same was true in the other leagues the big right-handed star has served in.

Dent's last time out was against the Memphis Turtles and he won his game handily. He allowed just 30 batters to face him in the nine innings. Did not walk a batter, allowed not a sacrifice, gave up but three hits and won his game.

BEST HURLING AT THE END OF SEASON

Elliott Dent Student of Hurling Game–Learned to Pitch While at School–Strong for the Farm Life.

Learning to pitch ball while at college Elliott E. Dent, now a member of the Atlanta club, is right now one of the smartest pitchers that has worked in the Southern league in many seasons. He pitches with his head as well as arm and there is a reason for every change of pace or curve ball that ne serves the batter. He has made pitching a study and his arm will be just as good many years hence as it is at the present time.

Dent is of the rugged type of farmer boy who has a lot of sense and ambition. He is the slow, easy going kind who is willing to take advice from those who know the game best and is always on hand trying to pick up pointers concerning the pitching end of the game. He is the kind who is always doing his best and this class of work has caused him to go to the majors on three occasions but his inexperience has kept him down.

It was on his father's farm near Newnan, Ga., that Dent first began playing ball on the back lots. In those days, which was some twelve years ago, Dent was considered unusually good at the twirling game and was much sought by neighboring towns whenever there was a big ball game to be played. This amateur ball kept up through the 1905 season when he entered the Charlotte-Hall Military college, of Maryland, and made a name for himself as a college hurler. He was at this school for three years and each season did good work and upon leaving college he was ripe for organized ball, signing with Winston-Salem in the Carolina league in 1909.

It took just one year with the California league for Dent to attract sufficient notice to be taken to the big show by the Brooklyn club. He was with Brooklyn just a short time and was sent to New Haven of the Connecticut league where he remained until the end of the season of 1911 when he was recalled by Brooklyn. Again the Dodgers let him go and in 1912 he was with the Newark club of the International league from where he was picked up by Washington and sent to Atlanta.

In all his career as a pitcher Dent has never been below the .500 mark in games won and lost. Even while with Brooklyn he managed to win as many as he lost. His strongest asset is a strong finish. A good example of this is shown in his work with Newark last season when he won eleven games of his last twelve.

In the winter Dent takes things easy on his big farm in Maryland. He tends the farm work, hunts, traps and fishes and at all he is perfectly at home. He has played strong for farm life all his years and knows about as much about the tending of the cows and raising of corn as he does the art of hurling. He is just twenty-four years of age and yet has many years of useful work as a hurler.

Team Showing Causing Fans Big Surprise

On Road Trip, Club Has Won but Three Games, While Six Have Been Lost–Montgomery and Mobile Going Good

Since quitting home soil for the last trip around the southern end of the circuit the Atlanta club has gone to pieces and is now playing decidedly ragged ball, the team not showing its real playing strength in any of the three series completed. The final stand is to be made in Mobile and unless the club comes through this better than is now expected the present road trip will be a dismal failure.

On the trip the club has played in 9 games with the result that six have proven losses and but three victories. This is entirely too poor a showing for a club with pennant aspirations, especially when it is figured that seven of the nine games were played with second division clubs. Against the league-leading Montgomery club the team played better ball than against Memphis and New Orleans, despite the fact that both ends of a double-header went the wrong way.

When the Cracker team left Atlanta there was a difference of just 2 1-2 games between first and third positions, with the second place bunch hardly half a game ahead of the occupants of third place, but now it is all different. The Atlanta club in third place is 5 1-2 games back of Montgomery and 4 games behind the Mobile team, which occupies second position. This difference to look at in figures appears rather small, but when a team goes to make it up it is vastly different.

First the Crackers went against the tail-end New Orleans club in four games and the result was an even split. This was a disappointment, but when the club traveled over to Memphis and dropped the best two in three every fan began to become displeased until the climax was added in Montgomery on Saturday with a two-ply defeat. This proved the straw which broke the camel's back and right now the fans are beginning to figure on second or third place instead of the rag.

STILL HAVE CHANCE.

While it is to be admitted that the showing of the club on the present road trip has proven a disappointment the team is not out of the running. Remember some twenty games are to be played on the home lot during August and the outcome of this batch of games will tell the tale. Every team in the league is yet to be played on the Ponce de Leon diamond, and a good showing against Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham will go a long way towards pulling down this fast flying trio and place Atlanta nearer the head of the procession.

The expected blow of the Montgomery and Mobile outfits has not materialized. Instead these two teams are going just as fast or possibly faster than within the past month and bid fair to hold their high positions. Both outfits are strong and it will take a mighty good crack from the opposition to put them out of the running. No two or three defeats will turn the trick, a bunch of consistent trouncings being the medicine needed to put Johnny Dobbs and Mike Finn down and out.

Apparently the main cause for the dowfall of the Crackers i the past few games has been the slump in batting. The pitchers have been turning up good games, but the batters have not been going out and getting the runs as they did some time ago. This may be caused by the hot climate the team is now playing in and may be on.y the lull before the outbreak the swatters intend going upon when Ponce de Leon park is again touched. Let us hope such is the case anyway.

Fishing Club For Atlanta

There is most everything now in Atlanta why not organize a bait and fly casting club? The sport is purely scientific and has interested thousands throughout Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and other of the northwestern states.

Mr. Allan Foogle, of the Columbus, Ohio, Anglers' club, is located permanently in Atlanta and he is very anxious to interest all true followers of Isaac Walton into forming such a club. The club would promote interest in scientific angling, assist in the protection and propagation of game fisheries and would hold tournaments in bait and fly casting.

Mr. Foogle says that either Piedmont or Lakewood would be excellent places for the holding of these tournaments. The targets could be set up easy enough. And he believed that once one of these tournaments was witnessed all the fishermen would be sure to be enthusiastic.

Mr. Foogle and Mr. Watson of the Yancey Hardware company, are doing all they can to see all the fishermen of the city and they hope in the near future to organize a club which would affiliate with a national organization.

Mr. Foogle stated that the club organized in Columbus, Ohio, two years ago had increased its membership from a few hundred to 14,000, so great was the enthusiasm for the sport of scientific angling.

If there are any in the city interested they should see Mr. Watson at Yancey Hardware company.

Mobile Next For Crackers

After Four Games With Mike Finn's Bunch, Crackers Return to Home Field

After dropping two games in Montgomery the Atlanta club moved over to Mobile and for the next four days will try conclusions with the Mike Finn outfit in an attempt to get started on a winning streak which will serve to place the club in the running for first position. Right now Mobile is in second place and a few wins for the Crackers will go a long way towards pulling the Gulls down a bit and at the same time raising the hopes of the Crackers.

Four games will be played with Mobile and on Thursday the Cracker clan gets home for a five-battle series with the Nashville club. These five games are to be played in three days and will necessitate the playing of two double headers. Right now the Vol bunch is slightly in the rut and the five games will give the Billy Smith crew a chance to climb a bit.

Following the five games with the Vols on the Ponce de Leon field the Atlanta team hikes to the other two cities in this division for series of games and then returns home to play some twenty battles. And right here is the chance of the Crackers to get higher in the race. In fact it is then or never. It will be in the nature of a last stand and the best must be made of it.

Montgomery to Hold to Team

At Big Meeting Arrangement Was Made That Will Assure Baseball

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 26.—Montgomery will retain the Southern league baseball franchise, and the club will be under a different management next season.

This was decided at a well attended and somewhat spicy mass meeting of business men and fans in the auditorium of the Business Men's league this morning. After having been accused of underhand methods of dealing with several Montgomery men who had an option on the franchise and after having left the ball and refusing to return to make an address ta the body, Richard Tillis, owner of the franchise made an offer which the meeting accepted.

Mr. Tillis' offer was that those interested buy the franchise for $16,800 less the sum for players solds, amounting to $4,000, which would leave a net total of $12,800 to be paid for the franchise.

The offer will remain open for five days. Mr. Tillis offers to entirely relinquish his interest in the club or to take as much stock or twice as much as any other man. A committee of five was appointed to raise the funds and arrange the details of the transfer.

PAYNE CUP FOR GOLFERS

Forty-eight golfers qualified over the East Lake course Saturday afternoon for the J. Carroll Payne trophy. The rain kept many away from the qualifying round, but the list nevertheless includes some of the city's best talent.

J. K. McDonald was first with a low score of 74.

In all future matches handicaps will prevail. The finals must be played by August 3.

Sheriff Ends Bout

PUT-IN-BAY, O., July 26.—The scheduled eight-round bout between Kid Julian, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Cal Delaney, of Cleveland, featherweights, was stopped two minutes before the close of the last round this afternoon by Sheriff Wolfe, of Ottawa county. Delaney had a shade the better of the fight.

PLAN LONG TEAM RACE FOR THE MOTOR RIDERS

Matchmaker Now Endeavoring to Arrange for Thirty-Mile Team Race Tuesday

The great interest manifested in the twenty-six-mile Marathon race at the motordrome Friday night has caused the promoters to decide upon an even longer race for the big meeting being planned for Tuesday evening. Right now it is the idea of the matchmaker to have a thirty-mile team race in connection with several other good events between the leading riders at the track.

The Marathon race which was contested Friday night called for 105 trips around the track and was finally won by Jock McNeil after one of the prettiest and most consistent races ever witnessed here. Now it is proposed to pair the racers into five teams and have each team circle the track 129 times for a big purse.

In running a thirty-mile team race all ten racers would be on the track continuously, five riding at their fastest clip, while the remaining five would be taking it slowly around the lower edge of the track ready to jump in on a moment's notice and aid their partner. Such an arrangement would tend to make the racers keep high on the track, all of which makes a race very thrilling.

For some twenty miles in Friday's Marathon race Tex Richards and Jock McNeil did by far the prettiest racing ever seen on the local track. Such can be expected on Tuesday night, when the crack boys get on the track in the big team race of thirty miles. One advantage a team race has over a Marathon such as was contested Friday night is the relieving by the different racers. This makes it far more interesting and does not put a team out of the race just because one man happens to have an accident such as put Richards out of the running after he had kept right in the running for so long a time.

Besides the big team race it is probable that two or three match events will be run with a motordrome event in which all riders will get a chance to show. The racing fans are now clamoring for a match race of some ten miles between McNeil and Richards, the two big favorites, and it is possible that such a race will be carded for the next meet. These two boys certainly know how to run a motor, and a race for blood would be well worth while.

The entire card will be announced on Monday, and it promises to include a number of real good events.

Voss Copped In Good Game

Timely Hitting by the Macon Players Enabled the Game to Be Won

MACON, Ga., July 26.—With Voss pitching superb ball backed by timely hitting by his colleagues, Macon took the last game of the series from Columbus, 3 to 1, today. Matthews' triple with two on the bases in the third inning won the game for the locals.

Macon has recalled Pitcher Gordon from Valdosta; Thackham probably will be released. Outfielder Mayes, from Selma, Ala., has been signed to relieve McLain.

Savannah Hurler Gave Up Two Hits and Albany Club Is Loser

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 26.—Favored by the breaks, Savannah took the third and final game with Albany 2 to 1 in the tenth inning today, thereby making a clean sweep of the series.

Robertson and Luhrsen pitched brilliant ball throughout, a bad bound and a single in the tenth giving the locals the game with none down. Handiboe and Dowell starred with the stick. Score:

Welchonce Is Champ Batter Of Southern

Kid Elberfeld Has Better Average Than Cracker, but Has Not Played Often—Long Leads the Run Getters

Harry Welchonce has finally worked himself to second place among the Southern league hitters, being back of Kid Elberfeld, who has not been in the game for the past month. Elberfeld has an average of .349, while the Atlanta crack is hitting .336.

While Welchonce has been climbing steadily Tommy Long and Wallace Smith, the other two Crackers who are candidates for batting honors, have clomped a bit. Long having an average of .316 and Smith .312. With the falling down of Long and Smith, Gribbens, Messenger, Sloan and Knisely have come strong and are up in the select class, all having averages better than .320.

Not only does Welchonce top the list with his batting percentage of .336, but he has more hits than any other player in the circuit, 127 being his total output through the games of Tuesday. And he is just one bag shy of taking the slugging mark from Davy Robertson, of Mobile. Long leads in the number of runs with 74.

McDonald Has Climbed Fast

Boston Youngster Climbs Batting Ladder More Rapidly Than Older Opponents—Red Smith Coming Strong

Just as fast as Jake Daubert boosts his batting average Charles McDonald, the Boston youngster, tries the same stunt with the result that the Bostonian is holding on to batting honors in the National circuit. This lad has an average of .373, with Daubert next in line with .357.

The number of .300 hitters in the National league is amazingly large this season and shows either an inferior class of hurling or some mighty good batting. There are just 22 batters over the .300 mark and some ten or a dozen are dangerously near it, the leaders not being any too great to make up in the game.

Red Smith, the Atlanta boy starring at the third bag with Brooklyn, has been up to hit and has boosted his mark to .330, and promises to be in select company before the season is much older. Red has made 84 hits for a total of 161 bases, ranking fourth in the league in total base hitting. Myers, of Boston, with 21 stolen bases tops the league with Lobert doing the pursuing stunt.

VIEWS OF PUTTING GREENS AT CAPITAL CITY CLUB GOLF COURSE

Prough Leads Hurlers' Race

Coveleskie Has Been Passed by Both Prough and E. Brown in Tight Race

Both Prough, of Birmingham, and Elmer Brown, of Montgomery, have now passed Pole Coveleskie in the race for Southern league hurling honors. Prough topping the hurlers with 15 wins and 4 defeats, while Brown is next in line with 16 wins and 5 downfalls.

Third on the list comes Coveleskie with 19 wins and 6 defeats and then you find Conzelman, an Atlantian, with 5 wins and 2 defeats. Pug Cavet then shows up with 17 wins and 8 defeats and then comes Gil Price with 12 wins and 6 losses.

Atlanta has three regular hurlers who are over the .500 mark—Conzelman, Price and Dent being the trio. Thompson since joining the Crackers has also pitched better ball than an even break, his bad start with Birmingham, where he won 2 and lost 11, being responsible for his poor average.

Here are the figures on the hurlers above the .500 mark:

Eliminations for Sonder Boat Race

BOSTON, July 26.—Special trial races for the sonder class boats eligible to compete for the President Wilson and Governor Foss cups will be sailed August 16, 18 and 19, and on such succeeding days as may be deemed advisable, according to the announcement made by the Eastern Yacht club.

It is the intention to sail several races each day off Marblehead Rock, the first race of each day to be started at 11 a. m., or as soon thereafter as may be expedient.

In the first races before eliminations are made, the boats will be raced in two divisions.

Jerry Jerome, an aboriginal, is a freak pugilist of Australia. He fights at 154 pounds, is 42 years old and stands with his right hand out. Jerome's manager has a contract, not with Jerome, but with the Queensland government, which sees that the aboriginal's interests are protected.

CAPITAL CITY CLUB'S GOLFING COURSE IS NOW IN GOOD SHAPE

Putting Greens Are Smooth, While Fair Greens Are Being Improved

With putting greens like velvet, the most excellent of natural hazards and steady improvement on the fair courses the golf course of the Capital City club at Brookhaven is fast becoming one of the most popular in the city and is causing scores of club members to take up the game as the best form of exercise. It is only lately that such interest has been manifested in the golf course at the country home of the Capital City club but from the way the enthusiasm is constantly growing it is apparent that it will ever be most popular.

The nine hole course at the Capital City club's country place was built just a little over one year ago by the Brookhaven Country club and has been carefully looked after until even at this early date it presents the appearance of a real golf course. The fair and putting greens have received especial attention and have become most excellent.

When the course was laid out it was with an idea of making it of the sporty variety and the movement met with success for there is no more sporty nine hole course anywhere in this country than the links at Brookhaven. It has every known natural hazard including streams, hills, woods, sand pits, swamps and bunkers. And the beauty about them all is that they do not have to be constantly repaired and are not such a great trouble to keep in shape.

When the course was first taken hold of by the Capital City club it had run down just a bit but in the last three months the Capital City golfers have taken hold of it and have succeeded in improving it wonderfully. And this improvement will steadily go forward until the course is ideal and nine more holes are added. There are enough members now playing the game to warrant a larger and better course and this is to be the outcome.

PUTTING GREENS SMOOTH.

The brag part of the Brookhaven course is the putting greens. Since instructor McKenzie took charge of the course he has built up this end of the course in amazingly fast style and right now the greens are as good as any in the country, for it is practically an impossibility to get them any better. They are just as smooth as a floor and as soft as a Brussels carpet.

In carrying through his work on the putting greens McKenzie has been greatly aided by Mr. Julian McGill, who is chairman of the putting greens committee. Mr. McGill is a believer in the golf game and realizing that it is essential to have good putting greens to have a good golf course he has greatly aided McKenzie in improving this end of the course.

Right now the main need at the Brookhaven course is better fair greens. This end of the work the club officials are now becoming interested in and work has already been started in an effort to put them in as good shape as the putting greens. From a trip over the course it can be seen that much work has recently been done on the fair greens and just as soon as the newly-planted grass gets any growth and the ground becomes smooth the course will have a lot of "roll" and will be ideal.

HAVE SPORTY HOLES.

The second, fifth and sixth holes of the course are all short yet they require the most accurate of playing to get them in anything like bogey. The second hole is a short pitch of 153 yards to a near island. Should you fall short you get in trouble and if you go too far you are in the woods, a perfect shot to a small fair green being necessary for a good score.

The fifth hole is a shot of 208 yards from the top of one hill to another. To get a good line it is necessary to mount the hill on the fly, there being practically no roll to the ball. The sixth hole is very much like the second, being just 125 yards. It is another of the near island kind, with a very small space to pitch upon. If you get on the fair green, which is practically the putting green, on your first shot you are almost sure of bogey, but unless you do there is trouble ahead.

The seventh hole of 442 yards is the longest on the course. This calls for a shot across a part of the lake, and, owing to the slant of the fair green, is extremely hard to play in bogey. The first, third and eighth holes are all in the 300-yard class, with the others much shorter.

The distance around the course is 2,567 yards, with a bogey of 39. While the course is short and bogey apparently large, this is made necessary owing to the many hazards and hilly condition of the land.

PRESIDENT'S TROPHY.

The first real big tournament ever held over the course is for the president's cup, and will be started on Saturday. By that time the links will be in jam-up shape, and it is expected that some fifty players will enter.

The players will qualify according to their net scores, and the handicaps will apply in each of the flights. It will take a week to complete the play in each of the flights, with a trophy for the winner in each.

PLANS FOR THE 1914 RACE MADE BY LOOKOUT OUTFIT

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 26.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914, the continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

The talk of the future was precipitated by the report that emanated from baseball headquarters to the effect that Mike Giddo, who is farmed out to Troy may be drafted by the majors and lost to the locals. Giddo, who was farmed out to make room for Hannah, much to the present sorrow of fandom, is now playing a sensational ball and a number of scouts are looking him over. It seems a certainty that he will be lost to the Yeoegans, as under their contract with Troy they cannot recall him until the close of the season.

The interest in Giddo is accentuated by the belief that Street will not be a Lookout next year. There is every possibility that Gabby will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club, but if he is not, it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $100 per month.

Street is in as good condition as ever in his life, and he realizes the fact; also that he is worth more than the local club can pay him. Street signed with the locals this year purely as a matter of experiment to determine whether or not he was really passing or merely suffering from overwork and the climate in the east. He suffered a tremendous cut with philosophic equanimity for the purpose of securing the benefits which a season beneath a hot sun would give him. And Gabby has been amply repaid. He is now ten pounds lighter than he was when he entered the big leagues and in better condition. The rheumatism which bothered him has entirely disappeared, as it was due to uric acid, which has been driven out of his system by excessive perspiration. It's back to the majors or no more baseball with Street.

Douglas Takes Game

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DOUGLAS, Ga., July 26.—Douglas defeated Nashville here Friday by a score of 4 to 2, making three straight victories. Batteries: Douglas, Eubanks and Meredith; Nashville, Luke and Morris.

Football season in the east will begin on Saturday, September 20, the Carlisle Indians playing Albright college at Carlisle that day.

Demaree Tops Hurling Gang

Ex-Southern League Star Has 8 Wins and 2 Defeats, Matty Goes Good

Al Demaree, once a Mobile flinger, is now tied for the National league pitching honors with Humphries, of the Chicago Cubs. Both have an average of .800, which includes 8 wins in 10 starts.

Christy Mathewson, the veteran, is the real leader of the circuit, however, as he has participated in 22 games, getting 17 wins and but 5 defeats. Next in line is Seaton, of the Phillies, with 15 wins and 5 defeats.

Here are the records of all flingers over the .600 mark:

Speaker Now In the Race In American

Cobb, Jackson and Speaker Will Have Lively Time Before the Batting Race Is Over—Jackson Now Leads

The American league batting race is fast becoming a three-cornered affair, Tris Speaker, of Boston, having entered the battle with Joe Jackson and Tyrus Cobb. Jackson still retains his lead with Cobb in second place, but Speaker is not far behind and coming fast.

Jackson through the games of Wednesday had a batting average of .397, with Cobb holding .388 and Speaker, .379. In the matter of hitting Speaker tops Jackson, who leads in most every other department of play. Speaker has made 127 hits against 125 for Jackson. At total base hitting Speaker is also at the front, his singles totaling 196 bags against 192 for Jackson.

During the past week there has been a slight dropping off in the .300 hitters, showing that the warm weather is getting the hurlers in good shape. The leaders at the hitting game have shown very little slumping, yet many others have fallen off considerably.

Here are the figures of the batters who are over the .280 mark through the games of Wednesday:

Boehling Best Among Hurlers

Young Washington Star Has Not Lost Game—Has Won 11 in a Row

With a string of eleven straight wins Joe Boehling, the sensational young left-hander of the Washington club, is topping the American league twirlers. Not a game has Boehling lost this season.

Among the hurlers who have worked in a large number of games the race is between Walter Johnson, Eddie Plank, Chief Bender, Cy Falkenberg and Joe Wood. All these stars have worked in from 15 to 25 games this year and each is well up, none losing more than six games.

Here are the averages of all twirlers who have a percentage better than .600:

Automobile Owners, Attention!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEAL solves the tire trouble.

The formula for PUNCTURE SEAL was discovered by one of the South's leading Chemists, will not injure rubber and is the only preparation known to this Chemist that is being used for a tire remedy that will not freeze or expand.

PUNCTURE SEAL injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes, and lessen blow-outs by eliminating Rim Cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not harden or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEAL prevents punctures and preserves tubes, is not a filler and only adds nine to fifteen pounds to the weight of a car. PUNCTURE SEAL pays for itself many times a season by preventing Punctures and Rim Cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEAL than any of our imitators. Don't experiment, but use PUNCTURE SEAL.

Good territory open to agents who write us at once. We are in the business to stay, and we will stick to the trade.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TUBES AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEAL.

Motorcycles $2.50
Automobiles, 30x3-3½x4 ..... 7.00 per car
Other sizes in proportion.

Puncture Seal Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

I have examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEAL," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) EDGAR EVERHART (Chemist.)

B. F. GOODRICH COMPANY MARKING TRANSCONTINENTAL ROUTES

An interesting announcement comes from Akron, Ohio, to the effect that The B. F. Goodrich company are now erecting the Goodrich road markers on two of the official transcontinental routes, one via the Santa Fe Trail and the other through Denver, Salt Lake City and Reno to San Francisco.

The transcontinental road marking will be completed in time for the summer tours of 1914 and this will mean that motorists will find the familiar and welcome Goodrich road marker at every turn of the road from Boston and New York to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

A number of Goodrich road marking trucks and erecting crews are already undertaking the job and they will be kept hustling on this work, which will add so much to the comfort and pleasure of touring by eliminating chances of "striking the wrong road."

Since the idea was first conceived by The Goodrich company of aiding its millions of tire friends by erecting attractive and substantial guide posts, it has surveyed roads in every state in the union, connecting the larger cities, and they are now compiling authentic guide books with maps and complete data. These already prepared have proved a boon to motorists.

Thousands upon thousands of dollars have been spent in this service to the motoring public. In securing the best possible talent in designing and buying the most legible and attractive guide posts, and in erecting them on public highways so that they could be easily read and know where he is and where the road is leading.

Mr. E. C. Tibbitts, advertising manager of The B. F. Goodrich company, stated that although the erecting of the posts on the official transcontinental routes marks the realization of one of the objects of the Goodrich touring bureau, yet the department will always be maintained where their national road data is absolutely complete and for the purpose of maintaining other work already accomplished in excellent condition.

"It is our intention," said Mr. Tibbitts, "to provide at all times the latest information as to the best means of getting from some place to somewhere.

"We shall watch, as heretofore, the construction of new roads and all road improvements and we will promptly advise motorists, provided the new road offers a better, safer or more comfortable trip.

"Our road maps comprise data bearing on roads in nearly every state in the union and they are unquestionably the most authentic as well as the most complete to be found anywhere in the United States. All the larger cities have been connected with road log descriptions showing the turns in the road, mileages, etc.

A 10,000-MILE RIDE AROUND NEW YORK CITY

A five-passenger National car has just completed a remarkable tour of more than 10,000 miles for the purpose of testing tires. While the test, observed and recorded by the Testing Laboratory officials of the Automobile Club of America, was primarily for tires, it is also an unusual demonstration for the National car. During the four 495 hours were spent in actual running during the 95 touring days. The total mileage was 10,017 miles, with an average speed of 20.2 miles per hour. The maximum speed attained was sixty miles an hour. There was no effort made for speed, but rather a consistent steady gait, the car making an average of 105.4 miles per day, over different roads and various routes within a radius of fifty miles of New York City. One-fourth of the tota lmileage was made over city streets; one-eighth over soft roads of bad condition, and 2 per cent of the total mileage was up steep grades. No shock absorbers were used. The car was kept under lock and key of nights. The test, for which this National car performed consistently with utter satisfaction, was made for Overman cushion tires.

GLIDDEN TOUR FURNISHES ADDITIONAL PROOF OF THE EFFICIENCY OF LOW PRICE CARS

Also Shows That the Gearless Transmission Is Equal to Any Emergency

The recent running of the Glidden Tour, in which both the Glidden and Minneapolis News trophies were captured by the Metz "22" roadster, demonstrates conclusively that it is possible to build a thoroughly good car to sell at a conspicuously low price.

The team of three Metz stock cars that were entered in the Glidden Tour were the only team in the race to maintain a perfect score for the entire eight days of the contest, and it must be admitted that they completely vanquished their competitors, although many of them sell at from five to ten times the price of the Metz "22," which is $475.00 completely equipped. The nearest competitor to the Metz was able to show a perfect score for only the first two days of the contest.

The performance of the Metz is all the more interesting because of the fact that before entering the tour it made a remarkable non-stop record run of 2,600 miles from Boston to Minneapolis in 90 hours, thereby beating its own schedule by 6 hours, and in spite of the enforced covering of more than 100 miles additional because of losing the road.

The course of the Glidden Tour this year was from Minneapolis to Glacier National Park, a distance of some 1,300 miles. Through Minnesota and Dakota numerous long stretches of bad roads were encountered, and in Montana the roads through the Rocky Mountains presented grades and other features of difficult traveling that put many of the contestants out of commission. But the three Metz cars negotiated all these problems handily, and at the conclusion of the run were practically in perfect condition.

The Metz team was the last to leave the noon control station on the final day of the run but they soon passed all the contestants ahead and ten miles from the finish actually caught the pacemaker and crowded him over the last mountain range, finishing the last lap of the tour with twenty minutes to spare.

Incidentally, the outcome of this contest further agitates the question as to whether the gear transmission is really as efficient and desirable as it has generally been supposed to be; for the Metz, which is a gearless car, and which carried off the honors so easily, was the only gearless car in the tour.

COLE CARS ARE BUILT OF STANDARDIZED PARTS

At a meeting of the most representative men in the automobile industry in Indianapolis the new standardized type of automobile was formally launched. These men had been called together at the request of President J. J. Cole, originator and builder of the third and new type of automobile, and represented a total aggregate capitalization of better than $50,000,000.

The object of the conference, as outlined by President Cole, was to ascertain how best to scientifically handle the problems of volume and overhead, with the object in mind of increasing the quality of the motor car and at the same time reducing its cost to the user.

The companies who were represented were Timken Detroit Axle company, Northway Motor and Manufacturing company, Mayo Radiator company, Gemmer Manufacturing company, Spicer Manufacturing company, Detroit Steel Products company, Hydraulic Pressed Steel company, Janney-Steinmetz & Co., Firestone Tire and Rubber company, Warner Instrument company, Stromberg Motor Devices company, Collins Curtain company, Taylor Tire Pump company and Dayton Engineering Laboratories company.

Cassidy Starter Saratoga Events

NEW YORK, July 26.—Mars Cassidy, the veteran starter has been appointed by the Jockey club to start the barrier during the Saratoga meeting next month. Old-timers remember well the work of Cassidy at the local tracks when racing was at its height, years ago, and his selection to officiate at the Saratoga course gives general satisfaction.

Other officials approved by the Jockey club for the Saratoga meet are: Judges, C. H. Pettingill and E. C. Smith; handicapper, W. S. Vosburgh; clerks of the scales, H. U. Homan; patrol judge, J. L. Hall; timer, W. H. Earrette. F. R. Hitchcock was appointed steward to represent the Jockey club.

Final Matches Reached In Tennis Tournament

OMAHA, Neb., July 26.—Merrill Hall, New York, and John Strachan, San Francisco, won their matches in singles and Saturday they play for the singles championship of the fourth national clay court tennis tournament. Hall beat Clarence Griffin, San Francisco, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 12-10. Strachan defeated Fred Harris, Brattleboro, Vt., 5-7, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4.

Harris became ill during play and the matches in doubles were postponed.

At first Harris kept Strachan on the jump. He weakened in the next set, while the Californian continued in form. Harris seemed refreshed after a short rest, though he played a great game, he lost the next two sets and the match.

John Strachan, of California, beat Fred Harris, of Vermont, in the semi-finals, three sets to one.

Merrill Hall, New York, beat Clarence Griffin, California, in the semi-finals, three sets to one. He will meet Strachan for the championship.

Boston Gets Away

BOSTON, Ga., July 26.—News was received last night that Boston won over the fast Moultrie team in a game played there Friday afternoon by a score of 5 to 4. A double-header was scheduled, but only one game was played. According to reports, the game developed into a pitchers' battle between "Kid" Blanton and Frank Norman, and for a long time victory seemed hanging in the balance. Blanton's spit ball was very effective, Cooper and Vann made some star plays for Boston, while Varine starred at the bat for Moultrie.

This game breaks a successive line of victories for Moultrie and makes Boston the winner of eleven out of fourteen games played.

ABOUT AS EASY TO SELL SPECKS TO A BLIND MAN AS TO SELL AUTOMOBILES IN ADEN, ARABIA

Of the 45,000 people in Aden, probably 200 are European, comprising in the most part English army officers, city officials and merchants. Probably one-fourth of the Europeans have incomes large enough to permit the purchase of inexpensive motor cars.

There are sixteen cars in Aden, of which six motor buses are practically useless. There is one 3 1-2-ton French motor truck. Only two of these cars are American, but one owner proposes to introduce six Paige cars as public vehicles, and has already ordered two. The people here formerly did not take to the low-price American car, but of late have conceded its merits.

GRAND WORK BY HURLERS

CORDELE, Ga., July 26.—A record that sets a precedent in class D ball, and which will compete with the record of any higher class league was made by Fillingem and "Baby" Wilder, pitchers on Cordele's staff in a double-header against Waycross Wednesday. Fillingem went nine innings to a shut-out game, allowing no hits. In a six-inning game Wilder allowed no hits and struck out nine men, no runner touching second.

Fillingem is one of the best spitball artists in any class of ball and Wilder holds the record of fifteen games won out of seventeen pitched by him, since the opening of the Empire State league. Such swift twirling practically assures these youngsters a berth in some of the big leagues before many seasons. Some of the big league scouts have been in Cordele for the past several days looking them over, and their impression of them is altogether favorable.

LONG DISTANCE GOLF NOW BECOMING FAD

LONDON, July 26.—Long distance golfing has become a fad in England. Two golfers recently undertook to play from Maidston to Littlestone-on-Sea, a distance of about thirty-five miles, in 2,000 strokes. They succeeded in doing it in 1,987 strokes. In a similar contest with a bet as an incentive, Melville Fouter and W. Harmon undertook to cover the eight miles of wood and heather and steep hills from Forest Road to Crowborough in 230 strokes. They succeeded in 184 strokes, without losing a ball.

Director Resigns

ALBANY, Ga., July 26.—Emil Schlenker, who has been the physical director of the Albany Y. M. C. A. since it began operations about a year ago, has resigned his position here and will take up similar work at Waycross, beginning August 1.

Mr. Schlenker came to Albany from Jacksonville, where he was assistant physical director. He is considered one of the best young physical directors in the south, and when he decided to leave Albany he had offers from many of the larger cities of the south, including Mobile, New Orleans, Nashville and others. He also received an offer to go to his old home town, Haverhill, Massachusetts, which he at first accepted, but later yielded to the advice of those high in authority in southern Y. M. C. A. work to stay in the south, where men of his ability in the work are badly needed.

MANUFACTURER AND ENGLISH ENGINEER HAVE SNOW FIGHT

Amusing Incident Occurs in Rockies on Indiana-Pacific I. A. M. A. Tour

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—The frozen-roasted crowd of Indiana-Pacific tourists who arrived here to tumble into real feathers for a brief respite from mountain camps told with many a laugh, an amusing incident of their long hike across the big hills. The two Haynes cars, the first one bearing Elwood Haynes, "the man from Kokomo," and inventor of the first gasoline automobile in America, and the second carrying C. A. Branston, a noted English engineer, on reaching the summit of the Continental Divide ran into a real old-fashioned winter up amongst the clouds. The sight of snow in summer was such a novelty to Branston that he could not resist the temptation to get down into the white flakes, roll up a snow ball in American school boy fashion and pelt it at the distinguished patriarch of the automobile industry. Not to be outdone by Mr. John Bull's representative, Mr. Haynes, despite his fifty-five years, tripped out of his six and returned the fire. The fierceness of the struggle bade fair to make serious inroads into the snow crop, when Robert Crawford arrived upon the scene waving a towel which he asserted was a flag of truce, whereupon both sides united to administer Bonnie Scotland a drubbing. When the grease and grime had been duly transferred from Crawford's face to Mother Earth's ivory mantle, Crawford was permitted to join his comrades in Haynes' car number twelve, Branston and Haynes electing to continue the journey in the other Haynes entry.

METZ "22"

REGULAR STOCK CAR

WINS GLIDDEN TOUR

Capturing Both the Glidden and Minneapolis News Trophies

It Was a Clean Sweep, too, and the LOWEST PRICED CAR in the Race Did It!

The Glidden Tour this year started at Minneapolis, Minn., on July 11, and terminated at Glacier National Park, Montana, on July 19, the course covering more than 1,300 miles and embracing stamina-testing stretches of rough roads in Minnesota and Dakota and monumental hills in the Rocky Mountains of Montana.

The team of three METZ "22" regular stock cars was the ONLY TEAM holding a PERFECT score for the entire eight days from start to finish. The nearest competitor had a perfect score for only the first two days of the tour.

The METZ team of regular stock cars was last to leave noon control on last day of tour, passed all those ahead, caught the pace-maker ten miles from the finish and crowded him over the last mountain range, finishing the last lap of tour with 20 minutes to spare.

And this on top of the fact that the METZ "22," before entering the Glidden Tour contest, made a remarkable non-stop record of 1,600 miles from Boston to Minneapolis in 90 hours, beating its own schedule by 6 hours in spite of having to drive over 100 miles additional on account of losing the road.

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED
1914 IMPROVEMENTS

METZ "22"

THE GEARLESS CAR

No Clutch to Slip---No Gears to Strip

$475

WE have told you, time and again, that the METZ "22" is the very essence of EFFICIENCY and DEPENDABLE CONSTRUCTION. Now, with its remarkable performance a matter of official record, we tell you, again, that the METZ "22" will travel from 28 to 32 miles on ONE gallon of gasoline, 100 miles on ONE pint of lubricating oil, and from 10,000 to 12,000 miles on a single set of tires.

In operation and upkeep it is the most economical car on the market. It is the lowest-priced car. It is extremely graceful in lines and proportions. It will climb hills as fast as any regular stock car made; in fact, it takes many hills on the high speed that are steep enough to force the big touring cars to drop back onto low speed. Its gearless transmission entirely does away with aggravating and expensive "gear troubles."

The METZ "22" is a fully guaranteed roadster car of the torpedo semi-enclosed type, left hand drive and center control.

It is equipped with 4-cylinder 22½ h. p. water cooled motor, Bosch magneto, wind shield, extension top with cover slip and curtains, full elliptic springs all around, standard artillery wheels, best quality Goodrich clincher tires, five lamps and gas generator, horn, pump, and tool outfit, and makes from 5 to 50 miles per hour on the high speed.

Champ Ritchie Out to Fight Any Claimant

Champion Announces That He Will Meet Any Worthy Opponent if Clubs Will Offer Purses Worth While

NEW YORK, July 26.—A review of the present fistic situation brings out the fact that the only big matches possible just now are between boxers in the lightweight division. All the other classes are in a state of quiescence, but among the lightweights there are several big attractions possible.

Fortunately, Champion Ritchie has announced that he means to change his ways. Instead of withdrawing the title from competition for long periods he says he means to keep active in the future, defending his honors as often as the promoters will furnish a purse worth striving for. Ritchie reached this decision after coming to the conclusion that there is far more money to be made out of fighting than stage work.

With the champion in a righting mood there only remains the question of selecting the next opponent for him. The sentiment out in California, where the bout will most likely take place, seems to be in favor of Freddie Welsh, the English champion. Ritchie himself, imbued with confidence by his recent victory over Joe Rivers, is anxious to wipe out the memory of the decision that Welsh holds. A victory over Welsh would make Ritchie champion of the world, whereas he would gain no further honors by defeating his American rivals.

However, if Ritchie is sincere in his warlike declaration, Cross, Britton, Murphy and the rest of them will get their chance before another year rolls around, provided Ritchie does not stumble over the Welsh obstacle. In meeting the clever Englishman Ritchie will encounter the most scientific of his challengers.

The fact that Ritchie is willing to tackle Welsh first speaks well for his confidence in himself. Welsh has but one real black mark against him—a decision lost to Matt Wells. Even Packey McFarland could do little with Welsh. Although the Chicago wizard got one doubtful verdict out of three meetings, McFarland has little to boast of as a result of his encounters with Welsh. No other lightweight has been able to stand off McFarland, and on this figuring Welsh must be given credit for being the most scientific boxer who is able to make the lightweight limit. He should be an even money bet against Ritchie.

BRITTON IS CLEVER.

In point of cleverness based on his record in general, Jack Britton ranks next in the list of Ritchie's possible opponents. But Britton has already been beaten by Ritchie and of late his work has not been impressive. The best he could expect would be a close decision on points. He should be on the short end at about 10 to 6.

Leach Cross ranks third and on account of his ring cunning and terrific hitting he should be able to stage a more interesting struggle than either of the two light hitters who precede him. If Cross won it would be by a knockout, which many believe is the only way a championship should change hands. As Cross does not show up well against a boxer who can hit harder than 1 to 2, but he ought to make things decidedly unpleasant for Ritchie as long as he lasts.

Tommy Murphy is being mentioned as a candidate, but it is hard to see where he would have a chance worth considering. Murphy has been beaten by most of New York's second raters, including K. O. Brown, before whom he went down in one round. The circumstances that surround that affair were decidedly suspicious. If there is any truth in the "inside stories" that went the rounds afterward Murphy does not deserve any consideration whatever.

Gate City Wins

The Gate City nine defeated the Piedmonts in a fast game, 6-3. Rain broke up the game in the fifth inning. The Gate City team hit hard, but were not able to score. Fast fielding featured for the Piedmonts.

Youth Winner Over Old Star

BOSTON, July 26.—Youth had its way at Longwood today, veteran tennis players going down to defeat before the younger representatives in the semi-final rounds of the eastern doubles championships and the all-comers' tournament for singles. It was a day of upsets.

Perhaps the most prominent individual in the day's play was young William Johnston, of San Francisco, who vanquished the veteran, William Clothier, of Philadelphia, former national champion. The match required five sets, 4-6, 6-7, 7-5, 6-0, 8-6.

Another surprise was the elimination in the doubles of Beals C. Wright and William A. Larned by Gustave F. Touchard and W. M. Washburn, the score being 6-4, 8-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Still another upset was the defeat in the morning of Nathienel W. Niles, of Boston, by G. P. Gardner, Jr., also of this city. The score was 6-8, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. The second semi-final in the doubles tournament was won by Niles and A. S. Dabney, of Boston, against H. R. Scott and S. L. Beals, at 11-9, 6-2, 6-1.

Johnston played a sure back court game, his forehand drives repeatedly finding Clothier at a loss for defense. His speed also offset Clothier's strategy.

More Changes For C. Frank

The wholesale canning which Manager Frank arranged for several members of the Pelican squad over a month ago, but which was delayed due to several players going to the front, has become of injuries, is scheduled to occur this week without fail. Announcement was made Monday at local baseball headquarters that three men are to report within the next day or two. The trio are an outfielder, first baseman and a pitcher.

Because of the local mogul not having title to the new players, their names are withheld from the fans for the present. Manager Frank declares that he looks for one man to report in time to get in Wednesday's double-header with the Lookouts. The other two may not join the Pels until Friday or Saturday, the pitcher being a colleger whom Frank says has been tossed very strongly.

Further than deny that First Baseman Steele, of the Jackson club, is not the phenom to cover the initial bag, Frank says his new first-sacker is by far a better fielder than Miles Snedecor, who was recently traded to Montgomery. A half dozen guesses have been advanced by Pelican fans as to whom the new player is, some believing that Bluhm, now with Toledo, is the man.

Manager Frank says he expects to take on Shortstop Erwin, of the Jacksonville club, later in the season for a try-out. Whether Ora Williams is to join the Pels after the Cotton States season is a question not yet to be settled. Jim Gudger and Abbey Peddy, however, look like the men who are to come back for another looking over.

With a new first baseman and outfielder, Kraft may draw the job which Jud Daley now holds. Kyle may be given a few days' rest to recover his batting eye, thus giving the new outfielder a chance at the right field job.

It is almost certain that Daley is to be returned to the Nashville club, from which he was borrowed several days ago. Frank will hardly retain Jud when he can try out his own men with a view of building for the next season.—New Orleans Daily States.

Veterans Win Games In Tennis Tourney

CHICAGO, July 26.—Western tennis stars played true to form in the preliminary rounds of the western tournament at Onwentsia today despite predictions that new talent would crowd some of the veterans out of the running. Right at the start practically all the latter came through victorious. While most of today's winners were Chicagoans, the out-of-town contingent will be greatly strengthened by the participation Monday of John Strachan and Clarence Griffin, of San Francisco, and H. H. Whitman, from the Seabright club, New York.

In the first match in doubles Montague Ferry, Onwentsia, and C. F. Bailey, Philadelphia, won from Captain W. C. Rogers and Captain R. C. Gitty, Fort Sheridan, 6-0, 5-7 and 6-4.

Los Angeles light harness horsemen plan to bring eastern horses there some time in October for a big meeting to be run off at Exposition park track.

McLoughlin Is In Rare Form; Americans Win

United States Now Needs but One of the Remaining Two Matches to Take Honors From the English Cracks

WIMBLETON, England, July 26.—As the result of today's victory by Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, and Harold H. Hackett, of New York, over H. Roper Barrett and C. P. Dixon in the double match the United States team leads by two matches to one in the struggle for the possession of the Dwight E. Davis international lawn tennis trophy and requires only one more victory in the two remaining singles matches to carry off the cup.

The match went to its full extent of five sets of which the Americans took three to their opponents' two, the score reading 5-7, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

The English defenders, who began to play tennis together when McLoughlin was still in knickerbockers, tried all the wiles of which they are masters but without avail. McLoughlin had recovered his form and lost only one of his service games.

Once Hackett played the game which his opponents liked by feeding them low volleys at the net where the English veterans formed an absolute stone wall. They made every possible return to Hackett, recognizing in him the weak line of the American defense.

Although often tempted McLoughlin did not poach on his partner's preserves, often heroically allowing him to take the overhead balls which he himself loves to smash. Toward the end of the match Hackett became more sure in als volleys and lobs, which had been falling short before.

A moment later McLoughlin smashed his racket in the fourth set and the Brittons were within a point of winning the set and the match, but the Californian never faltered and pulled his own service out of the fire.

If the draw is adheard to for the singles to be played on Monday, McLoughlin will face Charles P. Dixon, who was defeated by Williams in Friday's match, while the young Harvard player will be sent against John C. Parke, who took the Californian's measure Friday. Either of the Americans has, either in the present series or in the All-American championship this year, played against no opponent in the singles atches to be contested on Monday.

Pressmen Drop Two

Expo Mills defeated the Pressmen in a double-header Saturday. The game was featured by the heavy hitting of Rutherford and Vinson. Mason pitched a masterly game and would have been scored upon less but for errors at critical times. "Pratt the invincible" was touched up rather severely toward the last of the game, and did not live up to the reputation he had earned. Rutherford was the slugging boy of the game, getting a home run, two three-baggers and a single. These games cinched the pennant for Expo Mills. Score:

Sam Langford, weighing in fighting trim about 175 pounds, is likely to prove a stumbling block for many of the "white hopes" who want a run for the heavyweight boxing crown. Langford and Sam McVey, another big colored fighter, have met thirteen times and Langford won seven times. The first time they met in Australia McVey beat Langford. Langford, however, won each subsequent bout, getting four decisions and knocking McVey out twice. Langford and Joe Jeanette have met in the ring eight times. Langford won three times on points, Jeanette once. Two bouts were draws and two were no-decision contests. Their longest bout was fifteen rounds.

Jackson Goes With Wylie West

LEO R. JACKSON.

Wylie West, Atlanta manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, has just returned from a trip to the factory office at Akron, Ohio. He brought back with him Mr. Leo R. Jackson, who will be his office manager.

Mr. Jackson sprang into the limelight several years ago because of his prowess in athletics at Buchtel college. Jackson played fullback on the football team and the way he used to "hit the line" is known by every lover of football in the middle states. The fair state of Ohio never graduated a better or a more popular player than Jackson.

This "hitting the line hard" became a habit with Jackson, and he used the same tactics after he went to work for the Firestone company at Akron.

Mr. West has had his eye on Jackson for some time, but he could not convince his home office to let him go until now. As Mr. West said today, "Our Atlanta branch is one of Firestone's leading territories, and we want live wires only on our payroll here. That is why I went after Jackson good and hard, and I'm glad he is here."

Again Hapeville Wins

The Hapeville club kept up its record by defeating the strong Davis-Paxon-Stokes company by the score of 8 to 4. The feature was the playing of both teams and W. Holloway's pitching, striking out ten and walking two. He struck out three in succession. Score:

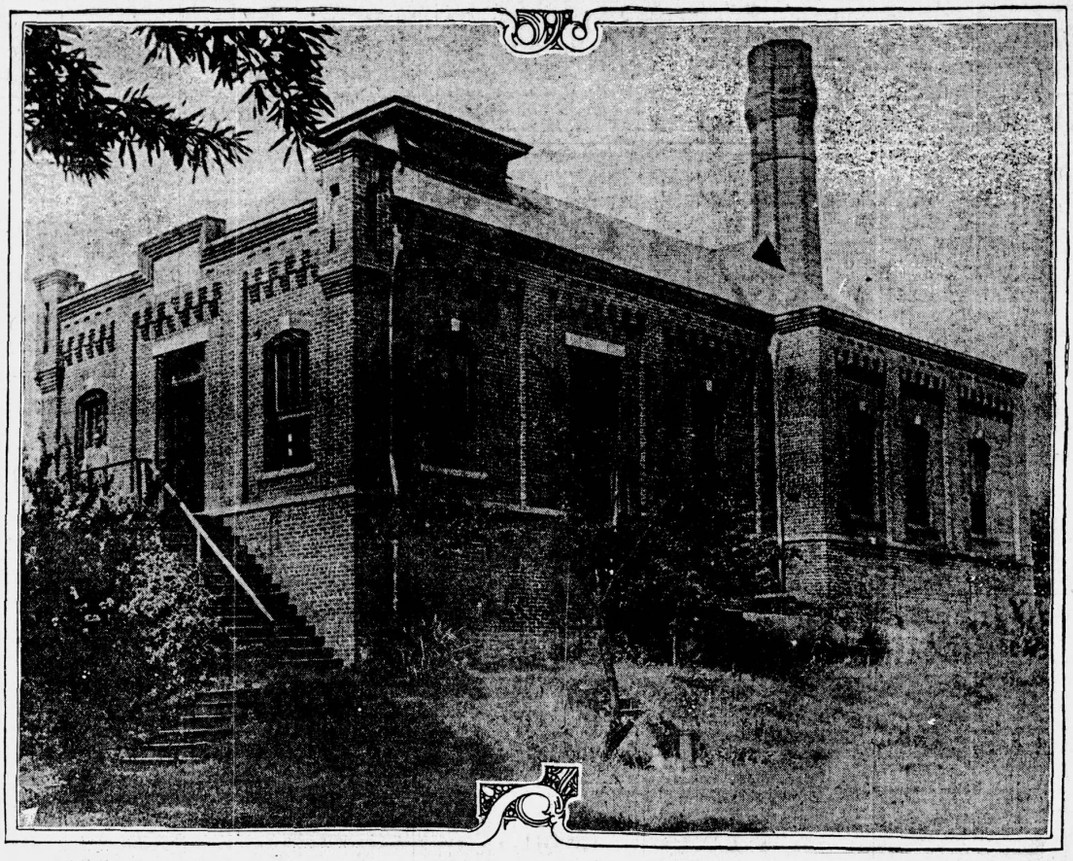
Rome Buys Central Station Electric Current For Her 4,000,000 Gallon City Pump



ROME'S CITY PUMPING STATION

The City of Rome, Georgia, will hereafter use CENTRAL STATION ELECTRIC CURRENT of the GEORGIA RAILWAY AND POWER COMPANY for motive power in its 4,000,000 gallon (daily) city pumping station. The contract has just been signed and the ELECTRICALLY DRIVEN PUMP will displace the old fashioned steam pumps now in use as soon as the necessary mechanical changes can be made.

The City of Rome made this progressive move advisedly. Every other form of power capable of driving the city pump was considered along with ELECTRICITY from the Central Station. The city council and the mayor had frequent and lengthy conferences with representatives of every kind of machinery suitable for pumping purposes. Finally, however, on the advice of one of the foremost engineering firms in the South, Messrs. Solomon and Norcross, of Atlanta, Consulting Engineers for the City of Rome, the mayor and council decided to reject all other methods and install CENTRAL STATION ELECTRIC CURRENT as the most economical and most reliable power obtainable for the city pumping station.

The contract with the City of Rome for this power specifies the standard rates and service of this company, the rates and service ANY MUNICIPAL INSTITUTION OR BUSINESS ENTERPRISE MAY USE ADVANTAGEOUSLY WHEREVER POWER IS NEEDED.

AN ATTENDANCE OF 5,000 LIKELY FOR AUGUST CONVENTION

Replies to Invitations Pour in on Secretary Moore With Every Incoming Mail from Southern Merchants

MANY PROGRAM SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR OCCASION

Last Week of Gathering Will Be Devoted to Entertainments, Theater Parties, Barbecues and Receptions

From the way replies are pouring in upon Secretary H. T. Moore, it is likely that the number of merchants who will attend the Southern Merchants' convention here on August 4-16, will run to 5,000. Up to Saturday morning the replies received numbered 1,611. Every mail brings additional replies, many of them departing from the printed acceptance card and expressing in glowing terms the delight of the recipients in anticipation of the big times they expect to have here during the convention.

There is still a full week before the convention meets and during this period the great bulk of acceptances will be received. In addition to this all the traveling salesmen who returned last week from various sections of the south brought enthusiastic reports of the way the merchants were talking the convention and of the pleasant and profitable visit they expect to have here.

The first formal session of the convention will be held Tuesday, August 5, at 10 o'clock a. m., and will be called to order by the president, Bolling H. Jones. The invocation will be by Bishop Warren A. Candler. Addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor Slaton and Mayor Woodward, and the response will be by R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, vice president of the convention.

J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville, will open the discussion of the leading topic, "How Can Merchants, Landlords, and Bankers Best Direct Their Influence Towards Securing a Greater Diversity of Crops." W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision company, will speak on the related topic: "Cattle and Hogs as a By-Product," and Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National bank, will discuss the greater stability that will result from more diversity of crops. Other speakers at the Tuesday morning session will be Yancey Hill, of Montezuma, Ga., and W. A. Brannon, of Moreland, Ga.

The invocation at the session on Thursday morning, August 7, will be by Dr. C. W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church. R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, will speak on the subject: "How and When to Buy," and J. M. Roberts, of Wilcoochee, Ga., will discuss the benefits of buying often and according to active needs. Norman Johnson, editor of the Merchants' Journal and Commerce, of Lynchburg, Va., will show the advantages of patronizing the home market.

At the Friday morning session, August 8, C. E. Pollard, of the American Audit company, will show that proper accounting methods are prime factors in the success of a mercantile business. H. E. Choate, of the J. K. Orr Shoe company, will discuss the question: "Can a Merchant Afford to Imperil His Capital by Failure to Properly Insure His Stock?"

These are only a partial list of the speakers. The list of speakers will be completed this week and the full program will be ready to announce next Sunday.

The program for the second week will consist entirely of entertainments with no formal convention meeting. The events this week will be as follows:

Tuesday, August 5, 8 P. M.—Vaudeville. Entire theater engaged.

Thursday, August 7, 4 P. M.—Car ride over city.

Reception Piedmont Country club.

Monday, August 11, 8 P. M.—Vaudeville. An entire theater engaged.

Wednesday, August 13, 1 P. M.—Barbecue and Brunswick stew.

Friday, August 15, 3 P. M.—Ball game, Ponce de Leon park, Atlanta vs. Chattanooga.

Saturday, August 16—Au revoir.

HOTEL BILL TO COME UP FOR PASSAGE THIS WEEK

Will Be Put on Third Reading in House Tomorrow—The Chances Favorable

The hotel inspector bill will be put on its third reading before the house of representatives Monday and will likely come up for passage in the house the early part of the week. The bill has already received the favorable report of the house committee on sanitation and hygiene and the outlook for its becoming a law at the present session is favorable.

Representative C. H. Stone, of Talliaferro county, who introduced the bill for the traveling men, thinks that it will have no trouble in passing the house and that the senate will likewise yield it ready indorsement.

"While I am not familiar with the detailed provisions of the bill," said Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh district, who is the traveling salesman member of the senate, "I am in hearty accord with the object for which the travelers are urging this measure. I will go before the senate committee on sanitation and hygiene and urge the importance and necessity of the law and think that it will have no trouble in passing the senate."

The U. C. T., T. P. A. and traveling men generally of the state have been working for a hotel inspector for a number of years. Hotel regulations already exist on the statute books but they have proved hopelessly a dead letter for the want of enforcement. A state inspector with the proper authority will see that the regulations are enforced.

Having labored so long for the measure, the travelers want to see it passed at this session and that too without useless delay.

"MERCHANTS' CONVENTION TO BE BIG SUCCESS"

W. A. Ward Tells of the Plans and Prospects for the Great Occasion

In looking forward to the big merchants' convention, W. A. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company, is feeling confident of great success for the gathering.

"Yes, I think we are going to have the greatest crowd of merchants we have ever had," says Mr. Ward.

"We are all ready and all of our salesmen will be here on time for the opening day. As to buying that may be done for the fall season, I think there will be a good volume of sales made by Atlanta jobbers as an incidental feature to the convention. I look for splendid fall business.

"The merchants who come for the convention should be sure to see what Atlanta is doing in the way of manufacturing as well as making their usual calls on their jobbers.

"Atlanta manufacturing is a valuable aid to building up the jobbing business here. It strengthens Atlanta as a market for the merchants to learn that as well as the variety of goods the jobbers have there are many specialties made here which they can buy direct from the manufactures, thus centering practically all their buying in Atlanta."

Wholesale Houses Buzz With Get-Ready Activities—Air of Alertness and Anticipation Everywhere—Everybody on the Qui Vive to Give the Visitors the Time of Their Lives

Atlanta's wholesale houses have had a busy week of preparation making ready for the great crowd of retailers from all over the south who will pour into Atlanta next week for the Southern Merchants' convention.

Stocks have been overhauled, sample rooms put in their best order and arrangements made for entertaining the merchants who call as well as showing them the facilities for meeting their merchandise wants.

One of the interesting bits of planning for the convention that has kept two of the wholesale men busy the last several days is the working out of the details of the mammoth barbecue to be held Wednesday, August 13.

J. R. Little, chairman of the barbecue committee, who has won fame as a barbecue host, assisted by R. K. Rambo, is figuring just how many hogs, lambs, beeves, chickens and many other things the big gathering can dispose of. They have also been considering a number of places to decide the best scene for the cue.

About thirty-five hogs, thirty-five lambs, between one and two hundred chickens, something like a hundred gallons of Brunswick stew—these are some of the big figures in foodstuffs the barbecue expert is talking of.

Whatever may be needed for the gerat throng it can be counted on that there will be a plentiful plenty as that is the only kind of barbecue this barbecue arranger will have. And he also secured the order in competition with both local and outside firms. It calls for the complete furnishing of 144 rooms. Mr. Everett was at the Rosenfeld company Friday purchasing some of the furnishings and says practically all of the articles for the dormitory contract will be bought in Atlanta.

REDWINE ENTHUSIASTIC OVER MERCHANTS' WEEK

Says Attendance This Year Will Far Surpass That of Last Year

L. A. Redwine, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, a big jobber and one of the merchants' convention enthusiasts, expresses a firm belief that the attendance at the Southern Merchants' convention this year will be so large it will even exceed by a good margin the large number who came to Atlanta for last year's gathering.

"The success of last year's meet for both the merchants and the wholesalers is giving this year's convention a great momentum," says Mr. Redwine. "There will be the biggest crowd the city has ever seen here for such an occasion.

"Conservative buying by most of the merchants in this section during the last six months means that there will be a large number of the visiting merchants very much in need of goods to replenish their stock and for that reason I think the visitors are going to buy rather freely while they are here for the convention."

COVINGTON MERCHANT GETS BIG CONTRACT

R. E. Everett, the Covington, Ga., merchant, is to be congratulated on securing the contract for outfitting the new dormitory of Emory college. He

"MERCHANTS' WEEK IS GET-ACQUAINTED WEEK"

Gordon Kiser Says Personal Contact of Jobbers and Retailers Is Great Feature

"Though a large volume of our sales for the season have already been made, we consider the coming of several thousand merchants to Atlanta for the convention of great benefit to us as well as the houses in other lines," says Gordon P. Kiser, president of the M. C. Kiser Shoe company.

"To get personaly acquainted with our customers, have them visit our place and see the stock we carry and our facilities—those things alone make the convention a great thing for a wholesale house, aside from the matter of making any sales.

"Our season does not really end before the time for the convention, but with the shoe business there are more of the season's orders already filled than in most other lines and there are therefore not so many of our customers to take advantage of the opportunity to buy.

"All of our salesmen will be here and all reports we get indicate great success for this year's meeting."

ATLANTA'S HARDWARE MARKET ADVANTAGES ARE A REVELATION

City Has Five Jobbing Houses and Immense Plow, Stove, Sawmill and Wire Plants, and Branch Houses

200 SALESMEN REACH WEEKLY 7,200 BUYERS

"Radiating Railroad Lines Cover Face of South Like Piece of Poultry Netting," Freight Service Fast

BY JACK W. EVANS,
Of the Atlanta Agricultural Works.

If you were suddenly and pointedly asked the question as to what advantages Atlanta possessed as a hardware market for the retail merchants of the south, could you promptly enumerate all of the advantages she has to offer the retail merchants in this direction?

Being a natural booster for Atlanta, and being in closer touch with the hardware trade than any other line, I have always contended that Atlanta had more advantages to offer to buyers of hardware, doing a retail business in the south than any other market, but I confess that when the question was put to me in a direct manner a short time ago, for a few minutes I was stumped for a ready answer based on actual figures. Right then, however, I resolved that I would never be caught again, and upon my return home I began a little quiet investigation. The result of my investigation has been quite a revelation to me, and I am now more firmly convinced than ever that no other market in any section can offer more to the retail hardware merchant from the Virginia cities to the gulf coast the advantages that Atlanta can.

FIVE BIG JOBBING HOUSES.

Five of the largest hardware jobbing houses in the southern states are located in Atlanta, one or the other of them representing and carrying in stock all the known lines of hardware manufactured, and I seriously doubt if there is an article of any kind known to the hardware trade but what can be found right here in stock and in quantities sufficient to immediately take care of all the orders which might come in this direction. The combined financial investment of these firms in stocks carried reaches a stupendous figure, while the amount of expense in obtaining and retaining the best road and house talent that can be brought together in the hardware trade is an extremely large item in itself, in the advantages of which the retail merchants share.

Six of the largest mill supply houses in the south are located in Atlanta, and every one of them is able to handle enormous contracts as well as take care of the smallest parcel post order, while several of the hardware jobbers carry this line in addition to the regular hardware stock, making Atlanta the largest mill supply market anywhere in the south.

The largest exclusive manufacturer of plows and agricultural implements in the southern states has its factory within the city limits of Atlanta, making a full and complete line of implements such as are handled by 90 per cent of the retail merchants of the southern states. In addition to this manufacturer there are seven branch houses and warehouses of the largest agricultural implement manufacturers of the United States located in Atlanta, placing a stock of implements in Atlanta for the retail merchant to draw from possibly larger than carried in almost any other city in the United States with but one or two exceptions.

SPLENDID STOVE MARKET.

The largest manufacturer in the southern states of heating and cooking stoves located in Atlanta, annually turning out a volume of goods in this line which to the uninitiated would seem incredible. In addition to the stoves manufactured in Atlanta large stocks of stoves of other manufacturers are carried by dealers here in various quantities, styles and prices, and no matter what quantity, style or price stove may be in demand in any certain territory, Atlanta is capable of taking care of that demand on the shortest possible notice.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

One of the largest industries in the south manufacturing nails, staples, barbed wire, hog wire, fence wire and kindred articles is located in Atlanta, turning out a daily tonnage of finished product of the highest quality and enormous quantity, while every kind of wire, wire fence, cut, wire and horse nails, etc., are stocked by some one of the Atlanta dealers.

One of the largest (and I believe the only, manufacturers of saws and sawyers' supplies in the south is located in Atlanta, making right in the heart of the south a full and complete line of these goods, while every size and gauge saw known are handled by some one of the dealers in Atlanta.

In addition to those mentioned, there are thirty or more smaller manufacturers in Atlanta and Atlanta territory making articles common to the stock of the retail hardware trade.

200 HARDWARE SALESMEN.

These hardware jobbers, mill supply houses, branch houses and manufacturers travel out of Atlanta very nearly 200 salesmen at a weekly outlay for salaries and expenses of approximately $10,000. These traveling salesmen, averaging calling on six customers or prospective customers each day, reach an average of 1,200 buyers daily, or about 7,200 each week, thus giving to the retail hardware buyers of the south an opportunity of almost daily coming in contact with one or more of the representatives of the Atlanta hardware market and enabling them to keep more thoroughly posted on trade conditions in all lines and making it easier for them to place their orders in the proper channel.

While much discussion has taken place in times past as to the matter of freight rates, this discussion has mainly had to do with rates on freight coming into Atlanta, but at the same time has more or less brought about a readjustment of rates all along the line until today no section of the country enjoys more advantageous rates as a whole from the wholesale market than the retail hardware merchants in the south enjoy on shipments from Atlanta to their territory.

EIGHT RAILROAD SYSTEMS.

There are eight systems of railroads operating out of Atlanta over thirteen different lines, crossing each other and connecting with other lines throughout the south until the lines radiating out of Atlanta cover the face of the southern states as a piece of poultry netting and there is hardly a town of any consequence in the south but is reached by one or more lines of railway or are in close proximity to them.

Here it might be well to mention the fact that there are daily running out of Atlanta seventy-five passenger trains operated by these eight system of railroads, averaging a train leaving Atlanta every twenty minutes during every day and night in the year. This enables the traveling salesman to reach almost any point in the southern states within a few hours and he can take his choice as to almost any minute, day or night, he wishes to start on his journey.

The same number of passenger trains run into Atlanta daily, giving the buyer in almost any section an opportunity to breakfast at home, spend the day in Atlanta among the wholesale dealers and manufacturers here and return to his home the same evening. The extremely favorable train schedule in and out of Atlanta puts almost every buyer of the south in close touch with the wholesale market and a few hours spent is a pleasant journey enables him to personally transact his business and return to his home in an incredibly short time.

QUICK DELIVERY.

But above all the advantages, coupled with the extremely favorable freight rates to all southern points, the one which most prominently stands out is the extremely quick delivery of goods shipped out of Atlanta. There are daily scheduled out of Atlanta more than seventy freight trains while this number by no means comes anywhere near covering the total number of trains running as extras during the busy seasons. Each one of the lines operating out of Atlanta load daily package cars to almost every important town from the Potomac to the Gulf and this service has been so perfected that less than carload shipments are carried through on almost express time. This has proven quite an advantage to the buyers and at the same time to the jobbers and manufacturers of Atlanta. In the past numerous buyers in the southern states purchased goods in carload lots from the eastern and western markets, but many of these buyers, realizing the rapidity with which the package car service gives them delivery out of Atlanta, they are confining themselves more and more to smaller purchases made oftener. This fact was brought forcibly to my attention a short time ago after I had worked one of my customers up to the point of giving me a good order when he suddenly changed his mind and said: "Oh! well, there is no necessity for me to lay in a stock of those goods, any customers come in on Saturday and tell me what they want. I mail the order in on Saturday night, you boys in Atlanta hustle the goods to the depot on Monday and I get them and am able to make delivery to my customer by Wednesday afternoon." And this is true in almost every section of the southern territory. No matter what section the buyer may be in, no matter what line of goods he might want or what quantity he might want them in, those goods are either manufactured in Atlanta or carried by one of the Atlanta dealers and shipments from Atlanta can reach him in quicker time and at an average less rate than he can possibly get his supplies from any other market in the country.

It is true that the railroads have handed us traveling men a few jolts under the ribs which we did not relish and which I am confident we will sooner or later be able to hand back with equal force, but from the other angle, we are bound to admit that with the enormous string of passenger trains pulling out of and into Atlanta daily, Atlanta feels that her trip to her trade is but a pleasant riding of a few miles and a hearty handshake with a friend while the delivery of goods is almost equal to reaching down in her sample case and saying: "Here you are."

ALERT NEWSPAPERS.

Another advantage Atlanta can safely lay claim to is the fact that her newspapers keep the buyers of the south better posted as to conditions in the wholesale centers than any other section. Not a movement is made in the direction of adding to her advantages as a hardware market (or any other line) but that her papers both daily, weekly and Sunday herald the glad tidings to the nation and keep the smallest merchants in the distant towns fully informed as to where he can better and quicker supply the requirements of his trade.

Summing it all up, no city in any section of the country has as many advantages as a hardware market to offer to the retail merchants of the south than Atlanta has. She has the largest and best stocked hardware jobbers, mill supply houses, branch houses and warehouses of foreign manufacturers, more local manufacturers, more salesmen traveling the southern territory, more outgoing passenger trains, more incoming passenger trains, better freight service with more advantageous freight rates to all southern points and better newspaper service for heralding her news to the smaller buyer, possibly than any other city in the country.

Atlanta is peculiarly blessed in being located in the very heart of the most progressive and prosperous body of retail merchants in any section of the country and after all it may be that these retail merchants, grasping the advantages Atlanta offers as a wholesale market, has been a large factor in putting them in the progressive and prosperous condition in which they are and at the same time made Atlanta the wholesale market that she is.

Long may we pull together.
Long may we mutually prosper.

LEWIS DISCUSSES MAIL ORDERS AND CATALOGS

Says the Two Constitute the Greatest Business Method of Modern Times

"Doing business by mail order is the greatest of all modern business methods," said E. P. Lewis, of the McClue Ten-Cent company. "In order to show why I say this I will dig down here and show you a little pamphlet five by seven inches, containing thirty-two pages of popular price 5 and 10-cent goods. This is the first catalogue gotten out by our house. You see it contains no cuts, just names, numbers and prices of merchandise, and only a part of the merchandise we then handled. This catalogue was mailed out to merchants throughout the south, and we received in turn a nice batch of orders for several months.

"Then came issue of catalogue No. 2, which was about the size of Grier's almanac. Southern merchants are now as familiar with McClure's catalogue as the old lady that smoked her clay pipe back in the 70's was familiar with Grier's almanac.

"From time to time our company has issued these catalogues, each one larger than the other. Our last one is No. 5. It is eight and a half inches by twelve and a half inches and contains sixty-two pages, every page brimming with descriptive display of the lines handled.

"Our company has experienced wonderful growth. The reason for it? You see this catalogue No. 5. It is our traveling representative. It costs us 3 cents postage to put it on the merchants' desk, where he will stay with his full information of our popular-priced goods. Mr. Merchant, after his day's business is over, can turn to our 'traveling representative' and at his leisure make up a bill of the goods he desires. He uses his own good judgment as to qualities, buying no more than he is sure of selling on thirty days' time, because he knows the same representative is at his command at all times. He can use it without expense. He doesn't have to wait ten days or longer for a representative from the house to call on him for a line of samples. He makes up his order, mails it in, and if he is within 200 miles of Atlanta he can mail his order in on Thursday night and receive his goods for Saturday's business.

"The McClure company expects their wholesale house eventually to cover a city block, and we are giving our 'Convenient Salesman' credit for it. Our prices are attractive to customers because we have to pay no more than 3 cents a trip traveling expenses for our 'salesman.'

"It is my opinion that it is only a matter of time when all big jobbing houses will make use of catalogues. The salesman will place the catalogues with firms who they consider worthy of having same, will call on the trade only once or twice a year to offer suggestions as to displays and window dressings and the catalogue will do the rest."

ATLANTA JOBBERS PREPARE FOR MEETING

gives assurances the feature of liquid refreshment will not be overlooked.

At the Ward-Truitt company, one of the big dry goods jobbing houses, shipments of latest patterns and weaves have been arriving for the last ten days and will be on show for the visiting merchants next week. R. L. Mitcham, house manager, and his force of assistants will feel that their hard work recently has not been wasted when the visitors see the splendid array they have prepared.

Another of the large wholesale establishments where the general feeling in the air of preparation and anticipation took concrete form in busy scenes is the A. M. Robinson company. On the first floor boxes of shirts of the Robinson brands, the output of their own factory, are stacked now nearly twenty feet high and the sample rooms are being put in the best of apple pie order.

At the M. C. Kiser company the twin sample rooms are all in readiness with several hundred patterns on exhibit. C. J. Sullivan and A. L. Glass, who regularly preside over the showing of Shield Brand shoes, are prepared to show the shoe merchants some interesting things when they call.

The Gramling-Spalding company and the J. K. Orr Shoe company are all ready. The whole office force of the former concern took a hand at mailing out the several thousand invitations the firm sent their customers.

An extra sample room, prepared especially for the occasion, will be filled with the new holiday goods at the Hirshberg company, in addition to the regular sample room with its lines of stationery and sundries.

The list might be continued to include every wholesale house in Atlanta, for all are seeing to it that they put on their very best front by August 4.

Every house will have all of their salesmen here to play the host to the merchants from his territory and it can be guaranteed that every call that every visitor makes to any wholesaler will be pleasurable as well as profitable."

"Welcome, Southern Merchants"

We Have Made Great Preparations For You During Merchants' Week, August 4 to 16.

We have increased our sales force, and have specials by the carload for you. It matters not what you handle, we have about six thousand different items to retail from 5c to $1.00. During your stay in Atlanta, you will find some specials that will increase your volume of trade 25%. If it will be more convenient for you to buy goods at night, call us over Main 4961, and we will gladly wait on you at night.

The 5 and 10-cent business is now enjoying the greatest popularity of its existence. It is a business that flourishes even in hard times, for people become interested in buying the popular priced goods. Many of the very best merchants have recently come to us interested in this line of business, and have arranged for us to put in a 5 and 10-cent department. A department of this kind will increase your trade 25%.

Listen! One-half of the American people who work are on salaries of less than $60.00 per month. Is it not true that 75% of all sales made by any store, are for less than $1.00? This explains why the Dollar-Limit goods are so popular. Any town that has not a 5 and 10-cent department is losing money which it should have. You have trade in your town going to the cities that have the 5 and 10-cent stores, not because the trade wants to, but because it has to.

Think this over, and while you are here, select enough of our line to put in a department of this kind. Call on us, 47-49 South Broad St., and let us explain to you our proposition in opening up these 5 and 10-cent stores or departments. Let us show you the immense stock that we carry. Make our store your headquarters. Have your mail sent in care of us. Our stenographers are at your command. A glance at our show windows will convince you that you should have a line of 5 and 10-cent goods.

See the Inside

A good doctor must have absolute and accurate knowledge of every internal organ of the human body. He must know at first hand the facts and functions of every innermost detail of man's anatomy.

The law requires that he spend years of study where he can learn these things from actual observation and experiment, before he is licensed to practice his profession.

Now, some merchants sell shoes from year to year without knowing anything about the construction of their goods except what they can see from the outside.

In merchandise, as well as medicine, it is the "inside knowledge" that is most valuable.

During the Southern Merchants' Convention in Atlanta, beginning August 4th, we'd like to have every visiting merchant take a trip through our Red Seal Shoe Factory.

Whether you sell Red Seal Shoes or not, a visit to this modern factory, where you can see every process and detail of construction, will make a wiser buyer and a more convincing salesman.

Come by our offices, 30-32 Auburn Avenue, where we will be glad to have someone take you through the factory.

Hotel Inspector Law Wanted Now.

The bill providing for a hotel inspector to enforce the sanitary hotel regulations of the state will come up for passage in the house early this week. It has already received a favorable report from the house committee on sanitation and hygiene. The bill should be passed without delay. Its provisions are reasonable and it will give the travelers relief from the impositions of certain hotels which they have had to put up with too long already. Many of the hotels of the state need no sanitary regulations, but there are many who do and need them bad. The travelers of the state want an inspector to make the latter kind toe the mark. For they will not do it otherwise. The sanitary hotel law already on the statute books is dead. Why? It's nobody's duty to enforce it. No inspector, no life in the law. What the travelers want and what they are looking to both the houss and the senate to give them at this session is life put in the hotel regulations. The bill already introduced will do it. Let the legislature pass it without any vexatious delay.

The travelers have been contending for this measure for a number of years. Their claims, for first one reason and another, have been put aside, until further delay is without rhyme or reason. The bill is conservative. The law is needed. There is time to pass it at this session. Let it be done.

NOW IS THE SEASON WHEN ALL GOOD GARDENERS ARE PLANTING COLLARDS

Georgia Variety, Best Known, Seed Dealer Says Collard-Cornbread-Buttermilk Combination Can't Be Beat

Now for collards, all the seed dealers are saying.

"They're the best in the world right here in Georgia," says J. H. Everett, of the Everett Seed company, who being a dealer in seeds and personally something of a collard connoisseur himself, knows whereof he speaks.

"Georgia collards are famous all over the country. Every seed catalog published from one end of the country to the other shows Georgia collard seed as the most desirable."

The new stock of collard seed has been coming in to Atlanta seed dealers during the last two weeks and is selling at a lively rate, for right now is the time they should be planted.

"Yes, sir," says Mr. Everett, "we're selling collard seed in immense quantities now, and I tell you these folks who buy collards know what's good. Anybody who don't enjoy the Georgia collards, cornbread and buttermilk combination can't enjoy anything.

"Collards are grown extensively right in Atlanta and vicinity. I had a chance just the other day to buy seventy-five pounds of collard seed grown within a few miles of the city. The best seed, though, comes from south Georgia and that is where most of it is grown that is sold here in Atlanta."

At the rat ecollard seed is selling now, according to Mr. Everett, it looks like there will be collards and cornbread on every table when the first frost comes.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

W. A. Haley, of the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., is in from the road for a brief visit to headquarters.

J. S. Dougherty and George A. Sherlin, of the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co., have returned from the eastern markets. Never before, they say, have there been so many buyers from jobbing centers all over the country as they found at the hat factories on this trip.

J. H. Huff, the dean of the S. P. Richards company sales staff, is to be congratulated on the way his July sales for this year are ahead of last year.

C. S. Shiflett, city salesman for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, thought it would look well for him to land a good large opening bill last week and what is more to the point he landed it.

J. R. Burton, the A. M. Robinson company firing liner is pushing his batting average up nicely recently, says his house. In fact, he is reported to be hiding around four hundred right now in the sales game.

Old standby Rosser turned up at the A. M. Robinson company offices yesterday after a long trip. J. D. Robinson seemed so glad to see him he gave him a genuine Frenchman's embrace. There must be something to the talk of this firing liner's hefty sales record of late.

W. J. Hays, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company outfit of selling men, is just back from one of his occasional trips along the Southern road to Macon and is now ready for the city trade again. He had a good business down the road.

J. W. O'Donnell, who works in South Georgia for Dobbs & Wey Co., is feeling fine over the prospects there. Recent rains have helped crop conditions wonderfully, he says, and he expects to do a good fall business.

L. R. Robinson, house manager for A. M. Robinson company, is on a brief trip to Southwest Georgia to call on several special customers who are old friends of his as well as of the house.

P. D. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, has been putting in several very busy days preparing a special sale of coat suits and sweaters.

J. C. Mason, of the Consolidated Paper company, will be in Atlanta during the meeting of the Southern Merchants' association. E. E. Shyer of this company had a good week's business in Alabama after his vacation.

R. S. Lowrance, of the E. L. Adams company, was a visitor last week at the camp of the Southern Bell Telephone company at Lakewood and reports having had a splendid time.

The ins at Fain & Stamps Saturday were J. C. Owens, Ben Thompson, W. Y. Bailey and Cliff Edwards. Sanders Smith, of this company, has returned from his vacation and is investigating the story that has got abroad about his wearing a sunbonnet.

W. A. Quarles has attained fame as a wearer of Red Seal shoes. Trying to live up to his reputation as a pedestrian he is about to walk himself to death.

Johnny Wood, of the E. L. Adams company, is away on his vacation this week at his home at Washington, Ga.

W. W. Bullock, traveling South Carolina for John Silvey & Co., came over to Atlanta Wednesday with a customer in tow. This salesman brought in a large delegation of merchants to last year's convention and is expected to have an even larger number this year.

Clark Woodenware company salesmen are spending Sunday as follows: A. L. Duncan, at Asheville, N. C.; John Harrel, at Mobile; Z. V. Peterson, at Jacksonville.

A. C. McHan, of John Silvey & Co., who has been somewhat indisposed for several days, is feeling quite well again, and will be ready to extend the glad hand to visiting merchants next week.

The holiday goods sample room of Montag Brothers, with samples for the new season all in place, is now all ready for the many visitors to the house expected during the big convention. Salesmen who work in local territory and who will be here next week to greet their merchant friends are Will Montag, Bert Fox, Leopold Hein, J. R. Jordan, Harry Gottheimer and E. Feibleman.

Frank S. Dean, vice president of Atlanta Agricultural Works, is having troubles of his own. Mr. Dean is building a new residence in Druid Hills and between his anxiety to get his house finished and get away to see his customers, he is worying some.

C. H. Burge and H. A. McDonald, of the McCord-Stewart company, are attending the International Gideon convention at Toronto, Canada.

J. T. Cook, of the H. L. Singer company, received a severe cut last week from a pair of pliers while he was engaged in repairing his automobile. But not even an injured lip can stop the activities of so good a salesman as Mr. Cook. Though the injury was quite painful, Mr. Cook lost no time from his regular round of sales visits.

"I fail to see anything but bright prospects for a good business during our coming season," said Clyde L. King, president of Atlanta Agricultural Works. "The recent rains have been very beneficial to crops in general and I look for the farmers to pull through in good shape and conditions to prove entirely satisfactory in all lines."

N. A. Hamrick & Co., at Fairmount, Ga., who have been buying their Shield brand shoes from W. W. Benson for many years have outgrown their old quarters he tells us and excavations are now under way on a new building which they promise him is going to be one of the handsomest stores in North Georgia.

John Bolt, the Gray Court, S. C., merchant, was a visitor in Atlanta last week buying a season's bill from John Silvey & Co.

All of the road force of the J. K. Orr Shoe company, numbering twenty-two, are expected to be in Atlanta for the convention.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOZ. COLLARS IN STOCK

Lion Brand Agency Has Grown Rapidly Under E. A. Crane

Much is said of Atlanta's advantages as a jobbing center, yet there are some factors that strengthen it as a market that are little known.

Thirty-five thousand dozen collars are carried in stock by a manufacturer's agency at 76 North Broad street, ready to be shipped direct to the retailer. These are the Lion brand goods.

This agency, which occupies three floors, including the office and sample room, has had a remarkable growth since established here just three years ago.

The business for the third year, just recently ended, is over double that of the preceding year. Georgia, Alabama, Florida and South Carolina is the territory covered.

E. A. Crane, the young manager of the agency, was sent here from the company's headquarters to open the agency and has made it one of the most successful in the country.

He declares, however, the credit for their growth is due as much to his force on the firing line, George E. Veazey, W. A. Munger and M. H. Doble.

ATLANTA MAKERS SELL NECKWEAR TO ST. LOUIS

All-Star Manufacturing Company Ships Big Bill to Missouri Firm

There are a good many Atlanta made articles that are occasionally sent far from home but few local manufacturers that work regularly and closely as extensive a territory as that taken in by Atlanta makers of neckwear and suspenders.

"Salesmen of this company are reaching every town from Virginia to Louisiana and from Kentucky to Florida, inclusive," says W. O. Steele, president of the company. "Some orders have come from Oklahoma and Texas and not long ago we made a $500 sale of neckties to a St. Louis merchant."

This order was secured in the face of competition from manufacturers right in St. Louis, it is understood, and not entirely due to the loyalty to his old home town of the buyer, who had just moved there from Atlanta.

This company is the largest in their line in the south. Their real competition, however, comes from the large manufacturers in the east.

The neckwear business is a good illustration of the southern specialty manufacturer successfully meeting competition from eastern factories. Though salesmen from New York and Baltimore are continually in the same paths of trade as this Atlanta factory the latter is doing a larger business all the time.

JENKINS WRITES ON HELPING UNFORTUNATES

Tells of Case of a Crippled Beggar Which Elicited His Sympathy

Editor Firing Line:

Just as our train was pulling out of Columbus last Wednesday evening on the Southern road a beggar on crutches came in the smoking car, where several drummers were seated, and said: "What is a poor man to do?" Seeing that he was crippled and somewhat "stove-up," I asked him his trouble.

"Well," he said, "two years ago I fell from a smokestack in Cotton Belt, Ark., and became a cripple, was sent to the hospital, where I paid out all the money I had, $2,200, accumulated in years of hard work, and later became an object of charity. Under the present system of organized society it is impossible for one like myself to get assistance.

"I am arrested on the streets for begging and refused admittance in the charitable institutions. The first thing with high-salaried officers that take up all the donations in high paid salaries is to inevstigate who and what I am, and where I am from. I am hungry while all this is going on, nearly starved now. Their first move is to place me in jail or give me a ticket out of town, from their community to another that will do just as they did.

"I can use the ticket so to speak, but it does not satisfy that gnawing craving hunger and appetite for something to eat.

"I know there are lots of good people in this world, some right here in the town we are leaving that would be glad to help a man like me; but I am forbidden to appeal to them. The people do not know that their money is being wasted in high class, high priced salaried officers that get it all or the biggest portion, while helpless men like me are obliged to beg and be run out of town as criminals.

"I have seen better days and never knew that I would come to this. People have sympathy, but it is a false sympathy, a pride that is a false pride, a religion and love for suffering humanity that is not skin deep."

And the old man went on. He was angry with Columbus. When he left the train at some small town later on, some one said: "The old fellow is a fake, an imposter and ought to be taken up."

But I could see his broken arm and deformed body and with a human diagnosis of my own I could see that the old man was sick and suffering, and in my heart I asked God if it would be any harm for me or anybody else to directly help an old tramp like this one, and if it was no harm for me, then could it be for any one in the cities or in the towns?

If not, then why should we have such laws as we have that only protect the indifferent who do not wish to be solicited on the streets, but are more willing to give five or ten dollars to some organization that can only find its way in part to those who need it and may die before they get it.

What is the percentage of money paid out that is received for such purposes? If we must have organized charity, would it not be wise for humanity's sake to give a little of it to those who actually need it whether they live in our county and state or not?

The traveling men are always good to needy cases, let it be whomsoever it may and from whatever part of the world they may hail. Let's begin at the cradle to cure vice, and directly help all suffering humanity when we can, as often and as much as we can, and stop so much deception and hypocrisy, which seems to be the withering blight of time.

A common, full and free friendly fellowship with all mankind from all mankind to all mankind will Christianize the world as no other method can. We talk religion and pray religion and hold our heads up in scorn for some as we pass, praise those who have been succesful, ignore those who have not. If it is well to smile and chuckle to those and with those who have made plenty of money for themselves, it would be better to also clasp the hand of him who has honestly tried but failed through unavoidable causes. It would cheer him, help him and incidentally help you, too.

SMALL GROCERS ARE GOOD CREDIT RISKS

J. N. Hirsch Tells of Successes of Merchants Starting With $500 Stocks

Among all Atlanta business men there is no one who knows the small retail grocer better than J. N. Hirsch, the wholesale grocer and tobacconist.

By small grocer, as used here, is meant the proprietor of little stores carrying only a few hundred dollars' worth of stock and occupying space barly larger than an average bedroom.

Such stores, as a class, present to the wholesale house a distinct problem in themselves. Seldom with means exceeding the $1,-600 exemptions allowed under the laws of Georgia, often entirely inexperienced in the grocery line, and with little knowledge of general business methods, and frequently with little education of any sort, many of them new to this country and section, these dealers are almost an entirely different proposition to the credit man and salesman of the jobbing house from the average merchant carrying a stock worth one to ten thousand dollars.

Mr. Hirsch, now one of the city's successful wholesalers, practically built up his business selling this class of trade and in talking of them as credit risks knows whereof he speaks from fourteen years' daily experience with them. Among the other jobbers in Atlanta Mr. Hirsch has something of a reputation for keeping bad account losses at a minimum. His comment on the small grocer shows something of the reason.

"Taking my accounts for years back, losses on the little several hundred-dollar stock fellows have been considerably smaller in proportion to the credit extended than on the larger concerns," is Mr. Hirsch's striking remark.

"I have lost an average of only 1-2 of 1 per cent on credits in my grocery business, which I think any one will grant is a good showing.

"I have believed in the little, struggling dealer with one showcase and a few shelves and a stock of goods worth $600 or so. I have started many of them by letting them have their opening bill on credit and it's seldom I've been stung by doing it.

"Without reserve, I would say that these men as a class are better credit risks for their small accounts than the average merchant with a $3,000 or $4,000 stock. They buy very carefully, getting along on just as small a stock as they can to take care of the trade they build up. They let their Business grow gradually and it grows solidly.

"Failures in the grocery business are not unusual, but I have seen a lot of these men start with nothing, many of them uneducated immigrants, and within five or six years be worth $4,000 or $5,000. One man who started five years ago with $250 cash and a $500 stock he had persuaded me to let him have, is worth exactly $4,500 today—I saw his accounts a few days ago. He is looking around now for a home to buy.

"Of these small grocers, I would estimate that 75 per cent of them succeed nearly this fast others make a living.

"My credit experience with the Greeks conducting founts and cigar stands has been good, too. I have credited many of them, and started some of them ten or twelve years ago who are now worth around $10,000."

"BIG SPACE" EXHIBITORS MEET 5 O'CLOCK MONDAY

A meeting of furniture manufacturers and others who will desire large space for their display in the new manufacturers exhibit, has been called by Bolling H. Jones for 5 o'cloc Monday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Mr. Jones, who is one of the committee of manufacturers arranging the exhibit, states the twenty-three who put in their bids for space when the project was first formally presented are enthusiastic over the developments so far.

"By January 1st," says Mr. Jones, "we are going to have all ready for the public one of the finest shows the people of Atlanta have ever seen.

The exhibit will occupy the four top floors of the new Chamber of Commerce building.

P. M. SLOAN, VETERAN TRAVELER, IS DEAD

Editor Firing Line: R. M. Sloan, one of Georgia's landmarks on the commercial firing line, is dead. No traveler was better and more favorably known.

Though fifty years old, Mr. Sloan had never married. The end came at his Austell home.

Devoted to his sisters, nieces and other close kindred, loyal to his friends, charitable to every one, was the life of Bob Sloan, as he has been known for forty years. Since a youth he has been connected with Lamar-Rankin Drug company. For thirty years or more he has represented that firm in the local territory.

Mr. Sloan was only ill for a short time and his death was a sad shock to his numerous traveling and business friends throughout the territory.

WHEW! JULY AND BLANKETS! IT PLEASES ROSENFELD CO.

"All wrapped up in blankets in J uly" is the situation at the Rosenfeld Company. C. W. Flesmman, house salesman, is the Indian-like figure above.

Next Two Weeks Will See Height of Wholesale Blanket Season—Jobbers Retire Refrigerators in Favor of Cold Weather Comforts, Even Though the Sun Sizzles

With sweltering July days at their hottest, everyone at the Rosenfeld company is wrapped up in blankets.

Figuratively speaking, they are all wrapped up in the blanket business just now and thinking of little else.

Two carloads of blankets have just been received, which is the starter for the 1913 season, with more shipments coming in daily from now until the first of November. The salesmen on the road are starting in to talk blankets morning, noon and night and will be pushing this cold weather part of their line for the rest of the summer. The next several weeks will be the height of the season on blankets.

"We begin placing some contracts with the mills in October, over a year ahead of the time they are bought by the public from the furniture dealers," says Mr. Rosenfeld. "The main buying season, however, is in January and it is then the prices are fixed by the mills.

"The mills require us jobbers to take up our contracts not later than August 1, so that right now is the height of the season for shipping from the mills to the jobbers and is the reason for us being so busy here with blankets.

BROWNLEE WRITES NEWS OF U. C. T. COUNCIL 505

Editor Firing Line:—

U. C. T. council 505, initiated a big class of candidates at its special meeting yesterday afternoon.

R. L. Wallace, traveling for the D. R. Wilder company reports a good business for the past week.

J. W. Currie writes from Tennessee that he will soon be back in dear old Georgia.

Brother J. L. Moore when last heard from was in South Carolina, doing a splendid business.

Carl M. Henson, the shoe man, is in the city from his North Georgia territory.

C. B. Pepper, now in Columbia, S. C., writes that he is having a fine business in his new field.

"Father" Hold, the Decective man, is out on the firing line again after a short recess.

Very truly yours,
P. S. BROWNLES,
Secretary, U. C. T. Council, 505.

"Our salesmen start taking orders from the retail trade in February, but those early orders are mostly from a few large dealers. The bulk of the orders are being taken during this month. Our men are pushing blankets now more than any part of their stock.

"We have ordered heavily and had to take on extra warehouse space to handle the big stock we're getting in. Our sales last year were about 50,000 pair, and we're going to beat that this year."

Refrigerators are going to be taken out of the concern's sample room this week and the sample line of blankets put in their place.

W. T. DUBOSE WRITES OF LEGISLATIVE MATTERS

Says He's Still Deeply Interested in Things Concerning His Old Craft

Editor Firing Line:

While I am out of newspaper work (whether temporarily or permanently, I cannot now say) still I am deeply interested in anything which concerns the welfare of my old craft of the road.

You will remember that last year we made a fight before the Georgia legislature for some laws for the good of, not only the traveling men but the public as well. At that time the fact was discovered and given publicity that there was on the legislative committee of the house of representatives four railroad attorneys.

It would be interesting to know something of the composition of that committee in the present legislature.

Another thought comes to me and which seems worthy of some publicity. The national government at Washington is making an exhaustive investigation of lobbying going on in cogress. Now, it strikes me that if the state legislatures would go into a work of that kind that the people might learn something to their good. Why not start up something of this kind? Georgia is one of the leading states in enterprise and this is a fine field for effort.

In Tennessee we are hopelessly tangled up with politics in its basest form at the bat, while business is hurting in the field, and all the good people clamoring for relief, but, of course, politics only laughs at such appeals.

Very truly yours,
W. T. DUBOSE.

Nashville, Tenn., July 2, 1913.

CAPITAL CITY CO. TO HANDLE MANILA CIGARS

Haven't Been Marketed Much in South, but Will Be Very Popular

The Capital City Tobacco company have closed arrangements for handling a line of Manila cigars in addition to their other brands.

"Manilas are the coming cigars," says W. B. Carlton, of the Capital City concern. "The cigar trade with Manila was hampered for a long time by the United States' troubles with the Philippines, and many fake Manila brands have been marketed, but it looks now as if the Manila manufacturers of fine cigars are coming into their own.

"Through the rest of the United States they have become great sellers during the last year. Their popularity has not struck the south yet. They haven't been marketed here much. We are going to start the ball rolling as soon as we get our first stock, which will be within four or five weeks."

ROOT MAKES BIG SALES OF PRESERVES

Mr. Root, representing the American Preserve company, of Philadelphia, spent last week working the city trade with the H. L. Singer company. In six days he sold 120,000 pounds of jams, jellies and preserves. In the amount sold were included 35,000 tumblers of jelly. Before Mr. Root finishes his sales visit here he will have sold an amount of his company's product that will equal one pound for every inhabitant of Atlanta. Philadelphia may be slow, but not so with Philadelphia salesmen.

Responds to Welcome Address at Convention

R. O. CROUCH.

Mr. Crouch is one of the leading retail merchants of Grimn, Ga., and is vice president of the Southern Merchants' association which will hold a big two weeks' convention here, beginning August 4. He will respond to the address of welcome in behalf of the association.

HOLLINGSWORTH ENJOYS BIG DINNER AT THOMSON

Editor Firing Line: How about the following for a dinner? This was served Wednesday of the past week at the Knox house, Thomson, Ga., family style, and is a sample of all meals in accordance with the season: Cantaloupe, grapes, peaches and cream, figs, string beans, butter beans, mashed potatoes, sliced tomatoes, stewed tomatoes, corn on cob, fried corn, pearl lemon onions, stewed in cream, sliced onions, barbecued pig, fried chicken, broiled chicken, corn muffins, brown biscuit from home-made flour, rice with chicken broth, drip coffee, tea, milk, watermelon, ice cream and cake.

The Knox house has good, clean beds. Their rates are $2 per day. Booths are conveniently distributed throughout the house for use of guests. This hotel is known throughout the southern states and even northern travelrs seek recipes from the owners for barbecuing meats and bread and pastry baking. Yes, I was there. Go there every opportunity.

Yours truly,
C. J. HOLLINGSWORTH.

WILLIAMSON EXPECTS BIG BUSINESS DURING CONV'N

Wholesaler Looks for Successful Fall Season Following Recent Conservative Buying

"We are better prepared for the convention crowd than in any other year," says C. J. Williamson, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt Co.

"Realizing that many merchants have been only filling in special lines for fall we believed it wise to assemble an especially wide range of merchandise through all our departments for the fall business.

"I believe there will be more merchants who will take advantage of their visit here for the convention to do their buying at that time than in any other year. More of them have waited this year for this occasion.

"They will all learn, who do not know it already, that Atlanta has the goods and the prices to equal any market and in any line of merchandise.

"This week we caused two merchants to call off an intended buying trip to Baltimore by showing them our line. We will sell them their season's bills the first of this week."

W. E. DANIEL NOW WITH BAILEY BROS.' TOB. CO.

W. E. Daniel, who was with Robert Harris & Bro. until recently, has associated himself with Bailey Brothers' Tobacco company, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and reports a fine business the first week out.

Mr. Daniel has charge of the state of Alabama for this firm, and expects to land more than his share of the business.

Mr. Daniel is an old salesman in this line, and knows a good chew when he sees it.

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

"Hotel and Travel" is the name of a new southern hotel journal, to be published by J. R. Watts also publisher of Watts' Railway Guide of the South. The new journal succeeds the Southern Hotel Journal which was discontinued with the June number.

D. M. Holsenbeck, Georgia and Alabama traveler for H. Wilensky & Sons, was operated on for appendicitis at Wesley Memorial hospital last week. His friends will be glad to know that he is rapidly recovering.

An early morning train out of town, a carload order landed and then back in Atlanta for lunch was a pretty good morning's work C. F. Holt put through a few days ago. Carload orders are not so uncommon with him, but every salesman who has coaxed along a prospect for a big order knows that was quick action.

C. M. McKain, of Jones Brothers & Co., is popularizing the Jones Brothers vinegars, pickles and preserves with the city trade. The good bunch of orders turned in by him last week was striking evidence of the degree of popularity which his goods has attained.

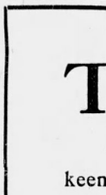
L. C. Miller, of Jones Brother & Co., is working up orders for a mixed car load of the Jones products at Seneca, South Carolina.

Lawrence H. Moore, of Atlanta Agricultura Works is off tonight after business in his territory after his good long rest. Lawrence is never satisfied unless he is out among his friends talking Atlanta plows and filling his order book and he is looking forward to the biggest season he has ever had.

D. G. Girard, traveling in South Carolina for the Ward-Truitt company, has just finished one of his best weeks in point of total sales that he has had this season.

H. E. Dean, of Atlanta Agricultural Works, returned from Maine, where he spent his vacation, stopping at several points on his way home. Ewing reports business in almost every section he visited as looking bright and that all the manufacturers on whom he called are feeling quite optimistic.

R. E. Dawson, of Jones Brothers & Co., sent in a whaling big order from Birmingham last week. The order was for two car loads of preserves and one car load of mixed goods, the total amount of the bill being about $5,000.



C. C. Phillips, south Georgia traveler for the Capital City Tobacco company, came in from his territory yesterday and they said at the office they were all ready to load him up with new ideas for the coming fall campaign. It is a pretty even bet that his visit will result in his giving them about as many ideas as he gets. He makes headquarters at Albany and is one of south Georgia's live wires.

H. T. Atwood, traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, is spending his vacation in New York. His sister accompanied him.

The recent rains came just in time to save the bulk of the cucumber crop which the farmers at Ellenwood, Ga., are raising for Jones Brothers & Co. Mr. Brannon, secretary of the company, thinks now that fully 10,000 bushels of cucumbers will be produced by the 100 acres which the farmers are cultivating. Before the rains came the officers of the company were prepared to send pumps and piping to Ellenwood to irrigate the fields.

Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural Works, is still fighting cost systems, route sheets and time tables preparatory to getting into the fight for a big bunch of contracts for Atlanta plows. Jack knows all the best places to go and the goods they use and says that he is going to clean up some of the choicest business in his line.

Fred Singer, of Lumpkin, Ga., vice president of the H. L. Singer company, who has been visiting H. L. Singer, left last week for a trip to Canada.

O. S. Johnston and J. W. Johnston, Jr., motored through to Macon last week and sold several nice orders for Carroll-Adams Shoe company.

Miss Sligh, representing the Texas Gum company, was working the trade with the H. L. Singer force last week, introducing Mello Mint chewing gum.

G. W. Brownlee, of the McCord-Stewart company, who has been ill, is back on the firing line again.

What is the order letting a traveling salesman loaf just because he has a day or two to spend at headquarters? That is what they think at John Silvey & Co's, and they acted on this principle by putting J. W. Hughes to work the last two days helping on the crew mailing out the invitations to the merchants' convention dele gates. These have been sent by the company to several thousand merchants inviting them to pay the house a visit when they come to the big gathering.

The biggest order so far for this season was received by the Ward-Truitt company last week from Salesman C. V. Nalley.

D. P. McDaniel and Lewis Parker, of the Ward-Truitt company, are here for the week-end. The former firing liner is making something of a name for himself on his ability to push sales on any particular part of the stock the house directs the sales force to move quickly.

T. D. Anderson, of the McClure Ten Cent company, is conducting a sale for C. K. Sharp at Laverne, Ala.

E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, is still on the job selling opening bills. He had two to his credit last week. He leaves Monday for Toccoa, Ga., to negotiate with a merchant there on opening five and ten cent stores in three towns along the Southern railway. Mr. Lewis is likewise going over estimates with C. P. Bailey, of Cartersville, Ga., a former traveling man, who contemplates opening a five and ten cent store.

A. H. Church, the veteran drug salesman, returned Friday from St. Simons, where he has enjoyed a three weeks' vacation with his family, who will remain in their cottage at St. Simons until September 1. Mr. Church was recently promoted to sales manager for H. K. Wampole company, and s one of the best posted drug men in the south.

FLOOD OF UNIQUE STAMPS ADVERTISING CONVENTION

One Hundred Thousand Distributed Among Atlanta Concerns for Outgoing Mail

THE CONVENTION STAMP.

Many thousands of pieces of mail that started from the Atlanta postoffice on their journeys to points throughout the southeastern states last week carried a unique large blue stamp as well as the smaller and more common red one.

One hundred thousand of these stamps were printed for the Merchants and Manufactures' association of Atlanta and supplies of them distributed to the members who used them on their mail to advertise the Southern Merchants' convention.

Sponges on the mailing desks at the wholesale houses were put to hard service. Every jobbing concern put one of the stamps on each of the several thousand special letters of invitation they mailed in regard ta the convention, as well as affixing them to their miscellaneous mail.

Every letter or circular sent from the office of the association during the wek also carired one of the special stamps on the envelope. The flood of convention stamps over the south is keeping the occasion right beofre every merchant. Every time he receives a letter from the Atlanta jobbers this week he wil find the attractive little reminder staring at him when he starts to open the envelope.

The stamps show a blue background with the lettering and designed as here reproduced.

RETAILERS REMAIN TO URGE PASSAGE OF LAWS

Convention of Ga. Assn. Adjourns—Indorses Newspapers as Advertising Mediums

A large delegation of members of the Retail Merchants' association of Georgia, which held its annual convention here the first three days of last week, remained in Atlanta to appear before the general judiciary committee Monday in the interest of bettar garnishment laws. The delegation will represent twenty-five counties of the state.

Practically the entire work of the convention here was devoted to urging the garnishment bill and the fraudulent check bill for which the association has labored long and arduously. The formal program of the convention was dispensed with and the members spent most of their time at the capitol urging the claims of the bill upon the members of the legislature.

The following are the officers elected for the new year: J. W. S. Hardy, of Wayeross, president; J. A. Goode, of Griffin, first vice president; W. P. Grantham, of Thomasville, second vice president, and John Bratton, of Atlanta, secretary.

One of the important resolutions passed by the association was that urging merchants to use the local newspapers as the best advertising medium. Expressions of thanks were made to The Journal for its support of the cause of the retail merchants.

The resolution on advertising was as follows:

Whereas, The aims and objects of this organization are to be helpful and educational to the merchants of the state generally, and whereas, it is, and has always been, the policy of this association to advise and urge its members to refrain from patronizing any and all manner of questionable or illegitimate advertising propositions or schemes that are constantly being urged upon them, and, whereas, the local newspaper has always been a large factor in the building up of the commercial interest, general growth and prosperity of its section; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we recommend a more general use of its advertising columns, Be it further

"Resolved, That we thank the press of the state for the support they have given us in our work, and bespeak a continuation of the same for our mutual good. Be it further

"Resolved, That we especially thank The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution for their initiative, liberal and most cordial support of our cause, that of promoting the mercantile interests of Georgia."

ALERT MERCHANT OPENS TEN-CENT DEPARTMENT

Lawrenceville Dealer Says Atlanta Is Best Place to Buy Goods

J. H. M'GEE.

Among Georgia's alert merchants none is more alert than J. H. McGee, of Lawrenceville, Ga. Running along in the same old way is not his way at all. He is always on the lookout for business opportunities and when he sees one he doesn't let it get away.

One of the business opportunities he has long recognized is that of buying his goods in Atlanta. He has been doing this for the last twenty years and when he saw the time was ripe for adding a Five and Ten-Cent department to his business, Atlanta was the place he looked to for his goods. He purchased a big order from E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten-Cent company and will arrange the stock in an accessible and attractive sixty-foot section of his store and will have the opening of his Five and Ten-Cent department on August 2.

"Atlanta is the place for Georgia merchants to purchase their stocks," says Mr. McGee. "There is large saving and great satisfaction in dealing with the jobbers of the nearby home market. From such a market he can get his stock for less money than he can from eastern houses. Besides, he can keep his stock fresh with no left-over or shop-worn goods on his hands."

GA. TRAVELERS PAY THEIR DUES PROMPTLY

Editor Firing Line: The annual dues of the Georgia Travelers' association were due July 1-15.

The officers are much pleased with the promptness with which the members sent in these dues and the enthusiasm with which the members are working for the organization.

There has been no death claims to pay since February and the treasurer reports funds at hand to pay immediately any claims that may arise. To any who may have overlooked payment of annual dues of two by July 15, there will be no protection until the dues are remitted. In accordance with the newly adopted constitution the executive board must suspend all members from burial benefit fund who are fifteen days in arrears on dues and thirty days on assessments.

Very truly yours,
C. J. HOLLINGSWORTH.

URGES CLEARING OF PEACHTREE CREEK BED

Capt. Clayton Points Out How Small Amount of Work Would Save Much

In order that the lowlands may not be flooded and to add to the efficiency of the Peachtree disposal plant City Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton is urging the county commissioners to clear out the bed of Peachtree creek from the Peachtree bridge to a point below the Howell mill road, a distance of about two and one-half miles.

The county agreed sometime ago to do the work, and Captain Clayton thinks it should be done during the summer months as the men will have to work in water while clearing the creek bed. Also he is anxious to have the creek cleared before the new disposal plant is started as it will enable the plant to do its work better.

The entire valley of Peachtree creek from Armour to the river is very flat and the bed of the creek much obstructed with fallen trees, roots, a few ledges of rock and other obstacles. On account of these obstructions added to the lack of fall, the velocity of the stream is very little, and consequently a comparatively light rainfall causes the creek to overflow its banks. These overflows leave lagoons which soon become stagnant and infested with mosquitos. The prevailing winds are from Peachtree creek toward the city and the mosquitoes are blown into the whole north side.

If the obstructions were removed the velocity would be so increased that the present bed of the creek would take care of all the water except under heavy storm conditions and, in addition, the reduction of floods would help the operation of the Peachtree creek disposal plant, as the filters of the plant discharge into the stream only a few feet above the normal water level and back water will interfere with the proper discharge of the filters.

The bed of the creek is filling up more and more each year because the flow is not enough to keep it washed out. The clearing out of the stream will give increased velocity which will help the creek to keep itself clear.

With a force of about fifty men the work could be done in about two weeks.

WANTS TRAFFIC COPS TO WEAR COOLER CLOTHES

Mrs. E. B. Smith writes to The Journal in behalf of the traffic officers, whom she says swelter during this hot weather in their heavy uniforms while stationed in the middle of the down town streets.

Mrs. Smith calls attention to the recent hot weather uniforms adopted for the mail carriers and suggests that the idea would be a good one for the city of Atlanta to adopt. The heavy blue coats with their close fitting collars and the helmets ought surely to be discarded says Mrs. Smith.

"The straw helmet at least could be provided," concludes Mrs. Smith, "and the discarding of the uniform coat for the blue shirtwaist would not mar his dignity in the least. His authority would not be less, and his star would be just as prominent."

TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF DR. THEODORE HERZL

The Jahrzeit, or birthday, of the Jewish statesman and teacher, Dr. Theodore Herzl, will be celebrated with fitting ceremonies Sunday by the Jewish congregation Beth Hamidrash Anshe Sepharad, according to the announcement of the secretary of the congregation, Dr. Henry Fuehrer, of 322 Woodward avenue. The ceremonies will take place between Minchah and Maariblı prayers about 6 o'clock in the evening and will be conducted by Rabbi David Stein.

Best Parole Record in America Made By Atlanta Federal Prison

Of 280 Men Paroled, Only Six Have Broken Their Pledges. Secret Attributed to Splendid Management of Warden Moyer

Since December 22, 1910, which was a short time after the United States parole law went into effect, 280 men have been paroled from the Atlanta Federal prison. Of that number only six have broken their parole, making an average of about ninety-eight men, out of 100 who respect their given word, and who appreciate the opportunity for another chance in life.

The men on parole were sent up for all classes of misdoing, from murder down to the selling of liquor in violation of the law; yet with the exception of the six mentioned they made good when given their freedom.

During the year ending June 30, 109 men were paroled, four of the violators of the parole being among this number. Of the 109 men, ninety-three have been discharged permanently; that is, they have finished the term prescribed and are dismissed from the authority of the prison. Seventy-five are still on parole, and are sending in monthly reports to the warden. Five of these are life-term men who were given another chance under the amendment to the parole act to include life-term prisoners.

These men have worked altogether 20,048 1-2 days during the year, and have been idle only 2,959 1-2 days, this including days when they were unemployed for sickness or any cause whatever.

Their total earnings amounted to $45,921.60, of which they spent only $39,894.32. Their savings amount to $9,267.88, showing that they are endeavoring to make provision for the future.

The men on parole are engaged in all kinds of work. Most of them went back again to the professions in which they worked before they were sentenced, each man having a job before he left the prison on parole. Engineering, farming, electrical work, bookkeeping, farm kinds of general business are among the vocations taken up by the men, while some went out into the world again to put into practice the trade or profession they learned while in prison.

ATLANTA'S RECORD BEST.

Atlanta's parole record is the best of any prison, the average of ninety-eight men out of every hundred proving most gratifying to Warden H. Moyer, who worked hard for the parole law. "Even outside of prison, ninety-eight out of every 100 men who kept their word is a good record, and I am proud of the men who have gone out of here."

The warden has his own theory as to how men should be handled, and the results obtained in the prison would indicate that his methods are good.

According to the warden, the prisons of the world should be the hospitals in which moral, spiritual and menial diseases are cured; while those outside should get to work eliminating the sources of evil. Just as the women of Atlanta inaugurated annual cleaning up day for the city, so should men and women come together to remove the sources of crime.

"Crime," says the warden, "will never be wiped out, but by removing the causes of crime it may be lessened."

With a keen desire to help every man, and with an intimate knowledge of human nature, the warden becomes a strong force for good and when the men leave the prison on parole, they carry with them not only the knowledge that they forfeit their freedom if the parole is broken, but also the knowledge that whenever they make good they have the heartiest approval and encouragement of the warden.

When the parole for life-term prisoners was announced as a certainty there was general rejoicing throughout the prison. Every man thought that he would be eligible for parole; but, as Warden Moyer says, they forgot that previous good conduct is one of the main requirements for parole.

The men whose conduct entitled them to parole, received it. The ones who failed to measure up to the standard found they were denied. They felt ugly about it, and a feeling of soreness arose. It was the reaction of hope raised high; but in time the proper attitude succeeded the raw feeling, and from time to time one, two or three men are liberated on parole. Three went out Thursday, one Friday, and a few others will be released soon.

PAROLE IN OTHER PRISONS.

While other records have not been good as that of the Atlanta prison, the parole law undoubtedly is succeeding. The main question back of its success, however, is the character of the men in charge of the prisons. Where the warden knows his men, sympathizes with them, and respects the spark of manhood in each, and tries to build up a good spirit, the parole men keep their word. This is indicated by the reports from the various prisons. In one, which has been noted for its brutality and where the warden was removed not so long ago for starving some of the men, more than half the paroled men failed to keep their word. In Atlanta, where humane methods and kindness obtain, only about 2 per cent have failed to make good.

DR. STARNES WILL GIVE FAREWELL CONCERT TODAY

City Organist Will Be Assisted by His Wife, Who Will Sing

Heat Is Quick to Affect the Bowels

Well-Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation

So many people are in the habit of eating cold food in hot weather that constipation is very common during summer. It is best to vary the food and have some hot things, as, for example, soups and hot fish and meats, if that is to be the diet. Iced water should be drunk sparingly.

In spite of all care people will become constipated, and if you find yourself in that condition you can get immediate relief by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is no time of the year when you should be more careful of constipation than in the summer, for many of the serious illnesses as well as the fatalities result from a clogging up of the bowels. You also need general good health to withstand the heat, and hence Syrup Pepsin is best to take because it contains tonic ingredients that help to build up the entire system.

Numerous users throughout the land will verify these facts, among them Mr. George C. Allen, 408 N. Main St., Reading, Mass., who recovered his health completely after using only two bottles; and Miss Anna Schoff, 249 S. Washington St., Baltimore, Md., who uses it for constipation and now has her mother and friends also using it. They now avoid drastic remedies like cathartics, tablets, purgatives, salt waters, pills and such things. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild and pleasant, and children like it. You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. Each bottle must do what is claimed or your money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

HOUSEWIVES DEMAND A PUBLIC MARKET

3,000 Atlanta Women Signed Petition 14 Years Ago for a Public Market; Today, Every Woman Joins in This Demand

FOURTEEN years ago the women of Atlanta demanded a public market, and fourteen years later they are continuing their demand.

They consider that a public market is the greatest necessity that Atlanta lacks; but their earnestness throughout fourteen years of failure has been patient rather than militant.

When Mrs. Burton Smith was president in 1899 of the Atlanta Women's clubs, a petition signed by 3,000 housewives, was presented to council in which the need of a public market was explained definitely. Council was roused to a mild interest, but the public market was passed over and forgotten for other municipal questions; and housewives of the city found that their first effort had met with failure.

But perhaps they realized that time is needed to prove the value of really important projects; at least, they set about individually to continue their earnest demand. No further petitions were prepared for council, but each housewife made herself a missionary in the cause of public markets.

At the end of fourteen years, a central place where foodstuffs shall be sold is still but a plan; yet, the demand is even more earnest than in the beginning. And it is now being heeded.

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED.

The Atlanta chamber of commerce has appointed a committee to investigate the means of establishing a market place, and this committee has outlined tentative ways of providing for this mart.

One suggestion is that an underwriting company be formed to provide a public market at a cost of $250,000.

Another is that an issue of $500,000 in bonds be authorized by the city for the establishment of a market.

A third is that a platform be built over the tracks below Forsyth street bridge as a place for a market.

Fourteen years ago council read the petition of the 3,000 housewives, but its attention waned before reaching that pitch at which definite plans would be proposed. Still, one failure may be a preface to success.

At no time since housewives first advised Atlanta that the city's chief need was a public market, have they been more earnest in demanding a market place. They feel that they should demand instead of suggest because in their opinion a public market would improve the health of the city and would do much toward reducing the high cost of living.

Women who are foremost in the demand for a public market choose to believe that the investigation by the chamber of commerce is the success which has followed the brief interest that council felt in the petition urged by the Women's clubs in 1899.

WOMEN ARE UNITED.

"Every woman in Atlanta wants a public market," says Mrs. Burton Smith, who was president of the Atlanta Women's clubs at the time the city should supply. One considpetition signed by 3,000 names was eration alone, that of health, is sufficient to require the establishment of presented to council. "This is a public need which all women think that a public market. Foodstuffs now are sold everywhere. An inspection of them is impossible. The city does its best, the grocers co-operate, but until we have our foodstuffs sold at one mart, where a rigid inspection may be maintained, the city cannot make sure that only pure foods are sold."

"A public market," says Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, "would be a means of economy, convenience and better foods. It would group all the small markets into one big one, where the housewife could make a better selection of foods, would find them offered at a lower price, would see that they were of a better quality.

"Other large cities have public markets and benefit by them. Atlanta lacks a public market, and suffers as a result. What greater considerations could a public project offer than health and economy? What undertaking upon the part of the city could benefit everyone more directly than a city market?

"The city could spend money in no way that would prove of greater benefit to everyone than through the establishment of a public market," says Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr. "All women are in favor of such a market. No other project could be suggested which would so completely have their support. Every housewife sees that such a market would make foods better in quality, cheaper in price, and more convenient for purchasing.

EVERYONE WOULD BENEFIT.

"The establishment of a market would be an undertaking for the good of the whole city. Every individual would be helped. I can see no reason why we shouldn't have a public market and every reason why we should."

The three considerations of economy, of better foods, of convenience in marketing are emphasized by Mrs. Francis Jones.

"These three reasons," she holds, "are sufficient for the establishment of a market place. Is there any other way by which the city could benefit everyone through the expenditure of $500,000—could lessen everyone's grocery bill, could add to the health of the city, could lighten the household duties of every home?

"You find public markets in nearly all the other large cities. They are a means of economy, of convenience, of health. Why should Atlanta lack this necessity?

The greater convenience for the housewife in marketing is stressed by Mrs. William Owens as one of the reasons for a public market.

"As it is now," she says, "the whole morning may be spent in marketing, and yet you see only a part of what the market affords. You can't visit more than one or two stores, and you must depend on what they have in stock and what prices they offer. But if there was a public market, all that the market afforded would be collected into one place, and the purchaser could choose not only the best, but the cheapest.

"Everyone wants a public market, because everyone needs just that

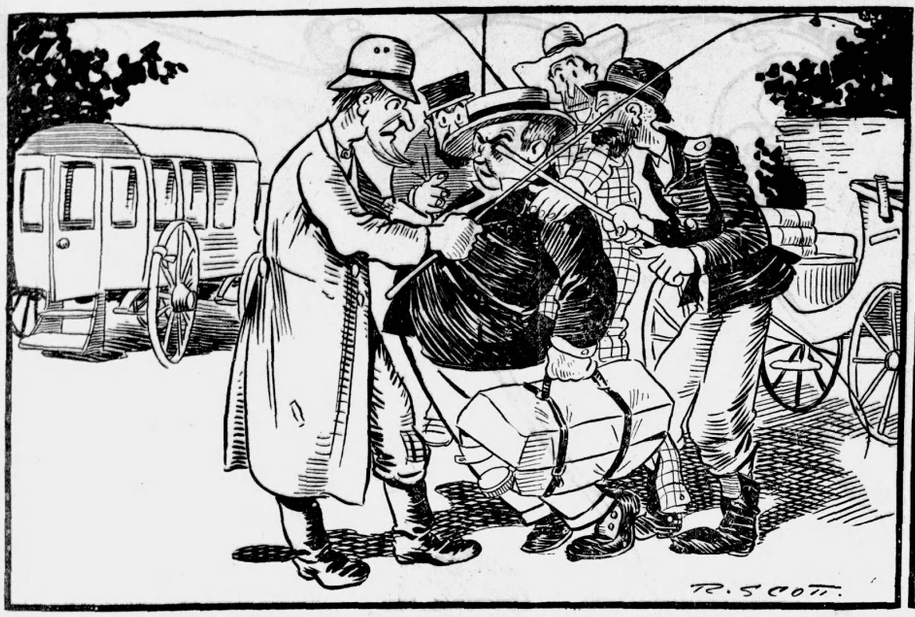
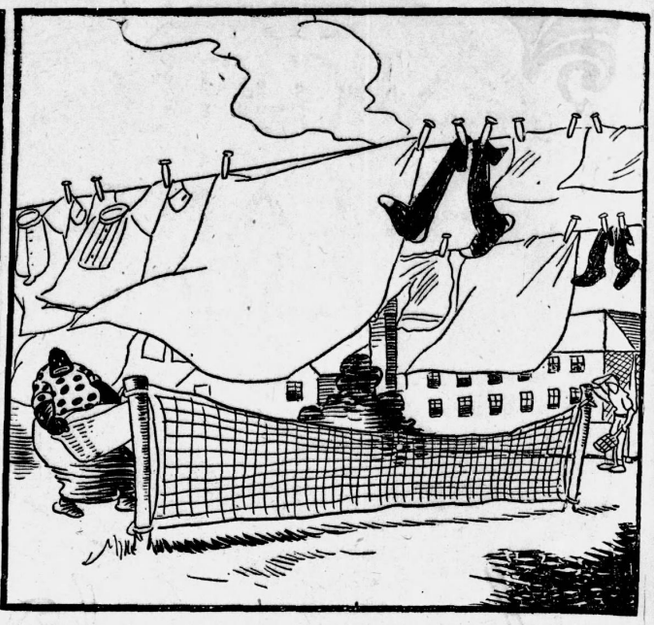
MR. DOOLEY AT A SUMMER RESORT.

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE.



"Each wan iv thim had a whip that he poked in me eyes"



"Th' tennis coort had moved around to th' back yard an' was full iv clotheslines."

"I SEE be th' pa-apers," said Mr. Hennessy, "that ivrybody is out iv town."

"So they ar-re," said Mr. Dooley. "With th' exciption iv two or three millyon citizens who're detained here be business or remooncrative labor, like ye'ersilf an' me, all our popylation is away somewheres bein' fanned be coolin' breezes fr'm a pa'm leaf fan. There's nawthin' f'r us poor dwellers in this desarted village to do but take off our coats an' vests, onhitch our suspinders, switch on th' ilicthric fan, put another chunk iv ice in th' pitcher, an' make th' best iv our mis'rable condition."

"Life must be very injyeable in thim summer resorts," said Mr. Hennessy.

"It is," said Mr. Dooley. "It's a great thing to be rich an' be able to lave th' torrid heat iv th' city where there's always a shady side to th' sthreet an' duck to a place where if a man owns a lot with anny shade in it he puts a fence around it an' charges admission. Wanst whin I had let all me debts accumylate till I was rich beyond th' fondest dhreams iv avarice, I took a vacation an' spint it at a summer resort. Wan marnin' I picked up an illusthrated wurruk iv fiction, sint to me pers'nally, mind ye, be th' proprietor iv th' Wild Waves hotel at Elysyum-be-th'-Lake. There was a pitcher in this here docymint iv a stately palace with flags flyin' fr'm ivry corner an' beautiful ladies walkin' up an' down th' veranda or swingin' idly in hammocks. At th' front steps iv th' hotel a carredge with a pair iv prancin' bays was dhrawn up. Out in front a little girl was rollin' a hoop an' there was a tennis coort with two fair queens iv s'ciety in muslin an' two college lads in white flannel pants, th' sketch bein' marked: 'Micks doubles at th' Wild Waves.' Through a window iv th' hotel ye cud see a gintleman iv me own age playin' a game iv fifteen ball pool, an' out on th' lake at laste a hundherd white-wing yachts was sailin' over th' surface iv th' blooest ink that th' printer cud buy f'r money. 'Always cool,' says this valentine. 'Splindid fishin', swimmin', sailin', an' out iv dure spoorts. Eggs, poulthry, viggytables, an' milk fr'm our own farm.'

"'Well,' says I to mesilf, 'here's where I jump aboard. This Hiven on arth is th' place f'r me to freckle in. I will put Gallagher in charge iv th' fountain an' hie me thither.' So I bought a yard iv thransportation an' wint on me way.

"Th' brakeman rassled me out iv th' car at a place that had wanst been a lumber town, but was run down. Th' principal occypation iv th' citizens at prisint is dhrivin' a hack. They were attindin' to business whin I arrived, an' they give me a rile welcome like th' king iv Spain gets whin he goes out f'r a dhrive. Each wan iv thim had a whip that he poked in me eyes as he said: 'Carredge, Cap? Gran' View hotel, Palace hotel, Plisint Prospect house,' an' so on. 'I want to go to th' Wild Waves hotel,' says I. 'Here, Mike,' says wan iv th' charioteers, 'here's another fellow that's fallen f'r ye'er dump.' 'This way,' says Mike, seizin' me be th' arm an' flingin' me into th' identical 'bus that brought Long Jawn Wentworth to Chicago an' dhrawn be th' same dhromedaries. Th' ol' coach was in an excillint state iv presarvation an' th' hotel man had restored it be layin' red brussels carpets on th' benches.

"This museem piece was fairly well filled at th' time be ladies an' their offspring, but I managed to find a place be settin' partly on th' seat nearest th' dure an' partly on a child iv six summers ajacent to me. Th' little pet stopped cryin' at wanst, an' I got a warm look iv gratichood fr'm th' child's mother, who come an' grabbed her away an' called her a boor. In fact, all th' looks in th' 'bus be this time was warm, an' th' ladies, though beautiful, as is their way in me eyes, were a little out iv curl. An' ye might say it was a warm day if ye were not undher oath. It was th' kind iv a day whin railroad firemen get sunsthruck on their way home. Hogan says th' sun is sixty-three millyon miles fr'm th' arth. I don't know how he knows. Maybe he paced it. But I found it was nearer th' hotel thin th' lake.

"Well, sir, afther a long argymint between th' dhriver an' th' horses, conducted, I thought, with an onnecessary display iv temper be Mike, but with th' ca'mness iv ripe ol' age be th' horses, these chargers consinted to dhraw us away fr'm th' railroad property befure we cud be run in as threspassers. It was plain that th' horses did not want to go back to th' hotel, although they did not take their meals there. So we were rushed, or, ye might say, bounced, through a sthreet lined with handsome wood houses occypied be Armeenyans an' Greeks sellin' ol' Turkish rugs, ol' furniture, ol' silver, ol' fruit, an' so on. We passed th' heart iv th' city. I've often heerd iv th' heart iv a city an' wondhered why it was so called. P'raps it's because there's where th' banks ar-re located. Annyhow, we dashed on an' on an' up an' down, through th' heart iv th' city, an' at a place which I guessed must be th' spinal colyum Mike cried 'Ho,' yanked frantically at th' reins, an' applied th' brakes. But too late. Th' horses had already stopped, an' we found oursilves in front iv a buildin' that I instantly recognized fr'm th' pitcher be what Mike told me as th' Wild Waves hotel; but, O! how changed fr'm th' time whin it set f'r its photygraft. It was th' same hotel, but th' blush had fled fr'm its shingles. Th' flags flew no more, but had flown. Th' lake had receded three miles an' its site was occypied be a coalyard, th' tennis coort had moved around to th' back yard an' was full iv clotheslines, th' little girl with th' hoop had grown up, got marrid, an' wint to Sheboygan to live, an' th' prancin' bays pranced no longer. On th' spacyous veranda, or front stoop, th' on'y s'ciety lady I cud see was wan iv about me own age an' figure who was settin' in a rockin' chair rockin'.

"She was a great rocker, this lady. I've seen manny a good rocker, but she was th' best I iver did see. I'd back her again th' wurruld in a long distance rockin' compytition. They were lots iv other rockers in th' hotel. Most iv th' ladies some time durin' th' afthernoon come out an' took a canter f'r two or three hours, an' some iv thim were pretty fair. But they were just fair. None iv thim was in th' class with me little frind. She was on th' thrack at 9 o'clock, an' with th' exciption iv a few minyits out f'r refrishmints she niver paused till th' lights were doused. I figured out that she had done about a hundherd miles a day.

"Well, annyhow, I carrid me portmanty into th' horsetelry, as Hogan wud say, an' approachin' a young fellow who was lookin' at somethin' on th' ceilin' I ast f'r a room. 'Boy,' says he, 'show th' gent to iliven forty-three.' 'I'd like a bath,' says I. 'A what?' says he. 'A bath,' says I. 'Didn't ye take wan befure ye left?' says he. 'I did,' says I, 'but I lost it again on th' thrain.' 'Well,' says he, 'I'll speak to th' boss about it an' maybe he can put ye on th' waitin' list. But it's sthrange ye shud come so far f'r a bath. Have ye no other resources f'r amusin' ye'ersilf?' he says.

"Be this time an' urchin had seized me valise, an' whin he called out, 'This way, ol' scout,' I followed him up sivral, or it may've been sivral dozens, iv thim means iv thransportation that some wag has called flights iv stairs. Up we flew to th' rafters, where he led me into a room that fitted me as though I'd been measured f'r it. 'Th' hotel must be crowded,' says I. 'O, no,' says he. 'Th' rush hasn't begun yet. There's no wan on th' roof an' on'y wan fam'ly is usin' th' pool table,' he says.

"After spindin' a few minyits standin' on a *chair lookin' out iv me dormer window at a mag*nificint prospect iv th' roof iv th' hotel laundhry, I wint downstairs an' says I to th' clerk: 'I haven't played lawn tennis f'r years, if iver,' says I. 'If ye will inthrajooce me to some young college fellow an' lend me a ball an' a club an' a pair iv white pants I'd like to take a smash at him f'r a couple iv innings.' 'I'm sorry,' he says, 'but th' coort's in use. It's wash day.' 'Well, thin,' says I, 'cud ye stir up some masther iv th' iv'ries to play me a game iv fifteen ball pool?' 'Too bad,' says he, 'but th' pool balls ar-re at th' plumber's havin' their wounds dhressed with putty. I cud lend ye a couple iv potatoes if ye like to knock thim around till th' occypants iv th' table ar-re ready to retire,' he says. 'I'd advise ye to take th' potatoes. They're somewhat rounder thin th' balls,' he says. 'Thin can ye direct me to th' lake?' I says. 'Gladly,' says he. 'Take th' throlley at th' carner an' thransfer at Cass sthreet. Thin walk through Spry's lumber yard an' acrost th' Mitchigan Centhral thracks beyant th' grain elivator an' ye'll find th' lake. At laste,' he says, 'I think ye will. I niver see it, but I'm told it's there.' 'I wanst see a pitcher iv this hotel,' says I. 'Was th' photygrafter a man iv good habits?' says I. 'O, yes,' says he, 'but while th' pitcher was bein' took th' boss come out an' talked into th' camera. Th' boss' convarsation wud color a rainbow so ye wudden't know it.' 'Well,' says I, 'I suppose there's nawthin' f'r me to do but go to dinner.' 'Alas,' says he, 'I fear not.' He was a jovyal an' sarcastic man an' I liked him. He told me he was pining to go on his vacation to Saint Looey, which th' doctor had ricominded on account iv its summer climate.

"He led me into a room that fitted me as though I'd been measured f'r it."

"So I sauntered into th' dinin' room, which I aisily located be th' rich aromy iv viands an' th' rustle iv crockery. A former king iv Dahomey who presided over th' bankit hall, without hearin' me definse, waved me into a chair alongside th' lady iv th' rockin' chair. 'Madam,' says I, thinkin', to pass th' time in an innocint flirtation, 'how's the rockin' today?' She made no reply, but rose an' hastened to her faithful steed. Thin a young an' thoroughly colored fellow, a nice fellow in his own way, which he always was, hove alongside, an' afther nately clanin' th' tablecloth into me lap handed me a bill iv fare that looked like th' tariff schedule on farm products. It was a magnificint procession iv victuals marchin' five abreast, with th' right restin' on olives an' th' left on a dimmytasse iv coffee. 'Well, sir,' says I, 'this is surely ragal.' An' I told th' waiter I wud play it up an' down an' both sides. But whin he come in balancin' a thray as large as that table on th' tip iv his finger an' all occypied be little dishes with nourishment in thim I was ashamed iv mesilf. 'How exthravagant us Americans ar-re,' says I. 'Here is food enough to sustain a whole Europeen fam'ly. What a waste,' says I. 'Th' on'y way ye can waste th' food in this hotel,' said a sad voice near me, 'is be atin' it.' But me neighbor was too severe. It was an excillint reepast in th' style invinted be that prince iv epicoors th' late George M. Pullman. Th' viggytables was without question fr'm th' farm, although th' ol' place may've changed gr-reatly since they left it to follow th' lure iv th' city. 'Am I correctly informed,' says I to th' waiter, 'in thinkin' that all th' viggytables on th' table comes fr'm th' hotel's own cannery?' 'That's right, judge,' says he. 'An' th' milk?' 'We condinse our own milk, cap,' he replied proudly. 'Do ye ate here?' says I. 'No, indeedy, dock,' says he. 'I have a comfortable home,' he says.

"Th' dinin' room was a magnificint sight. Ye cudden't bate it in anny Europeen counthry. No rile coort cud show so manny beautiful dhressed ladies with so manny sparklin' jools flashin' in th' sunlight. I niver thought there was so much precious jims unpawned in th' wurruld as graced th' fair necks, fingers, ears, an' hair iv these charmers. I ain't much at appraisin' th' fiminine harness, but 'twud be a good guess to say that th' decorations riprisinted an invistmint iv close on five millyon dollars. Thim were th' clerk's figures. It made me proud iv me counthry. An' whin all this conflagration hobbled out onto th' front porch an' begun rockin' ye cudden't look at it f'r more thin a minyit at a time without a headache. On'y I noticed that th' ladies didn't look jovyal. They niver smiled, but their lovely faces wore an expressyon iv fierce determination such as I've sildom seen on th' face iv a man but whin he was in mortal combat.

"Me mournful frind iv th' dinner table set alongside iv me an' explained it to me. 'Wud ye be lookin' merry if ye was in a rasslin' match f'r ye'er socyal standin'?' says he. 'This ain't play,' says he. 'It's a tur-rble compytition, a sort iv a tournymint where manny ar-re slain. There are enthries fr'm all parts iv th' counthry an' there ain't an hour in th' afthernoon or avenin' whin ye won't see a dozen lively encounthers. D'ye see that blonde lady in purple walkin' down th' porch—th' wan with th' dimon tiary in her hat? She's issuin' a defi to th' lady in green in th' front row. I think she loses this round, but she won't be baten in th' end. She'll pull something out iv th' thrunk this afthernoon that'll get her th' money. It's a wondherful sight, but,' he says, 'I wisht I was to home.'

"'Why did ye come here?' says I. 'That's th' raison,' says he, pintin' to a lady who had sivral furlongs iv dimons around her neck an' wore besides a pink plush dhress slashed up th' side an' at laste wan purple stockin' that I cud see. 'An' why does she come here?' says I. 'D'ye suppose,' says he, 'that she'd waste thim illuminations on th' home folks?' he says. 'No, sir. She's been comin' here f'r twinty years, an' she's aisily th' champeen iv th' place. I don't like to boast,' he says, openin' his allypacky coat an' thrustin' his thumbs undher his suspinders, 'but,' he says, with his mild blue eyes full iv a sudden fire, 'I got five hundherd dollars to bet she's th' best dhressed female in th' Mississippi valley fr'm Duluth to Baton Rouge. She's come here with forty thrunks full iv upholstery an' a steel safe crowded with precyous glassware, an' whin she's oncovered thim all she'll make th' rest iv thim women feel that they got their wrappers fr'm th' foundlings' home,' he says. 'But,' he says, rescomin' his plaintiff tone an' lookin' wistfully at his congress gaiters, 'jus' th' same I'd give annything to be back home on me own porch, with me coat off, watchin' th' merry throng go by.' 'An' where do ye live whin ye ain't here?' says I. 'In Gary, Indyanny,' says he. 'Well,' thinks I, 'Gary is a handsome an' prosp'rous city an' it turned out more steel rails last year thin ayether Rome or Venice. But if a man fr'm Gary pines to go home, what's keepin' a citizen iv th' methropolus iv th' west here?' An' I wint into th' hotel, tore me valise fr'm th' rosin on th' flure, subjicted mesilf to a search at th' hands iv th' cashier, an' left th' scene iv splindor f'river. Arrivin' in our fair city, I found it as gay as usual. Th' sthreets were full iv life an' crowded with th' happy peas*anthry; I* see a man thrown out iv a resthrant befure I'd gone a block, an' injine 5 was jus' turnin' out f'r a fire as I passed. Whin I got home I switched on th' ilicthric fan an' put some ice an' something to melt it with in a pitcher, an' Hogan come in an' we played siven up till 4 in the marnin', when he turned a jack an' I put out th' lights."

"Ye go on," said Mr. Hennessy. "I've seen ye ivry day f'r twinty years an' ye niver left this place."

"It was a long time ago," said Mr. Dooley hastily. "Besides, don't I r-read th' pa-apers? An', annyhow, *what's th' use in havin' an imagi*nation if it don't bring ye in annything? Th' best way to put up with ye'er throubles is to think iv th' throubles iv others. If ye don't know they have anny, think up some f'r thim. I cudden't stand th' heat if I had to stand it alone. An' I'd be an arnychist if I thought a millyonaire got anny more fun out iv life thin I do. I like to cheer mesilf be thinkin' that he spinds his money in exchangin' discomforts that he's used to f'r thim that he's got to get accustomed to. Th' on'y diff'rence between him an' me today is that I'm hot in Chicago an' he's hot in Newport. There's no place like home f'r discomforts."

"For the art and nature of things nothing parallels this."

A BIT of sunniest Italy has been planted before our eyes in the house and its surroundings of George Adair in Druid Hills. The splendid poise of the house in picturesque Italian architecture, the gently undulating, well disposed lawn makes a picture "tenderly hued as to opal," as fresh and dewy as a garden at dawn! And the happier he who can see it at all times.

Art and nature have indeed conspired to make of it a place where the magic hand of time will linger in a loving caress. An atmosphere of home pervades the place, yet with a witchery of scenes longed for, and places dreamed of rise to one's mind in looking upon "The Villa" in the early morning sunlight.

With the shadow of tree and shrub across the lawn, the delicate tracery of light and shade from the Italian covered pergola entrances, and the vistas to be had from all sides, of cool and leafy glades, one's beauty-loving eye finds complete satisfaction.

While much has been done, more remains to be accomplished before the superb landscape scheme is complete.

And then "time and the good house" will commune to make perfection.

The home is remarkable for detail inside and out. Small shrubs around the balustrade, boxwood trees in beautifully modeled vases arranged around the exterior of the house gives a happy touch of Italian feeling. The balustrade enclosed, grass terraces on either side of the central entrance are veritable bits of Fairyland and seem to put one in a happy frame of mind at the very portals.

Like England, Italy once "built as house upon the hill," for the obvious reason of self-protection, and then, like England, the necessity being gone, Italy too began building in the valley and upon the plain. And it is from this time on that a distinctive Italian architecture may be traced. An architecture which we Americans modify to our own uses. There is a peculiar fitness for Italian architecture in the south, the same climatic conditions having to be considered. The easy growth of semi-tropical trees and shrubs admitting of an admirable opportunity of typical landscape effects.

Maurice Hewlett speaks of the "cool and sun guarded rooms" of the Italians, and further says "as for their houses they made them spacious deep in the eaves. Many windows, having courts and fountains in the midst and treeful gardens behind."

To do this is to do the artist's work, to do it grandly, with a great air as of some God surging in you, is to play the fine artist, and achieve the masterpiece.

Louis XVI Entrance Hall

In this part of Mr. Adair's home we present a very beautiful hall in every detail. The mahogany wainscot is paneled nine feet high, finished in dull dark color. The ornamental plaster cornices are finished in old ivory very rich in detail. The walls are in illuminated burlap, finished in rich Tuscan gold, with a very slight decoration. The hangings are also in gold with brocade border trimmings. The floors are covered in Austrian hand tufted rugs of special design, and are rich and luxurious.

Lighting fixtures of carved wood finished in Tuscan gold, give ample light to brighten the long corridors. A feature of this beautiful hall is the double stairway and the entrance under the landing leading to the gardens. Furniture of carved mahogany covered in Louis XVI brocades, all in perfect harmony with the style and color scheme. A hall which bids one welcome.

Drawing Room

Here we have the formal room of the house in pure Louis XVI. Rich in color and harmony, though very soft and in low tones of color. The lighting fixtures are in Tuscan gold, rich in detail and chasing. Here again is a paneled wainscot nine feet in height. The walls are done in a decorative canvas in soft brown damask effect. The hand tufted rug is in brown, with an effective border, which carries the old hues, mulberries and golds, "the color scheme of the room." Rich Louis XVI damask trimmed with broche borders are used at the windows, and antique velours in the same tones are hung in the doors. The delicately carved mahogany furniture covered in rich brocades and damask, with attractive pillows, lamps and ornaments, make of this a truly harmonious and restful room.

The Library

Truly a library in every sense. The wood trim is in dull mahogany. Bookcases built in to a height of nine feet, filled with rare and unusual volumes, give the atmosphere of a perfect room. The color scheme is green and mahogany colors. The colonial mahogany furniture, all made for comfort, gives this room a truly home-like feeling. The walls are hung in green damask, dull in tone. A suitable background for the rare pictures that adorn the walls. A rich hand tufted rug covers the floor. The mantel and beamed ceiling are attractive features of this room. The large davenport faces the fire, and behind it we see a large carved table, with a large reading lamp to insure perfect light. Truly this is a perfect library.

The Dining Room

A stately rich and effective room. High wainscoting of dull mahogany. A rich but simple ornamental plastic ceiling, finished in old ivory. Walls in Verdure tapestry with predominant tones of old blue. The window hangings are in old blue brocaded silk, rich in tone, while the doors are hung in antique velour. The large circular bay window opens out upon a covered terrace, and affords a beautiful view of the gardens. The large hand tufted rug in blues, with the shaped circular rug in the bay, are an attractive feature, as well as the carved wood lighting fixtures. Here we see the Italian alabaster bowl used to good advantage in the center fixture.

Mrs. Edith Wharton, in describing the Villa Pliniana, one of the most beautiful in Italy, says:

"It lies on a small bay on the east side of the lake, and faces due north, so that, while the villas of Cernobbio are bathed in sunlight, a deep green shade envelops it. The house stands on a narrow ledge, its foundations projecting into the lake, and its back built against the almost vertical wooded cliff which protects it from the southern sun. Down the cliffs pours a foaming mountain torrent from the Val di Calore, just beneath the peak of Torno; and this torrent the architect of the Villa Pliniana has captured in its descent to the lake and carried through the central apartment of the villa.

"The effect produced is unlike anything else, even in the wonderland of Italian gardens. The two wings of the house, a plain and somewhat melancholy-looking structure, are joined by an open arcaded room, against the back wall of which the torrent pours down, over stone-work tremulous with moss and ferns, gushing out again beneath the balustrade of the loggia, where it makes a great semi-circle of glittering whiteness in the dark-green waters of the lake. The old house is saturated with the freshness and drenched with the flying spray of the caged torrent. The bare vaulted rooms reverberate with it, the stone floors are green with its dampness, the air quivers with its cool incessant rush. The contrast of this dusky dripping loggia, on its perpetually shaded bay, with the blazing blue waters of the lake and their sun-steeped western shores, is one of the most wonderful effects in sensation that the Italian villa-art has ever devised.

"The architect, not satisfied with diverting a part of the torrent to cool his house, has led the rest in a fall down the cliff immediately adjoining the villa, and has designed winding paths through the woods from which one may look down on the bright rush of the waters. On the other side of the house lies a long balustrade terrace, between the lake and the hanging woods, and here, on the only bit of open and level ground near the house, are the old formal gardens, now much neglected, but still full of a melancholy charm.

"After the Villa Pliniana, the other gardens of Como seem almost commonplace. All along both shores are villas which, amid many alterations, have preserved traces of their old garden-architecture, such as the Bishop of Como's villa, south of Leno, with its baroque saints and prophets perched along the garden-balustrade, and the more famous Villa Carlotta at Cadenabbia, where the fine gateways and the architectural treatment of the terraces bear witness to the former beauty of the grounds. But almost everywhere the old garden-magic has been driven out by a fury of modern horticulture. The pleached alleys have made way for lawns dotted with palms and bananas, the box-parterres have been replaced by star-shaped beds of begonias and cinerarias, and the groves of laurel and myrtle by thickets of pampas-grass and bamboo."

United States Is Lagging in Agriculture

Uncle Sam, farmer, is certainly not up to his job. Did you read what the department of agriculture had to say on this point the other day?

Taking as the basis of comparison the average per acre world yield of wheat, oats, rye, barley, corn and potatoes—the plain, staple crops; cotton couldn't be included because it isn't grown widely enough—the roll call of the nations showed 16 countries ahead of our own in efficiency of farming.

Using the index figure 100 to indicate the average, Uncle Sam's batting average was only 108, contrasted, to his shame, with the following: Hungary, 113; Austria, 120; France, 123; Norway, 128; Sweden, Chile and Canada, each 136; Japan, 137; Egypt, 161; New Zealand, 167; Denmark, 168; Germany, 169; United Kingdom, 177; Switzerland, 202; Netherlands, 209, and little Belgium, crowded to the gunwales, 221.

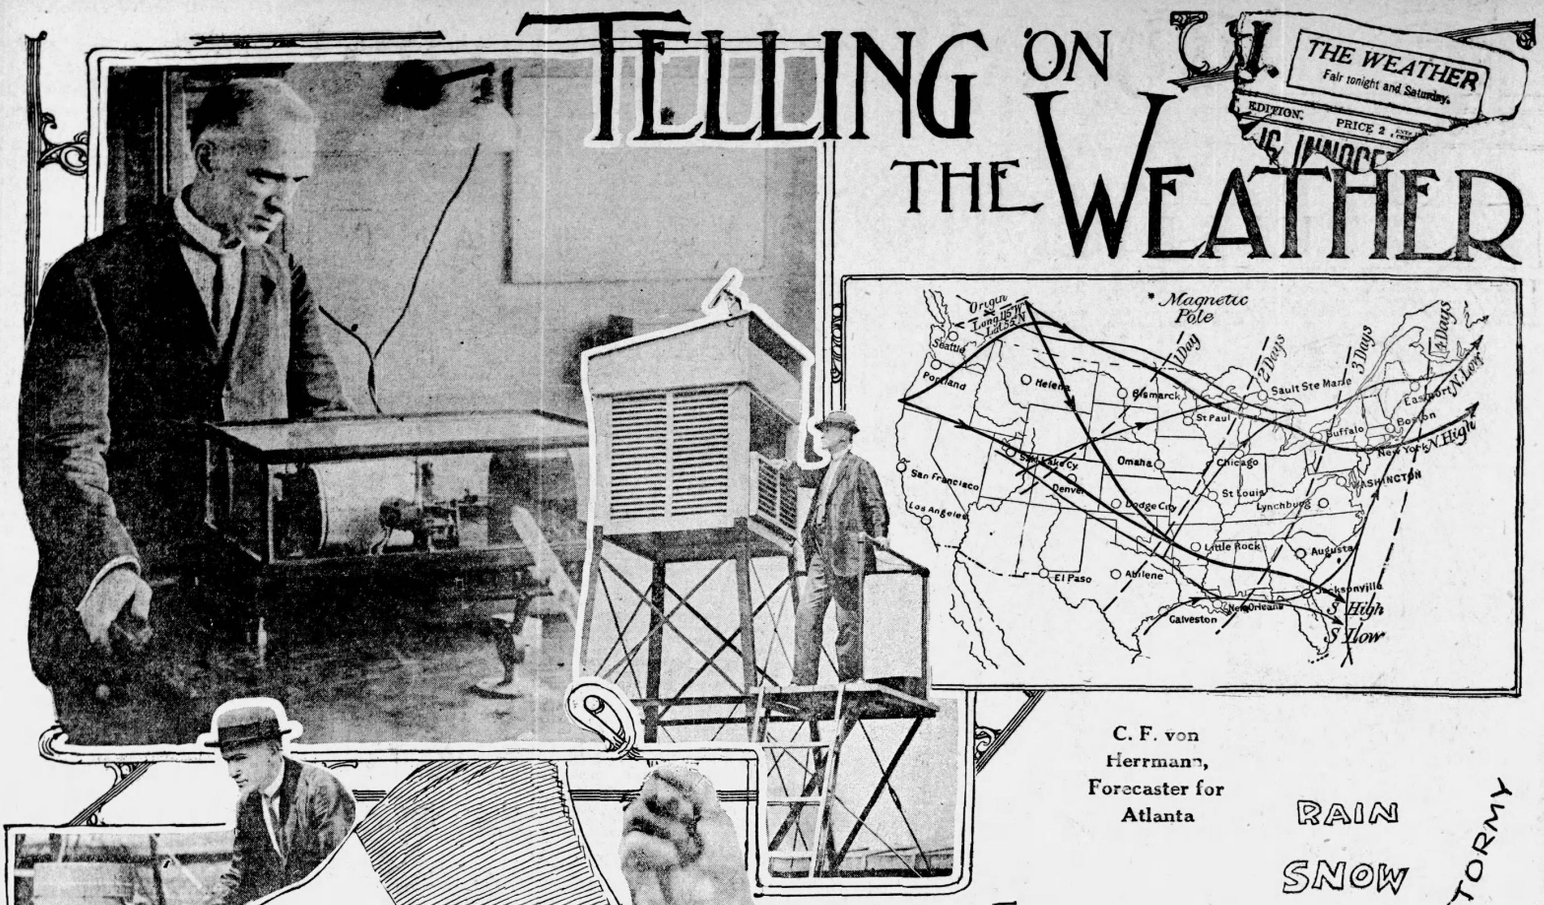
At the beginning none of these countries had anything on us in richness of soil. But while they have been learning through the centuries to farm with their minds as well as with their hands, how many Americans, do you suppose, have been doing as Jonn Smith did up in the Red River valley of North Dakota—only that wasn't his real name? A writer in the Chicago Record-Herald vouches for the story:

Thirty years ago, when John settled there, the wheat yield was considered way below par if it didn't run up to 30 bushels an acre. As for the rich loam, it seemed inexhaustible—you could hardly dig to the bottom of it. So John skimmed the cream and took little thought for the morrow. Today John is having trouble to get an average yield of 13 bushels to the acre, and is thinking of "quitting this gosh-danged place" and hiking it into northwestern Canada.

But it was all John's fault. He has actually let $388.50 of value per acre slip through his fingers in 30 years by his neglect to put back some of the fertility or which he was so thoughtlessly robbing as fine a soil as the sun ever shone on.

Better send your boy to an agricultural school. The next generation will have the job of correcting John's mistakes.

TELLING ON THE WEATHER



C. F. von Herrmann, Forecaster for Atlanta

In these strenuous times the weather is very frequently the main topic of conversation; nearly every one wants to know whether previous records of high temperatures have been broken, and what are the prospects for some relief in the immediate future. Most people take it as a matter of course that the future conditions of so erratic a phenomenon as the weather may be correctly foretold, little thinking how wonderful the fact is; others at such times desire to learn how it is possible to tell today what the weather for tomorrow will be, and for their benefit the present article on "How Weather Forecasts Are Made" has been prepared.

From the very earliest times men have desired to gain insight into the causes of changes in the weather, and it must be acknowledgd that most encouraging progrss has been made. The three factors that have contributed most to the rapid development of the art of forecasting the weather are the following. First, the invention of the delicate instruments now used to register the various conditions of the atmosphere, the barometer, which weighs the air, the thermometer which measures its temperature, the rain guage which records the amount of moisture precipitated from the sky, the wind vane and anemometer which give the direction and velocity of the wind and many others employed in meteorological research. Without these instruments it was impossible to obtain comparable statements of the weather conditions in various portions of the country.

Second, must be placed the discovery of the electric telegraph, without which it would have remained impossible to secure, as we do now, a picture of the weather conditions that prevail over an immense area like the United States from observations taken at precisely the same moment of time at all stations of observations.

Lastly, the discovery of the fact that the weather is not quite so erratic as it seems, but that all changes follow certain physical laws, and especially that storms move in definite paths across the country, and so their progressive movements can be foreseen.

FIRST FORECASTS.

It may be of interest to the general reader to learn how the establishment of weather services in various countries came about. During the last century meteorologists became convinced that storms are great revolving whirlwinds in the atmosphere, rotating in a direction opposite to the movements of the hands of a watch, and traveling in definite paths towards the northeast. The principal changes in the weather are associated with these moving whirlwinds. The laws controlling these storms were first distinctly stated by American meteorologists Redfield, Espy and Henry. By the time the telegraph came into general use the eastward movement of storms and the possibility of forecasting them was well known among scientiicic men. About this time an event occurred which attracted the attention of the civilized governments of the world to the importance from a military point of view of establishing a system of storm warnings. In 1854 war was in progress between Russia and the allied forces of France and England, which is known as the Crimean war. On the 24th of November a terrible storm swept the Black Sea and almost entirely destroyed the French and English fleets. The course of the storm was carefully investigated by the French astronomer Leverrier, who found that it could easily have been predicted. The matter was submitted to the French government, and the first national weather service was established by the French in 1859.

In our country the first daily weather maps were made by Prof. Joseph Henry at the Simithsonian Institute where charts were displayed from 1856 to 1861, and forecasts were made for the benefit of members of Congress. The work was taken up after the civil war by Prof. Cleveland Abbe, at that time director of the Cincinnati observatory, and one of the most accomplished meteorologists of our times. The great importance to the country at large of a proper system of storm warnings was becoming widely recognized, and the magnitude and cost of the work required that it should be undertaken by the national government. Accordingly, acting upon petitions presented by prominent indivduals, scientific societies, and boards of trade throughout the country, congress in 1870 passed a law authorizing the issue of storm and weather predictions and placing the department under the control of the signal service of the army. The incressing usefulness of the service to agricultural interests lead to its transfer in July 1891, to the department of agriculture and the creation of the present weather bureau with greatly enlarged sphere of activities. Almost every country in the world now has a weather service. The weather bureau of the United States is unique in the magnitude and precision of its operations, in the extent of territory covered and in the benefits it confers upon the people.

MANNER OF FORECASTING.

How is the work of forecasting the weather accomplished? The central office or headquarters of the bureau is located at Washington, D. C. About 200 subordinate stations, each with a complete instrumental equipment, are well distributed throughout the country. By co-operation with Canada and Mexico reports from those countries are also utilized. All first-class stations are supplied with instruments for measuring the various conditions of the atmosphere which together are caller weather, namely, the pressure and temperature of the air, the amount of precipitation, the dewpoint and relative humidity, the direction and velocity of the wind and the clouds. A visitor to the weather bureau office will see several forms of barometer for measuring the weight of the air; some ingenious instruments which give continuous automatic records, as the tripler register which records on one sheet of paper continuously just how fast and from what direction the wind is blowing, whether the sun is sarning or is obscured by clouds, and, if it be raining, how much rain falls in a given time. Proceeding to the roof the visitor will see that the thermometers are exposed in a louvred shelter to protect them from the direct rays of the sun, but which permits a free circulation of air. The shelter also contains a thermograph which gives a continuous record of the temperature and the psychrometer which gives the dewpoint and relative humidity of the air. The recording rain gage is very simple in principle, but gives a very accurate record of the rain as it falls. It consists essentially of a large open receiver which collects the rain from the clear sky. The water drips into a small brass bucket divided into two halves and delicately balanced. As soon as one side is full of rain water the bucket tips over and the movement is registered by an electric current down in the main office; then the rain drips into the other side and the process is repeated. None of the observations depend solely on the eye except the kind and movements of the clouds.

TAKING OBSERVATIONS.

Complete observations of the weather are taken at all stations twice a day at exactly the same moment of time, namely at 8 a. m. and 8 p. m., 75th meridian or eastern time. This requires that the observation at Atlanta be taken at 7 a. m., at Denver at 6 a. m. and at San Francisco at 5 a. m. At the time of the observation the observer notes all the registering instruments and the conditions fully. All the information gathered is immediately telegraphed to the central office at Washington, D. C., by means of an ingenious cipher code which gives speed and economy. By special arrangement with the telegraph company the weather messages are transmitted over telegraph circuits so that they are received at the same time not only at the central office, but at every important substation throughout the country where weather maps are issued. The rapidity of the work is such that within less than two hours from the time the observation is taken the reports are all received from Maine to Florida and from Texas to the Pacific coast.

As soon as each message is received it is translated and the data are entered on blank charts of the United States, in other words a weather map is made, the study of which enables the forecaster to decide what changes in the weather may be expected to take place. After all the reports have been entered, lines are drawn through places where the barometer is the same, called isobars, and others are drawn through places that have the same temperature, called isotherms. When this has been done it is invariably found that there are certain regions where the atmospheric pressure is below the normal, which is about 30 inches, and these are marked "low" meaning low atmospheric pressure (not temperature); in other regions the atmospheric pressure is above the normal, these being marked "high."

Other data are entered in figures beside the name of the station, or by suitable symbols, as the direction of the wind by an arrow, etc. This chart then constitutes the weather map, it presents a clear picture—a bird's-eye or photographic view—of the weather at one moment of time over the area of the entire United States. All weather predictions made by the weather bureau are based upon a close study of such weather charts. The problems presented by the weather map are often so simple that anyone possessed with the most elementary knowledge of its construction can accurately forecast the character of the weather for a day or two in advance; on the other hand, it is sometimes extremely difficult, especially in summer, to foretell what changes will take place, because at that season changes are brought about by causes extremely local in character.

EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE.

The earth's atmosphere has justly been likened to a great engine, with the boiler at the equator where it is always warm and the condenser at the poles where it is always cold. In conjunction with the rotation of the earth on its axis which modifies the direction of every air current on its surface, there results the complicated system of atmospheric circulation on the earth which brings about the continual changes in the weather. The atmospheric engine works as follows. At the equator where the temperature is always high, the atmosphere becomes greatly heated, and expands upward, the upper air flows off on each side of the equator toward the poles. In order to supply the place of the air

TULLE PLAYS AN IMPORTANT PART

IT IS called "tulle" in Paris. Over here we know it as net or blonde, and it comes in dotted, flowered and plain weaves in white, ecru and colors. Tulle is washable, in double width, and fills the demands of the afternoon or evening hours in the summertime. It is satisfactory for little girls, for misses or for their mothers, and is capable of being made up in simple or ornate models. Paris has adopted tulle as its summer favorite. It will stand the test of good wear, good style and good sense.

The little girl with the hoop has a frock of white tulle trimmed in simple bands of shirred tulle applied around the low top, the dropped armholes and the short skirt. There is fullness in the long-waisted bodice and the short skirt. The white net contrasts beautifully over a slip of pale blue china silk. Again the blue and pink combination is used, for a pink taffeta sash is tied around the skirt and knotted at the back.

The little hat worn with this frock is of tulle over blue silk. A double ruffle of pleated net forms the brim, while strawberry-pink velvet ribbon is tied around and ends in a swirled rose at one side.

The seated figure of an older girl shows a frock of dotted net, with a pale pink-and-blue flower dotted over the material. The top of the bodice is finished with a puffing of net, ending in a pleated collar that stands up in medici fashion, because a fine wire is run through the upper edge. Half-length sleeves end under double ruffles of net. On the skirt are puffings of net graduated in width, the whole group coming up almost to the knees. A wrapped sash of changeable blue-and-pink taffeta shows a long waist line and holds the comfortable fullness of the bodice.

Pale pink straw has a pleating and a crown of blue tulle, with a large pink daisy at the side. This hat completes the stunning costume for a girl of 16.

Dotted net is combined with flowered silk in the figure in the center. Here there is a single full bodice, with short sleeves that are finished with two scant ruffles. The plain skirt has two scant ruffles placed at the knees. The flowered silk sash is wrapped around the bodice in crossed lines, one end draped around the hips to meet the other, that comes across the back to tie below one hip at the right side. The ends are trimmed with fringe. Any dotted sheer material could be made up after this model.

The parasol shows the vogue of tulle, for it is a combination of flowered net over silk, edged with pleated ruffles of black tulle. Pale pink taffeta forms the hat which has the crown veiled with black tulle. Wired loops of tulle trim it at one side.

White tulle over white china silk is used for the little girl's frock. Here is the long French waist again. There is fullness in the bodice, and the short skirt is made of two pleated ruffles. Two ruffles head the top, separated in the center. The sleeves are of two ruffles applied to a plain net lining. A golden-colored silk sash ends in a butterfly bow at the side.

The bonnet is of shirred maline in a golden brown shade over yellow silk. Wings at the side trim it.

Standing beside this little girl is the owner of an embroidered net that shows the use of pink in the conventionalized roses.

A white mull collar shows scalloped edges, under which is pleated tulle in black. Sleeves show scallops and tulle, and a tunic is edged in the same way. A pleating of mull forms the lower flounce of the skirt. Around the waist is a wrapped sash of black taffeta, tied at the back and hanging in two ends that are weighted by jet tassels.

The black tulle hat is a great favorite. The crown and brim are covered with pleated tulle, and the hat has a facing of pink taffeta. A rose of taffeta and tulle is placed at one side. On the black-and-pink parasol are ruffles of black tulle.

Last is the frock for the young girl which is made of sheer mull and trimmed with bands of net on which narrow soutache is used.

A shirred chemisette of tulle fills in the square yoke, at the lower part of which are two rows of mattier-blue velvet. The net is applied in straight bands over the shoulders and one across the front. A similar band edges the full skirt. The sash is of mattier-blue ribbon.

In the hat of tulle simplicity is the keynote. It is large, covered with net and has a soft ruffle on the edge. On one side is a rose.

Try one dress, hat or at least the trimming of net for summer. It will prove a relief that still emphasizes practical and cool style.

Bathing Costumes

THE suit and cap, with the sandals and stockings as important accessories, comprise a bathing costume worthy of a picture. These days just as much style can be shown in a suit for the sea as in the finest afternoon gown from Paris.

The main notes in dresses are repeated in bathing costumes.

Brilliant touches of color are introduced in the sashes that are of all types, the gipsy, prelate, fishwife's and folded girdle being used. Collars and cuffs usually match the sash and brilliant buttons further ornament silk, pongee, crepe de chine and satin suits.

Hand embroidery is seen on many black taffeta costumes, the work being effective in white with the idea continued in pipings of white.

Collars are of lace, embroidered lawn and net done in Bulgarian colors. There are vest effects on blouses, panels and pleats, side slashes over contrasting panels and draped skirts are just as evident as in dresses.

The military bathing suit is in vogue, a snappy effect in braid and buttons with military girdle being exploited in gray, blue and bright red.

Another style is the cuirass effect, a shield and tunic being placed over a contrasting underbodice and skirt. The cuirass is sleeveless and is bound with a two-inch bias piece of goods.

The short bolero effects are prominent on bathing suits, many jackets being laced in front through crocheted eyelets of bright colors. Jackets of contrasting colors and materials give style and splendid opportunity for using remnants or making over an old silk dress.

FRENCH FASHION NOTES

PARIS, July 17.

THE Grand Prix was run with an ideal setting; unclouded skies, cooling breezes and beautifully attired women all contributed their share to the success of the event. Among the handsomest costumes worn was a Paquin creation of black-and-white mousseline de soie. The bodice had a chemisette of white mousseline de soie shirred on a cord at the top, and the undersleeves of the same material were gathered below the elbow with a similar cording. A flat collar of the white mousseline edged with a narrow pleating turned back from the neck line. The skirt was distinguished by complicated draperies, which were swathed about the figure to produce the modish pegtop silhouette. The slash at the left side was finished with a narrow pleated frill.

Many gowns which are decidedly Louis XV in line are developed of plain or flowered silk and wide lace. A charming model of amber silk and valenciennes lace has a low, square-cut corsage and elbow-length sleeves trimmed with frills of lace. The foundation skirt of amber silk is rather tight, and over this is draped a double pannier of valenciennes lace, the first fuller than the second. The broad waist belt of amber silk forms short and very full panniers over those of the lace.

Extremely lovely is an afternoon frock of sea-green silk, lace and tulle. The bodice has a deep, V-shaped opening at the neck, and the short, wide-mouthed sleeves are finished with double pleatings of tulle. Over the silk underskirt are arranged three pleated flounces, the first of tulle, the second of mallne lace and the third of tulle. A sash of violet silk girdles the waist and the long ends hang to the hem of the skirt.

It is very evident that the two and three tiered skirts are much to the fore, and the most typical arrangement is the double pleated tunic of lace or tulle sometimes held out from the foundation skirt with a ruching of taffeta or a very thin wire.

The most graceful style, however, is the Grecian tunic, which is pleated, gathered or draped. Pale tinted materials are used for these tunics, the colors preferred being pink, white and blond.

A Caroline Reboux model of black hemp, with the underbrim faced with black tulle, has the turned-up brim caught with bands of black ribbon velvet, which tie in a bow and pass beneath the chin. A single red rose is caught on the edge of the brim at the left side. This latter feature is a note which bids fair to become extremely popular, for the crimson rose nestles among folds of black or white tulle, clings to the edge of the brim, hangs over the hair on the underbrim or forms a spike-like arrangement at the back of many smart models. The large picture hat of white satin has returned to favor with the warm weather. Two large panaches of yellow and black velvet form the only trimming on one beautiful creation.

The colored slip is noticeably in vogue again, and lovely summer frocks of sheer linen, mousseline de soie or batiste have pink, blue, yellow or green silk linings. The girdles worn with these costumes are usually of a contrasting color, and frequently bolero jackets of silk to match the girdle are also worn.

The bayadere sash continues to hold its popularity, for most of the fall gowns have this distinguishing feature. A gown of black taffeta has the broad sash of striped taffeta in tones of blue and yellow.

A heavy silk cord, knotted in front and finished with a tassel, adorned a copper-colored serge suit in that of a belt.

Fall hats of velvet, moire and satin are turned up at the back and banked beneath the brim with flowers or loops of ribbon.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

This Develops the Lungs

Strengthens the Spine

EXERCISES FOR THE TRUNK

all day with scarcely any time for relaxation.

The squatting exercise is highly recommended for the spine. Stand erect, with the feet together and the hands resting on the hips. Rise on the toes, then sink to the floor, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the body is held up by the toes. The trunk should be held perfectly erect during the movement. Now return to the original position and repeat ten times. This exercise not only benefits the spine, but it will do much to reduce superfluous abdominal fat. It will also strengthen the ankles and increase the flexibility of the knee joints.

When the spinal joints are not kept freely moved the tissues around them become hard and inelastic. This causes the joints to become fixed and the large nerves emerging through their openings between the joints become subjected to a continuous unchanging pressure. This, of course, impedes circulation, and impoverishment of the nerves and organs is a result.

To prevent such a condition follow these directions every day: Stand on one leg, steadying yourself by holding to a chair back or anything similar. Now kick, with the leg muscles relaxed, quickly from five to ten times in different directions, forwards, backwards, and sideways. Do this first with one leg and then the other. This will greatly stimulate and free the great nerves of the trunk.

One can never hope to have good health if one does not breathe properly, and unless the lungs are well developed one cannot breathe correctly. An exercise which will put the lungs in a splendid condition is the following:

Stand erect, interlace the fingers and raise the arms high above the head. While doing this inhale slowly. Then lower the arms and slowly exhale. In this exercise the shoulders share some of the benefit, for if the arms are thrown back as far as possible while they are raised, the shoulders will have to straighten themselves. The person who is inclined to be round-shouldered should make a note of this. After making the note she should put the exercise into practice.

The importance of having a good development of the chest and lungs will be realized when one knows that they are essential if one wishes to boast of possessing a strong heart, vigorous circulation of the blood and a power to resist disease.

Any one having a moderate cold will recover much more quickly if he will exercise in the fresh air instead of lying in bed for an indefinite length of time. The motion aids the lungs in getting rid of mucus which accumulates on the lungs and must be expectorated before one is comfortable.

With impatience I am waiting for the time when people will realize the necessity of ventilating the house day and night. The air of the house must be fresh, pure and cool to allow proper ventilation of the lungs and skin. Colds are more frequent in winter because in that season people house themselves and breathe impure air. A simple way to test the purity of the air in a room is to leave it and spend five or ten minutes in the open air. Upon returning there should be no impurity or closeness noticeable.

For Round Shoulders

Stimulates Circulation

Stretching the Trunk Muscles

To straighten the shoulders, and to keep them straight, stand erect, with the abdomen held in, the chest out. Clasp the hands behind the back; raise and sect back the shoulders as far as you can. Persons who are in the habit of standing and sitting with their arms folded in front of them and their lungs depressed, should change their position to the one just described. They will be amply repaid for their effort if they will but try.

Have you ever felt as though your trunk were so short that your head cannot be very far from your waist lines? The best way to overcome such a feeling is to stretch the muscles of the trunk. This can easily be done by bending the body at the waist line to all sides.

All of these movements practiced regularly will put the body in such a condition that it will be able to withstand great physical strain. Defects will be overcome and a general improvement in health will result.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Brittle Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please tell me of a harmless cure for nails which are very brittle. SUSAN.

Olive oil is splendid for brittle nails. It will give better results if it is heated a little before the tips of the fingers are laid in a vessel containing the oil.

Too Heavy

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am about ten pounds too heavy for my height. Will you tell me in a general way what I should do to lose the surplus weight? RUTH.

You should avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, such as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have your bread toasted; sprinkle it with salt instead of using butter. Milk, I regret to say, if it is pure and good, is fattening. Skimmed milk may be drunk. Hot water is an excellent substitute for other liquids. Add a little of the juice of lemon or lemons to it, if you choose. Limit your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No baps. You must take exercise.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several of my correspondents report excellent results from this method of getting the vigorous exercise they require. The system is thoroughly wholesome and not expensive. In reducing flesh one fact to recollect is that fat is carbon. Oxygen destroys or burns out carbon. You must consume the carbon by the oxygen you take through your lungs. The more exercise the more oxygen and consequent destruction of fat by the one beautiful method of buying obesity.

The more starch and sugar you eat the more carbon to burn away.

A Thin Neck

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My neck is painfully thin, and I should like to wear low collars. The rest of my body is plenty stout enough, so that I do not care to do anything that will increase my weight generally. What do you advise? DOROTHY.

Bend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the neck, and then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Repeat these movements until you are tired. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Sit erect in a chair, bend the head from one side to the other, and then roll the head to the right, left and forward. Another good position is to let the arms hang loosely at one side. Raise the shoulders as high as possible, then forward, down and backward, until a circle is formed. Continue this for some time and then reverse the motion. Do this every day for five or ten minutes.

Again, stand perfectly erect with the arms at the side, lift them up perpendicularly, inflating the lungs as the arms ascend. At the same time rise up on the tips of your feet, and throw your head back, at the same time touching the backs of the hands overhead. As the arms slowly descend exhale from the lungs.

It is also well to massage the neck and shoulders with cocoa butter.

For Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give me one of your recipes for a freckle cure?

I am very glad to pass along the following recipe, but I wish to make a request that you prevent the further appearance of freckles by protecting your face from the sun's rays with a large hat or a parasol.

If Doctor Wilson's treatment does not agree with your skin, try lemon juice.

Doctor Wilson's Treatment for Obstinate Freckles

(Recommended by Erasmus Wilson, and "Hoyle," who says: "Obstinate cases does not suit all complexions.") Simply a bleaching ointment.

Sublimate of mercury	2 grains
Milk of sulphur	1 ounce
Cyprus ointment	3 drams
Citric acid	50 grains
Infusion of rose	½ pint

Mix well and rub on the affected skin at night. In the morning wash the cream off with soap and soft water, and afterward apply a lotion that contains:

All local discolorations, Doctor Wilson affirms, will disappear under this treatment or, if the freckles do not yield, they will at least be greatly ameliorated.

The length of time it takes to effect a cure varies with different persons.

To Reduce the Hips

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Please inform me what I may do to reduce the hips. I have plenty of time to exercise. A READER.

Possibly the fact that you have a lot of spare time is the reason for the large hips. To keep them down to normal size you must exercise and refrain from sitting as much as possible. You should follow carefully the directions given below for suitable exercises.

First—Raise the outstretched arms above the head, the body retaining its erect position; then bend slowly forward from the waist so that the fingers come as near touching the floor as possible, without straining in any way. This is done without bending the knees. In recovering position, let the arms relax and sink down as the body straightens up. Second—With hands placed lightly on the hips, the fingers pointing forward, let the body drop forward easily, so that it is bent at the waist. This must be done gently, as by jerking more harm than good is done. From this bent position roll the body round to the right, counting four. For it to reach the position of being bent over the side. Then to the back—being careful to do it very easily at first, till the muscles have gained strength, for an exaggeration of the movement may cause real pain—then on to the left and back to the front. Practice again, only start toward the left. The waist acts as a pivot, on which the trunk swings, and the head is easily relaxed. Third—In this exercise the hands have the same position, but the body is bent forward from the waist; then back; then to the right and left. Each movement should occupy four counts. Take these exercises gently, but let the movements be firm and strong. Avoid the slightest strain of the muscles. No corsets should be worn while practicing them.

Cucumber Wash

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have heard that cucumbers are very splendid for whitening the skin. Can you tell me how I can fix them so that they may be made into a wash? EDNA.

Cut one or two cucumbers into rather small chunks without peeling. Put these into a mortar and pound with a pestle (or use a heavy potato masher and a heavy earthenware bowl) until the mass is reduced to a pulp. Strain, squeezing out as much of the juice as you can. Now put the refuse and filtered juice into a clean enameled saucepan and simmer (don't boil) for ten minutes.

Then re-strain, and when cold add alcohol to the proportion of one tablespoonful to half a pint of the strained liquid. Bottle and use to sponge your face instead of washing it during the day.

The alcohol should preserve the juice.

To Darken the Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly tell me what I can put on my hair to darken it? FRIEND.

Coal oil rubbed into the scalp every day will darken the hair in most cases. It should fall on the scalp, and you can then try sage tea, for which I am giving the recipe.

Sage Tea

Alcohol	2 ounces
Green tea	2 ounces
Garden sage	2 ounces

To make the liquid, take 1 ounce of tea to 4 ounces of water; 1 ounce of sage to 4 ounces of water.

Let each stand for several hours, then strain and take 2 ounces of the liquid of each, and mix with 2 ounces of alcohol. Keep the mixture tightly corked.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

will cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time.

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

SUMMER FLIRTATIONS

I AM going to talk informally and, I hope, forcibly to my readers today. We are in midsummer, when many women and men take a vacation from work and at summer hotels manage to forget the conventionalities of the rest of the year. Summer, especially at vacation time, seems to be an excuse for many women to defy the ordinary forms of social etiquette and endanger their reputations as well-bred women to a surprising degree. But is it worth while?

You will be for two weeks, let us say, at a seaside town. It may be the fresh air, the relief from criticism of those who know you, or it may be the freedom of the great crowds of strangers, but there will be a tendency on your part to forget that a certain line of action is always a sign of a social training that is characteristic of a lady and a gentleman.

Flirtation is one of the easiest of the deviations from the conventional way. The talking with strangers and arranging to spend time with them is one of the gravest things that a girl can do. Absolute strangers who have not been introduced by a friend or whose respectability has not been vouched for by a known one are the cause of many mistakes which cause deep regret in a woman's life. The light, frothy foolishness of a summer flirtation is certainly not worth months of shame and vain recriminations.

There is a type of man who sees just how many young women he can become acquainted with "by chance." The fact that he has no friends with him and the lack of consideration for the social standing of a girl who meets in this unconventional fashion a man on her vacation have a decided mark against the man and woman.

The danger is far greater than you think. I do not like to suggest that men as a class are careless and unkind about flirtations, but I do wish to emphasize the fact that a few of them misrepresent things to the girls who are really furnishing them with a passing amusement. The married man is not infrequently disposed to forget that his wife is home with the children, trusting in him. Engaged men, also, are apt to forget about their actions in the summertime, and, alas! a class of disreputable adventurers, whom you would blush to acknowledge in your own homes, will make vacation time a ground for ruining the reputations of unsuspecting young women out "just for a lark."

Flirtations, to me, are so belittling. A man that wishes to become acquainted with a young woman will try very hard to meet her through the channels that can be frankly mentioned in her diary or her conversation. He will find out some friends and acquaintances and through them, possibly by devious ways, will be receive an introduction. At least any woman is worth this trouble. The flirtation method is quicker, but less complimentary, when you weigh it afterward.

Remember that there is a mighty force of "public opinion" which no single woman can afford to defy. The opinion of your mother about your vacation actions is a fairly good criterion by which you can judge yourself. "What would mother say?" is a safe question to ask when a man expresses the fact that he thinks he has met you before, or that it is a very pleasant evening. When the vacation man suggests that you stroll along a dark path, or sit on a sand dune after every one has gone to the hotel, ask the question which I have given you. When in a crowd and a suggestion is made that you drink with the men in a "vacation spirit," ask your question. It will save you many regrets.

Remember that no short vacation is ever worth giving up a name for good breeding and refinement. Be sweet, good and your well-behaved selves at all times and you will be able to look back on your vacation with no misgivings.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

An Uncomfortable Position

DEAR Mrs. Adams.

What can I say to a man when he places his arm across the back of my chair? FANNY.

You might say to him, "I shall appreciate it very much if you will remove your arm from my chair. I am not comfortable with it there."

Leaving Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What are the proper hours for calling during the weekdays? How many cards should an unmarried woman leave when calling on a married woman? MRS. BRIGHT.

From 3 until 6 o'clock are the proper hours for calling.

She should leave just one of her cards, if she calls frequently on this hostess it is not necessary for her to leave a card every time

First Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A girl friend of mine has a cousin visiting in this city. Is it proper for me to call on them or should she bring her cousin to call on me? L. O.

If the cousin be a girl, you should call on her first. If it is a male cousin, he should be brought to your home.

A Book on Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you please tell me where I can buy a good book on etiquette? BLANCHE.

I am not at liberty to mention any names or addresses, but I feel sure that you will find a very good etiquette book in any of the book stores in this city.

Society Disagreeable

Dear Mrs. Adams.

How can I avoid a man who is always trying to make engagements with me? I dislike his society very much, but as we are workers in the same office, I dare not cut the acquaintance. R. E.

Every time he extends an invitation you should decline it with an excuse that you have an engagement.

Gifts for Baby

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What are appropriate gifts to send a baby when one has received announcement of its birth? BACHELOR.

A silver spoon, a mug, a rattle, baby pins or studs, or a dainty necklace.

A Visiting Card

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it permissible to use a visiting card to invite a friend to a card party or a musicale?

The visiting card is frequently employed for afternoon musicales, card parties and similar entertainments. In the left-hand corner the word "Cards" or "Music" is written to hint at the nature of the entertainment. The hour and date are also written.

Obligatory Calls

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it necessary for the members of the bridal party to call upon the bride's mother after the ceremony? A READER.

The bridesmaids, ushers and all persons who were included in the bridal party should call on the bride's mother after the ceremony and upon the bride as soon as she is at home.

A Late Comer

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have never known what is the proper thing for the hostess of entertainer at dinner, and one of the guests comes in after the others are seated. Please inform me. AGNES F. G.

If the guest is a woman, the hostess should rise and shake hands and receive apologies amiably. If the guest is a man, she need not rise. The host, however, rises, goes forward, assists in shaking the delinquent, and endeavors, by making general conversation, to distract attention from the incident. If the tardy one is very late, no break is made in serving, the guest being expected to take the dinner at the point it has reached when he appears. This avoids confusion.

Thanking a Man

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it proper for a girl to thank a man who has taken her to some entertainment? EDNA.

Yes, she should thank him for the pleasant evening.

Before the Ceremony

How long before the wedding ceremony should the church door be open?

It is necessary to have an usher and carnet spread from the door to the altar. ANNA.

Half an hour before the time appointed for the ceremony.

Not if the wedding is a small and simple one.

Invited to a Theater Party

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me what I should do when invited to a theater party. VIOLA.

A prompt answer should be made to the invitation, and the host's or hostess' directions as to time, place, etc., carried out explicitly. When the party breaks up, pleasure and thanks must be expressed to the giver of the entertainment for the hospitality enjoyed. If the invitation includes a dinner before or a supper after the theater, you should leave your wrap i.. the cloak-room of the restaurant, unless it is a small light one you wish to keep about your shoulders. Do not remove your gloves until you are seated at the table, and replace them before rising.

Eating an Orange

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What is a graceful way to eat an orange? SARAH.

An orange may be cut into four pieces, the skin drawn off, the seeds pressed out, and each quarter severed twice.

The Bride's Cake

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I am to be married shortly and intend to have the usual Wedding cake. To whom should the first slices be given? The toast is to be served on small slices.

WINIFRED.

To those at the bridal table.

Using the Postal Card

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Do you think it shows good taste to use affectionate terms on a postal card? ELSIE F.

It is most improper to use terms of affection on a postal card. One should not begin a note on same with "My dear," and in the signature the initials of the Christian name and the full name should be used.

When Leaving

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A girl friend has invited me to spend the week-end at her home. She has a number of brothers and sisters whom I have never met. What line leaving should I say goodby to each one of these?

DOROTHY.

It is polite to bid adieu to the individual members of the family. Leave farewell messages for those who are not present when you depart.

Dinner Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When should dinner invitations be sent out and what is the proper form to use for a formal invitation? EDNA L.

Ten days is the usual notice given in sending out dinner invitations.

The proper form is:

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher White request the pleasure of ..... company at dinner on ..... evening, at ..... o'clock, 40 Spruce avenue.

What to Say

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What is the proper thing to say when introducing a man to a woman?

SARAH.

The best and simplest method is to say, "Miss Edwards, let me present Mr. Brown."

Announcing a Birth

Dear Mrs. Adams.

If one does not care to send out cards to friends to announce the birth of a child what is the proper thing to do?

Notes can be written to one's intimate friends or the announcement may be made through the newspaper.

Answering an Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please inform how to write a reply to a dinner invitation written in the third person. CARRIE.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mayberry accept with pleasure Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black's invitation to dinner on Tuesday evening, August tenth, at eight o'clock.

Regrets can be expressed thus:

Mr. and Mrs. John Mayberry regret that their departure from town prevents their acceptance of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black's invitation to dinner on Tuesday evening, August tenth, at eight o'clock.

An Obligatory Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Through a friend of mine I was invited to attend a dinner party. Now, am I under obligations to call upon the hostess who entertained me? EDITH.

Yes; you should call within a fortnight after the date of the entertainment.

Dinner Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I wish to invite a man and his wife and a friend who is visiting them to a formal dinner. How many cards should I send to that household? A. B.

One card should be sent to the husband and wife, and a separate one should be sent to the guest visiting them.

Mourning Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me how wide should be the black border on the visiting cards of one who is in mourning? BELLE.

If the person is in mourning for a deceased husband, the black border of her visiting cards should be a trifle more than one-third of an inch wide. After a year and a half, or two years, the width of the border is diminished by a sixteenth of an inch until mourning is put off entirely.

One in mourning for a parent, child, sister or brother does not graduate the width of the border. During the whole mourning period the border should be from an eighth to a sixteenth of an inch wide.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

MIDSUMMER JAMS, JELLIES, AND CONDIMENTS.

THE midsummer days are the times for putting up jams, some jellies, and a good many pickles and relishes. Later in the season, when the white peaches come and the pears are at their best, the work of preserving and pickling these and other fruits attends you. But there is much you can get out of the way now and your store closet can be well filled before the large fruits make their demand upon you.

Again I repeat the counsel I have given you in other seasons. Have everything ready before you begin. See that your supply of jelly glasses and jars is renewed, that rubbers and tops are in good condition, that your preserving kettle is ready for work, that you have all you will require in the way of vinegar, sugar, spices, and the like, and will not be interrupted and "laid up" in the midst of your labor by the need of something you cannot manage without. The business of putting up fruits or vegetables in any way is bound to make a drain on the strength and patience, and it is a rank folly to add to the difficulties of the task and to put obstacles in the way instead of making the path as smooth as you can.

Try to choose cool weather for the work, if possible. Plan out the routine in advance and don't try to crowd in anything else on the day when you give yourself to pickling or preserving. In every way make the work as easy as it can be made and be sure that it will always be taxing enough! Dress for the task, wear loose clothes and easy shoes, and lay in a large stock of patience and philosophy. You will need all you can get!

BLACKBERRY JAM—To twelve pounds of six quarts of berries allow nine pounds of sugar, that is, in the proportion of a pound of fruit to three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Put the berries in your preserving kettle, crushing them with the back of a wooden spoon, and let them come slowly to a boil. To avoid the risk of scorching it is well to put a thick inverted plate on the bottom of the kettle. Cook steadily for an hour after they reach the boil, stirring them often, and then turn in the sugar. Cook for twenty minutes after this and put in, have your jars ready, and put the jam into them while boiling hot. Roll each jar in boiling water before filling it or stand it on a wet cloth or put a spoon in it. Any of these expedients is a protection against breakage.

If the berries are not exceptionally dry there will probably be more juice than the jam needs, and this you can dip out and put up separately. It may be converted into jelly or into blackberry vinegar or shrub, or canned to use for flavoring for pudding sauces in winter.

RASPBERRY JAM—Put up either black or red raspberries by this same recipe, which is also good for blueberry jam.

GOOSEBERRY JAM—Top and tail the gooseberries and boil one hour, stirring constantly. To each pound of the uncooked fruit you should have allowed three-quarters of a pound of sugar. After the hour's boiling is ended, dip out any superfluous juice—which will make delicious jelly—put in your sugar and cook an hour longer. Turn the jam into glasses or small jars and seal. When this is served with cottage cheese or cream cheese it is a fair equivalent for the imported bar le duc.

PLUM OR DAMSON JAM—Stone your damsons or plums, and after this weigh them. Be careful to save any juice that comes from the fruit while stoning it. Allow a half pound of sugar to each pound of fruit, unless it is exceptionally tart, in which case increase the proportion to three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit. Stew the fruit for half an hour, put in the sugar, and simmer gently for an hour. By this time the jam should have coozed down until it is quite thick and may be put into glasses or jars and sealed. Small, tart plums may be used for this jam.

PEACH MARMALADE—Peel and stone peaches. The smaller or yellow varieties will serve for this. Weigh the pared and pitted fruit, allowing to every pound of it three-quarters of a pound of sugar, and cook the fruit by itself for three-quarters of an hour, stirring it constantly. At the end of this time turn in the sugar and cook for ten or fifteen minutes, taking off any scum which may rise to the top. You may either put it up at this stage or you may add to it the kernels of a dozen or so of peach stones, chopped fine, and the juice of a lemon for every three pounds of fruit, or you may put in a tablespoon of preserving brandy for every pound of fruit. With any treatment the marmalade is delicious.

There should be a good deal of extra juice and if this is dipped out after the addition of the sugar and of any flavoring and sealed in bottles it makes a fine sauce for baked or boiled puddings.

APPLE OR CRABAPPLE JELLY—Quarter and core ripe crabapples or any well flavored tart apples and heat slowly in a preserving kettle. Unless they are juicy add enough water to protect them from scorching and cook at a gentle simmer until the apples are broken to pieces. Put the pulp into a flannel bag and let it drip. If you squeeze the pulp the juice is likely to be cloudy. Measure your juice and to each pint of it allow a pound of granulated sugar. Put the juice on the fire in a clean kettle, cook it for twenty minutes after it comes to a boil, skim carefully, and add the sugar.

Let the jelly return to the boil and cook for one minute and take from the fire. Have your glasses ready and fill immediately, but do not close or attempt to cover with paraffin until the jelly is entirely cold.

PEACH JELLY—Make by the preceding recipe, but add a tablespoon of lemon juice to each pint of the peach juice, and put this in after straining the juice from the fruit.

SMALL CUCUMBER PICKLES.—Lay firm, small cucumbers of uniform size, none of them more than three inches long, in a large earthen crock, with a layer of salt upon every layer of cucumbers. Pour in enough cold water to cover them, placing a heavily weighted plate on top to prevent floating. Every other day stir the pickles up from the bottom and leave them in the brine for ten days. At the end of this time pour it off and pick over the pickles, throwing out those that are soft. Put those which are left in fresh water and leave them in this twenty-four hours, change again to fresh water, and let them lie in this another day.

Line your kettle with grape leaves and place the cucumbers on these, sprinkling each layer of them with a little powdered alum, pour in cold water, lay several thick-nesses of the grape leaves over the top, cover the kettle closely, and simmer slowly for six hours. Don't let the kettle boil. Take out the cucumbers, which by now should be well greened, throw them in cold water, and leave them in this for a couple of hours. Prepare a pickle vinegar of one cup of sugar, a dozen blades of mace, a dozen and a half whole allspice, three dozen each of whole black peppers and cloves, and four quarts of vinegar. Boil all these together for five minutes after the boil begins and pour over the drained cucumbers, which you should have packed into small jars. The vinegar must go on them scalding hot and the jars be covered closely. Let them season for at least two months before eating them, and keep in a dark, cool place.

MIXED PICKLES.—Make these by the preceding recipe, using string beans, nasturtium pods, clusters of cauliflower, and tiny onions. The onions and the cauliflower do not need to be greened.

CHOW-CHOW (plain).—Cut a medium sized cauliflower into small clusters; peel half a pint of small onions; put with them six green tomatoes sliced, six green peppers sliced; one pint little cucumbers; two large cucumbers sliced. Arrange a thick layer of vegetables in an earthen crock; strew with salt; make another layer of the vegetables and of the salt and continue in this way until all are used. Pour in cold water to cover, laying a weighted plate on top of all. At the end of three days pour off the brine, pick over and rinse the pickles, cover them with fresh cold water, and leave them in this for one day. The pickle vinegar is made as follows:

One teaspoon each of celery seed, white mustard seed, whole cloves, whole black peppers, whole mace, and grated horseradish, one cup and a half of brown sugar, one gallon of vinegar. Bring to a boil and cook for five minutes, drop in the pickles, and boil together for thirty minutes. Put up in air tight jars.

CHOW-CHOW (mustard).—Prepare vegetables as in preceding recipe up to the stage when the pickle vinegar is made. To the ingredients named add two teaspoons of turmeric and three tablespoons of ground mustard, cook all together for five minutes, and put the pickles into the vinegar. Simmer for five minutes, take the pickles out with a skimmer, put them into a stone crock, pour the vinegar over them, and leave them in this for two days. Drain off the vinegar, heat it again, add a tablespoon of every powder, boil up once, pour over the pickles, and when they are cold put them in small jars and seal. Not good to eat under a month.

CHILI SAUCE.—Peel twelve large, ripe tomatoes and four good sized onions; seed two green peppers and chop all together until fine. Put them in a saucepan and stir into them two teaspoons each of ground allspice, cloves, and cinnamon, two tablespoons of salt, four tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoon of ground ginger, and a quart of vinegar. Boil steadily for two hours and when cool bottle and seal.

TOMATO CATSUP.—Boil together until soft eight quarts of tomatoes and six large onions, press through a colander, and strain the liquid that comes from them. Put this over the stove with a dozen sprigs of parsley, two bay leaves, a half teaspoon of grated garlic, a tablespoon each of ground cloves, mace, black pepper, salt, and sugar, a scant teaspoon of cayenne pepper and a tablespoon of celery seed tied up in a bit of cheesecloth or gauze. Cook five hours, stirring frequently and watching that the mixture does not scorch. By the end of the time it should be reduced to half its original quantity and thick. Take out the bag of celery seed, add a pint of vinegar, and bottle and seal when the catsup is cold.

CUCUMBER CATSUP.—To one quart of peeled, seeded, and grated cucumbers allow two green peppers, seeded and chopped; one grated onion, one gill grated horseradish, two teaspoons of salt; put over the fire and simmer an hour. Add one pint of vinegar, bottle and seal.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"AS many friends have told me of not having success in canning peas, beans, corn, and other vegetables I venture to write my never failing method to the Corner. First of all, have your kitchen clean and dusted with a damp cloth. If you are putting up string beans, break them into small pieces, wash them thoroughly, and wash your jars. Fill these up with the beans, add half a teaspoon of salt to each pint jar, then fill to overflowing with cold water. Have a wooden rack to stand in the bottom of the wash boiler (mine I made from an old box), place jars on the rack, the rubbers adjusted and the covers put on loosely, and pour cold water into the boiler about half way to the top of the jars. Now cover your boiler tightly and let the water in it boil for one hour after the boiling point is reached; then uncover the boiler to let the steam escape, seal jars tightly, and let them stand until the next day, when loosen tops, place in the boiler, and boil again as you did the first time. Do this on three successive days, put the jars in the fruit closet when they are cool, and they will never spoil. The secret of success lies in boiling only one hour on each of the three days, instead of one long boiling. May I ask for a recipe for making plum and also apple butter? MRS. G. D. R."

This recipe is so simple there seems no reason why any one should not succeed with it. I wish the giver had stated if she is equally successful in putting up corn by the same recipe. That is a vegetable with which the home canner usually has more difficulty than with any other. On that account I am glad that another correspondent has sent in her directions for putting up green corn. These I will give after supplying the recipe for apple butter asked by Mrs. G. D. R.:

Peel, core, and cut up apples in abundance, put them over the fire with just enough water to keep them from scorching, and let them come to the boil slowly. Cook at a gentle simmer for several hours, adding a little more water from time to time if there seems to be danger of the fruit sticking to the kettle. After four or five hours try a little of the apple in a saucer to see if it is thick and smooth and does not separate. Season to taste with ground cloves and cinnamon and add a little sugar—enough to remove the sharp acidity without making the butter too sweet.

If you prefer making the apple butter with cider, put this over the fire and boil for a couple of hours before adding it to the apples as you would water in following the preceding recipe. Plum butter may be made in the same way, removing the skins and stones from the plums.

Canning Sweet Corn.

"Sweet corn is readily canned if the corn is cooked in milk and packed in sterilized cans, a little at a time, pressing down with the small end of the potato masher until the milk keeps above the corn. Fill the jars to overflowing, put on the rubbers, and screw on the tops, but do not tighten them. Place in the boiler on a rack and cover with water. Boil three hours. Lift and tighten the covers and cool as quickly as possible.

"Green beans boiled in salt water fifteen minutes, packed in jars, and sealed; you must be sure to have entirely covered with boiling water before sealing. For two days following the canning place the jars in the boiler, cover with water, and after it has reached the boiling point cook for several minutes before turning off the heat or taking the boiler from the stove. These will keep indefinitely.

A READER."

These directions are much the same as those given in the earlier letter, but there is enough variation to justify me in printing both. I hope their use may be crowned with success.

Recipe for Keeping Tomatoes.

"Will you please give the recipe for keeping tomatoes—the recipe for which certain proportions of vinegar and water are required? It appeared a while ago, but I lost it. Can you give it again?

"MRS. A. A. L."

I regret that I have not a copy of this recipe at hand. If there is any reader who possesses it, will she be good enough to send it to me? It may interest other housekeepers at this season of the year, when tomatoes are at their best.

Danish Recipes.

"In answer to the request of Mrs. A. L. S. for Danish recipes, I offer the following:

"SWEET SOUP.—One cupful sago, two quarts water, three sticks cinnamon bark, one cupful prunes, one cupful raisins. Boil slowly for one hour and thirty minutes, then add two cupfuls brown sugar and one-half cupful vinegar. Lemon juice may be substituted for the vinegar if preferred.

"KLINER (Crullers).—Two eggs and one half cupful sugar beaten lightly together, one-half cupful sour cream, one-half teaspoonful baking soda, a little nutmeg, add two and one-half cupfuls flour, which will make a dough sufficiently stiff to roll out on a floured board; then cut in about two and one-half inch diamond shaped pieces, cut a slot in center, and double one end through the hole. Drop into a skillet of hot lard and let them turn to a light brown. These are excellent.

"ABLESKIVER (Apple Fritters).—One teacupful granulated sugar, one tablespoonful butter, mix thoroughly, add one egg and beat lightly; one-half teacupful sweet milk, two cupfuls sifted flour, one heaping teaspoonful baking powder, pinch of salt. Peel and slice two nice large cooking apples, chop fine, and add to the batter, beat well, and drop from a spoon into hot lard. When nice and brown sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve hot or cold.

"These are genuine Danish recipes and have been used by the writer for twenty-five years, always with the best of success. At present I do not know where you might secure a Danish cook book, but I may be able to locate one if the party so desires. I hope these recipes will meet with your approval.

"M. M. A."

I am grateful for these recipes and I have no doubt Mrs. A. L. S. will be delighted to have them. I will hold the address of M. M. A. and I hope she may be able to lay hands on a Danish recipe book or tell us where one can be found. It would interest me personally to get hold of savory recipes for Danish cookery. I confess they appeal to me more than the sweets, and I hope some of our Danish readers may be able to supply a few.

Moon's Influence on Plants.

"Will you be good enough to listen to an old woman for a little while? I find you laboring under an error concerning the influence of the moon on plants, as well as on human beings. It is not a superstition as many seem to think. Observers of these things have learned by experience that the moon exerts a great influence, just as certain planets affect the weather on the earth, as is well known by astronomers. My husband, who is 80 years old, tells what he knows to be facts about the moon's influence, learned by personal experience and also from his father. If you plant corn in the new of the moon, about the first quarter, the stalks will not run up ten feet, but will be lower and bear large, heavy ears of corn. The same holds good in planting vines and shrubbery and fruit trees. In the full or the dark of the moon is the time to plant potatoes and such things as grow down under the ground. If planted in the light of the moon they go mostly to tops. In killing hogs for meat, the best time is in the full of the moon in January. If killed in the dark of the moon the meat will go all to grease in the cooking; if killed in the full, the meat does not shrink. These are plain facts. In laying the bottom rail of a fence composed of rails, lay this in the dark of the moon and it will remain intact; otherwise it will rot. The suckers that come up around the base of a peach tree if removed in the dark of the moon never come up again, and the same holds in killing noxious weeds.

"MRS. S. W."

This is at least interesting, whether we accept the theory or not. I am not a farmer and although I have heard statements like those of Mrs. S. W. all my life I have never proved them. If they are to be relied upon I do not see why noxious weeds of all sorts should not speedily disappear from the earth. In any event, I give the directions for planting as they are given to me and I shall hope to hear from those who have tried and proved them, one way or the other.

Girl Needs a Wheel.

"I write to ask a favor. My husband is old and not able to work and I myself am badly crippled, although I still manage to earn a little by my needle. Our greatest help is my little 13 year old daughter, who is employed in a factory three miles from where we live. She earns $3 a week. Sixty cents of this goes for car fare. I wonder if any of your readers have a discarded girl's bicycle they would be willing to pass along. One of our neighbor's little daughters works at the same factory and she has a wheel, so they could go together, but it is utterly impossible for me to buy one, though we need the 60 cents that goes for car fare. I have a good fountain pen that I would like to pass on to some one, also some Hot Springs crystals we have had in the family for over thirty years. I cannot pay the transportation on the bicycle, even if it is given to me, I am sorry to say. I can send a letter from our pastor or our mayor as reference, if you wish it.

MRS. A. J. O."

The pathos of a child of 13 being the chief support of her parents will appeal to the heart of every parent—and to many besides. If the gift of a bicycle will help to lighten her lot, I trust with all my heart that the wheel may be forthcoming. I hold the address and I trust requests for it may not come merely in order to secure the pen or the crystals but with the desire to present the bicycle or to give other substantial help.

Offers Music to Young Men.

"I am a young man pianist and teacher and get a great deal of music which I do not use. I would be glad to hear from any young men students who would care to write for it or from young men students who are puzzled on some musical point that I could explain by mail. I am living in a small place where I do not have much chance to help others, but will be glad to do so through your Helpful Hand Corner. You may keep my name and address and any musical assistance I can render any one—especially young men students (I am partial to young men taking up music)—I shall be glad to give.

G. W. S."

This is a generous offer, and I have no doubt it will be eagerly accepted by music lovers. Let me beg on behalf of the liberal giver that if requests are sent either for music or for instruction they may be accompanied by postage. You remember the proverb about "riding a free horse to death"? It is not fair to make the giver of help pay too high for his generosity and the least those whom he aids can do is to spare him money expense.

Would Care for Child.

"I am desirous of finding a little girl with us. I want a child of clean parentage, either an orphan or one whose parent or parents are otherwise engaged and have not the time to give to the home influence of the child, yet who desire for her a refined and happy environment and would be willing to pay board for the entire charge. My husband is away with the exception of Sundays and so I am alone much of the time. We have no children. I was a teacher of the kindergarten before my marriage and feel as if my experience warrants my taking the care of some little child to whom I could give out the patience, love, and discipline I would so gladly bestow on one of my own had we been so blessed. If we could afford to take the entire welfare of a child I would gladly do so, but cannot see the way clearly just now and would be obliged to have compensation. Of course unexceptionable references are required by us and gladly given.

MRS. D.

This is a wonderful opportunity for some child, but it is harder to secure one for this place than it would be for entire adoption. You do not seem to think that if the parents keep the hold upon the child that they would do if they boarded it with you—for that is what the relation would mean, looked at from a business standpoint—they would have a claim upon her and could take her from you at any time, perhaps just when your heartstrings had gained a firm hold on the little one. I recognize what you say about the difficulty of assuming the expense, but if you had been blessed with children of your own the expense would have been the same or even larger. The relationship as you outline it seems to me rather anomalous—the child would really belong neither to you nor to her actual parents and there would be room for all sorts of complications. However, I print the letter as you have written it and will hold your address in hope that the right applicant may call for it. You are right in saying that it is a wonderful opportunity for some little girl, and I hope circumstances may bring her and you together. You do not state, by the way, the age at which you would like the child to be. Kindly inform me on this point.

Hospital Wants Books.

"Any one in New York or Brooklyn having reading matter to dispose of will find a wide opening at the Metropolitan hospital, Blackwell's island. A card to Walter H. Conley at the hospital will bring their motor truck to the door of the giver and all books be taken away without the least effort on the part of the giver. I might add there are something like 1,000 inmates in the tuberculosis ward.

MRS. C. D. F."

This will be welcome information to the many possessing magazines they do not wish to throw away, but are at a loss to bestow elsewhere but in the ash barrel. I am grateful to the good Cornerite who makes the suggestion.

Asks Embroidery Patterns.

"In a recent issue of the Helping Hand a correspondent offered embroidery patterns for towels and pillow cases. If these have not already been requested I would be glad to send postage for them.

"MRS. H. C. M."

Unfortunately for you the patterns had been given away before your letter arrived. I print it here in the hope it may catch the eye of some one else with such patterns to give away as you desire.

Training the Boys.

"I can't bear to be misjudged, as I fear I must have been from the paragraph you quoted from a letter of mine in a recent talk of yours. Perhaps I did not make myself clear. I said, 'I love my boys so that I would commit murder to save one hair of their heads.' I meant it, but that does not prevent me from laying on the stick generously when occasion demands. The mother who through over love for her children allows them to rub and lie has no conception, to my mind of what mother love is nor has she who allows her boys to develop selfish or lazy tendencies. I make my boys share their things with one another and with me, help about the housework, show me little attentions, save their money for gifts to others. I'd hate to have my boys say, 'Mother didn't teach us how to work,' but I'd hate worse to have them say I didn't teach them to be unselfish.

"MRS. L. W. P."

I am glad to print this and correct the impression made by the first remark quoted. An injustice, even in thought, is something to be avoided in every way.

Water Spots on Satin.

"I would like to have a remedy for removing spots of dirty water that was spattered on a blue satin dress while out boat riding.

E. V."

Try washing them out with a soft, clean cloth dipped in cold water. Don't use soap, but wash the spots with pure water. I am not sure this will succeed with satin, but I have known it to take all traces of water spots from a cloth dress. If this fails, you would better try a little naphtha, using it with caution.

Colleges of Dentistry.

"Can you give any information in regard to colleges of dentistry. I am anxious to take a course, and fail to find any such institutions advertised.

"A SUBSCRIBER."

There is an admirable one in New York and one of the best in the country in Philadelphia, but for information as to such institutions in the middle west or in California I must call upon some of my constituency. As soon as I get a response I will publish the information for your benefit.

HINTS for the WELL DRESSED WOMAN.

LITTLE SILK COATS

DRAWINGS by DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

BY JOSEPHINE JORDAN

Brocaded silk crepe coatee to wear with summer frock. Medici collar of plaited tulle. Cuffs of same material finished with narrow velvet bands. Narrow velvet girdle.

A practical three-quarter coat suit of deep blue brocaded crepe. Kimono sleeves graduating to bell cuffs. Skirt caught in shirring in right side of back below the knee.

Silk coat suit showing new waistcoat suggestion. Suit of copper brown corded silk; vest of darker brown silk. Large amber buttons on vest. Collar and cuffs of fine French embroidery.

A practical three-quarter coat of black [illegible] with black satin collar and cuffs. Skirt of coat draped on side backs and caught with three large buttons made of [illegible] satin to match collars and cuffs.

SILK coats are already making a long expected debut and in their name the most enchanting little affairs are introduced. Some are shapeless enough to cause one to wonder whether a mistake was not made when they were concocted, whether the designer, aiming at a fichu, had not confused it with a hood. Others are glorified editions of the matinée jacket and no more, while the rest are ranged among the waistcoats, dolmans, and boleros.

For every occasion the fascinating trifles are available. The crepon gown of a delicate lilac shade has a loose, sleeveless waistcoat like a man's, made of imperial purple silk with a bordering of black and white embroidery of a quaint chess board design, and an evening gown is furnished with a dolman of blossom crêpe lined with Chinese gold, quite a short little trifle opening in front to show the corsage.

Such conceits as these, trifling though they are, most certainly are a feature of the summer dress program. And now that they have come, it is surprising to one's sense of the fitness of things that hitherto the rest gown and the negligée have been the only garments to which airy coats appertained, and these wraps were for the most part long.

It is by the fashions of forty and fifty years ago that the new coatees and wraps were inspired, and those "capes," generically so-called, were copies of the beautiful Watteau coats and sacques of a distant period.

The utmost flights to which the costumers of half a century ago rose were mantelets to match the frocks worn, hemmed with ruches, lace flounces, and pinking. But now we use the elaborate all over embroideries and naturally introduce plenty of color in keeping with the fancies of the moment and the fashion for Bulgarian and Persian tints. To those who dislike the fussy appearance of trimmed hems the piped edges will appeal.

The sash is ubiquitous at present, making its graceful presence obvious upon the evening toilet, and finding a place even upon the cotton coat.

A very becoming example of white silk suit with a scarlet sash has the sash arranged in a novel manner with a single pull over and hanging in front. The sash is made of coarsely woven cotton and is finished with bright Bulgarian embroidery and three tassels, one green, one blue, and in the center a large scarlet one.

Upon the collar and cuffs the colors are repeated, showing brightly upon the white background, and the buttons that fasten the coat in front and are arranged across the back of the basque are white ivory trimmed with scarlet.

Upon the white straw hat a black band is tied in front in a bow to match the loosely knotted one worn beneath the chin.

There is something Dolly Vardenish about these coatees which are being worn with summer frocks. Like the chiffon scarfs, which women declare "just warm enough," these airy little jackets give some warmth, but they are chiefly intended as an adornment. They are to be had in lace, brocaded silk crêpe, and cotton crêpe and, although they vary somewhat in style, they are usually cut away in the front and are a trifle more than hip length at the back and sides. Light weight cotton crêpe with little bunches of roses scattered over a white ground is used for one. The collar and cuffs are of plain white crêpe with a hemstitched edge. A broad, black velvet sash gives a definite note of contrast. Just to be in keeping with the whole piquant style of this little garment, the buttons instead of appearing on the front of the jacket are dropped unexpectedly on one side of the sash end. With a lingerie or cotton crêpe gown this jacket would be especially charming and effective.

A distinctly novel garden party wrap and one which is quite a fad of the summer is a huge square of brocaded crêpe with no slits for the arms and no defined neck. It is to be simply swathed about the figure.

Many times when it is too warm even for a coatee there seems to be a real necessity for some light wrap over the silky afternoon gown. In fact, the transparent low bodiced, daytime frocks have translated the scarf from the class of a pretty accessory into that of an intrinsic part of the garden party costume. The couturiers, realizing this, have decided that it is wise to take the designing of scarfs into their own hands, and to make them in colors and materials matching or blending with the gowns with which they are to be worn. Notable among the large houses which are following this policy is that of Bichoff-David. His scarfs are made of chiffon in plain colors and are trimmed at either end with eighteen inch bands of self-tone satin. Such scarfs may be charmingly worn wound about the arms or throat in Queen Louise fashion, or allowed to fall so as half to conceal one shoulder. A scarf worn in this way does not detract at all from the lines of the gown with which it is worn, but rather resolves itself into a sort of additional drapery.

A really practical three-quarter coat is of deep blue brocaded crêpe, trimmed rather elaborately with self-pipings which are put on in clustered rows down the fronts and across the sides and back. About the waist line at the back the pipings form a row of tiny loops. They also trim the sleeves from wrist to elbow and decorate the velvet collar, which stands high at the back and rolls low at the front. At the outer side seams the material is caught up near the waist to form a slightly draped effect, and from the same seams at the inner side of the garment start silk, tasseled cords which draw the fronts of the coat together without actually closing them.

A popular trimming for the girdle of the afternoon or evening gown is the chou of tulle.

A charming blouse of ivory net has a Medici collar of plaited mallne lace finishing the neck in folds of white tulle softens the V opening in the neck and fill in the narrow low line.

A smart variation of the Balkan blouse in white brocaded silk crepe with scarlet sash. The sash is made of closely woven cotton. Upon the collars and cuffs the colors are repeated, showing brightly upon the white background. Buttons on coat and skirt are white ivory, trimmed with scarlet.

Frocks of printed muslin [illegible] taffeta, chiffon, silk crêpe, crêpe de chine or moire.

The colonial shoe, with buckles of [illegible] gun metal, or leather, is the prime favorite for street wear.

The low shoe is displayed in a variety of designs and plays an important part in the season's modes.

Gossamer hosiery is the order of the day. Some is worn so sheer that it appears like a covering of chiffon.

Gloves with extremely long [illegible] worn. They are pushed up into soft creases about the arm.

New parasols are odd in shape and elaborately trimmed with ruchings and [illegible] tings of the material.

Some of the summer tea gowns are so simple they would serve for dressing gowns, especially if made of muslin delaine or other crêpe.

The most popular demi-tailored dress will be in the coat effect with a vest or waist coat of elaborate and costly material.

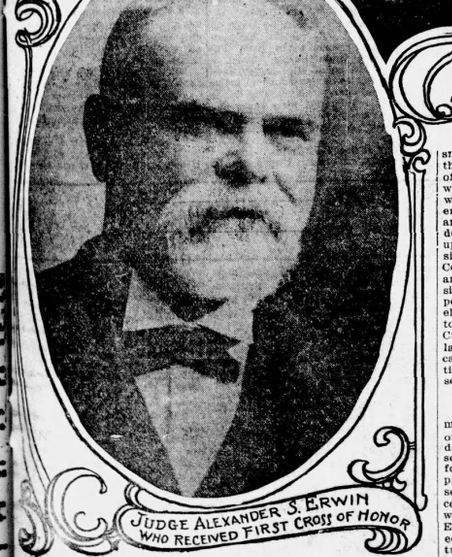
Some fashion devotees are wearing the heel less slipper of soft leather, laced half way to the knees.

A good invention for the collarless dress is the little narrow velvet chin strap attached to some of the new hats.

SOUTHERN CROSS OF HONOR

MRS. ALEXANDER S. ERWIN
ORIGINATOR OF THE SOUTHERN CROSS OF HONOR

MISS OCIE JOHNSON PINNING CROSS OF HONOR ON JUGE J.W.LINDSAY



JUDGE ALEXANDER S. ERWIN WHO RECEIVED FIRST CROSS OF HONOR

BY ANNA BLAND.

No dearer to the Englishman is his Victoria Cross or to the Frenchman the badge of the Legion of Honor than the Southern Cross of Honor to the Confederate veteran. It is to him an emblem of sacred significance. The fact that over 75,000 have applied for and received these treasured tokens during the twelve years since the inauguration of the movement to bestow them, demonstrates how highly they are coveted. These emblems, fashioned of bronze and decorated with a laurel wreath enclosing the battle flag of the Confederate States of America, are simple in construction and unpretentious in design, yet they possess a value to the owners which mere money cannot measure.

The idea of awarding a "Cross of Honor" to each survivor of the southern armies originated with a southern woman who is a devoted member of that great organization, the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Alexander S. Erwin, of Athens, Ga., is her name. It was but natural that a woman of such early environment as she had should have conceived the idea of thus paying tribute to the soldiers of the south. Born in Georgia, she was reared amid surroundings that were notably and intensely southern in sympathy and in inspiration, and she grew up with a clear understanding of the causes that led up to the tragic events of the sixties. A daughter of Howell E. Cobb, one of the earliest, boldest and ablest of the advocates of secession, a man who resigned a cabinet position as soon as Lincoln was elected in order to be free to appeal to the south, the originator of the Cross of Honor, for the legions that later responded to her father's call, came naturally by her eager identity with southern traditions and sentiment.

HOWELL E. COBB.

Howell E. Cobb was one of the most dashing and magnetic figures of the whole civil war period; indeed, in point of influence upon southern opinion and action just before the war, he scarcely yielded precedence to Jefferson Davis himself. He was born in Jefferson county, Georgia, in 1815, but Athens was his home from early boyhood. Educated for the law, he was elected to the legislature when barely turned his majority, and henceforth, with brief intervals, his commanding talents found their exercise in public life. For ten years he was a member of congress, and in 1849 was speaker of the house. Then Georgia honored him with the governorship and later on President Buchanan called him to the secretaryship of the treasury. In December, 1860, he resigned from Mr. Buchanan's cabinet and issued an address to the people of Georgia, the boldness of which startled the whole country, in which he set forth his views on the questions of the hour and the reasons for taking that step. He declared that "the union formed by our fathers, which was one of equity, justice and fraternity, will be supplanted on the fourth of March, 1861, by a union of sectionalism and hatred, the one worthy of the support and devotion of free men, the other only possible at the cost of southern honor, safety and independence." Mr. Cobb then canvassed Georgia in behalf of secession, and his great influence was a powerful factor toward the withdrawal of his state from the union.

Mr. Cobb is the only American who had the distinction of presiding over two separate federal congresses. The one honor was bestowed upon him in 1849, and the other by the Confederate congress, which met in Montgomery February 4, 1861. His martial spirit would not permit him, however, to remain away from the field of battle once hostilities had begun. He promptly raised a regiment when war was declared, and led it with conspicuous gallantry, alternating between the camp and council chamber, hurrying from the army to his congressional duties as occasion demanded.

HONORED BY CONGRESS.

At the epiration of his term congress presented him with a sword and a flag for his regiment; and his ability as a soldier, which he displayed until the fall of Richmond, won for him the epaulettes of a major general. His fiery spirit could not brook Mr. Seward's taunt that "no citizen of the south had appealed to the government in behalf of Jefferson Davis," who was under arrrest; and he promptly published a powerful defense of the course of the south and a protest against the treatment of the ex-president of the Confederacy. He was arrested and was being carried north for trial, and had gotten as far as Nashville, when he was released on the firm insistence of General James Wilson that he was a paroled prisoner of war.

Such was the father of the woman whose ardent spirit was to conceive a tribute to the soldiery of the south that will be treasured as long as a gallant people honor their proud memories. Her mother was a Lamar, and therefore, of the intellectual and social aristocracy of the south, and the daughter, who was the seventh of twelve children, was educated in Georgia and at the national capital in a manner worthy of her name. During her childhood she made the acquaintance of many of the notable figures of the day at the capital city who were entertained at the home of her father, Secretary Cobb. One of her most interesting reminiscences is of the occasion when she was a guest at an entertainment given at a fashionable girls' school in honor of the young Prince of Wales who was then a boy of eighteen years of age and who, with his suite, was a visitor to Washington.

Mrs. Erwin relates many interesting war-time incidents; among others she tells of a visit of President Davis to her home in Georgia during the last days of the Confederacy, and also, of the period during which Mr. Davis was in prison and Mrs. Davis was the guest of her mother. Mrs. Davis was accompanied by her daughter Anne Verina, "little Winnie," who was afterwards lovingly called the "Daughter of the Confederacy." In 1872 she was carried to Alexander E. Erwin, now a prominent lawyer of Athens, Ga., who was a volunteer in Phillip's Legion and for gallant conduct was made a captain in 1863. In compliment to his wife the signal honor was conferred upon Judge Erwin of having presented to him Cross of Honor No. 1. Imbued as she was from earliest childhood by sentiments so truly southern, and reared in this atmosphere, it was but natural that Mrs. Erwin should seek some means to pay enduring tribute to the bravery of those who fought for the cause she so loved. How the particular form of expression that was adopted happened to be chosen is an interesting story.

SOUTHERN CROSS OF HONOR.

During a meeting in Atlanta of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. Erwin expressed the thought that some token should be given each and every veteran in commemoration of his services in the southern armies, and she suggested that it take the form of a "Southern Cross of Honor." The idea awakened immediate interest and she was urged to present her plan in the form of a set of resolutions. This was done on her return home to Athens, and the resolutions were presented before the Louisa Rutherford chapter of that place, of which Mrs. Erwin was a member. The purpose and spirit actuating the whole U. D. C. organization in the bestowal of these crosses are forcibly presented in these first resolutions adopted by the home chapter of the originator. They said:

"Whereas, It has been the custom of every civilized nation to bestow upon its members of the army and navy, and such others as peculiarly deserve it, medals and crosses of honor, such as the Victoria Cross of England, the iron cross of Germany, and the Cross of the Legion of Honor of France, and medals and crosses bestowed by the United States Governmeet.

"Resolved, That we, the Daughters of the Confederacy, do confer upon each and every member of the army and navy of the Confederate states of America a cross, to be known as "The Southern Cross of the Legion of Honor," to be handed down from one generation to another as the most priceless heritage, bought, as it was, with the blood of their fathers, and though of no intrinsic value within itself, to stand as a record for all time of the memory of those men who represented all that was lofty in principle, pure in patriotism, and dauntless in courage."

At the next Georgia State U. D. C. convention Mrs. Erwin, who was unable to attend, presented the Athens resolutions through Miss Mildred Rutherford, the present historian general of the national organization. At the National U. D. C. convention at Hot Springs, Ark., in November, 1898, resolutions approving the Cross of Honor were formally adopted and a committee composed of Mrs. Erwin, Mrs. Helen Plane and Mrs. Gabbett, of Atlanta, was named to select an appropriate design. A sad death in the family of Mrs. Erwin caused her withdrawal from this committee, and in her place Miss Rutherford was appointed, and to her faithful work and untiring efforts is due much of the success of the movement. Immediately after a meeting in Atlanta Mrs. Gabbett called on Mrs. Erwin and offered her assistance in carrying out the idea. A design for the cross was discussed. Mrs. Erwin said that it should have the laurel wreath. "Yes," was Mrs. Gabbett's reply, "and the motto should be, 'Deo vindice,' the motto of the great seal of the Confederacy."

CROSS IS DESIGNED.

Suggestions for the design were solicited from the leading jewelers of the south and many large manufacturers, and each president of the state divisions was communicated with to the same end. The last meeting of the committee was held at the Jefferson hotel in Richmond, the first day of the U. D. C. convention of November 1899. Several designs were presented, but, owing to the fact that the cost of manufacture of the crosses would exceed the ability of the chapters to bestow them, it was agreed to accept the striking and appropriate bronze design offered by Mrs. Gabbett. This had been placed in the convention hall at Richmond for two days and attention called to the fact that all might have an opportunity to view all discuss it before formal action. The subject was presented on the third day of the conference and the design was accepted. It is interesting to recall in this connection that Mrs. Gabbett, in an address to the U. D. C. convention at Hot Springs, upon this question said: "I beg to offer the Cross of Danneberg, to which there is attached a beautiful sentiment. When the tomb of Dagmar, queen of Denmark, was opened after six hundred years, an exquisite cross was found lying upon her breast. The meaning of Dagmar is "the light of day." We pray that the Southern Cross may throw "the light of day" upon the valor and fidelity of our Confederate veterans."

What Do You Think of This?

In an Ohio town, where the "good" people get most of their amusement by fighting the "bad," there was a mayor whom the "good" people suspected was "bad." So this was how they put him to the test:

They hired an alluring woman and got her to make friends with his honor. A skillful woman, out to ensnare a man, especially if she be pretty and dimply and apt in the affectations of a beauty in distress, generally, so history tells us, makes some headway.

It was so in this case. The woman tempted and the man bit like the great, gawky gudgeon that a man is. Nothing wilfully wrong, understand. No deliberate plotting of perfidy on his part. Just a foolish yielding to a lure as old as creation.

And when the trap was ready to be sprung, lo, there came detectives, policemen and a photographer; the "good" people chortled with glee and a flock of them hied to the governor to see if they could get the "bad" mayor removed.

Wonderful reforming, isn't it?

Some Lessons Suggested By The Balkan Wars

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

THE state of war which has continued in the Balkans for the last several months brings home to us lessons which should not escape attention.

Passing over the more important political and moral phases of the case, let attention be directed to nothing more than the financial effects of these wars and rumors of wars.

It can not be doubted that the monetary stringency prevailing in both Europe and America is largely the result of the Balkan wars. A war anywhere in the world now makes the big financiers very timid and cautious; they are afraid to make heavy investments under such conditions, and are disposed to hoard money against possible emergencies. At the same time war calls for war-loans, usually at heavy rates of interest, and these loans absorb capital that otherwise would go into productive industries and the wages of labourers.

The six great powers of Europe—England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Italy—are now making an aggregate military expenditure of two billion dollars a year. This vast sum is further increased by the expenditures of the Balkans states in the conflicts which have engaged them. We must take into the account also the immense loss arising from the withdrawal of enlisted men from the productive forces of their respective countries. When these and other facts are taken into consideration, we can not wonder that the money market is very close.

Conditions of war in some European countries and the state of expensively armed peace in others will tend to increase the demand for the agricultural products of the United States this year, and to raise the prices of them. This may be of some advantage to the agriculturists of our country, but it will make the cost of living higher to our people and children in America. Meats and breadstuffs will probably cost more this year than last.

It thus appears that comparatively small wars among some minor powers in a mountainous corner of Europe, lay burdens on all the rest of the world. Men and women and children in America must endure hardships on this account. Industries must wait for development until these costly combats cease. Business enterprises must suffer and the food supply of multiplied thousands must be reduced because a few feeble powers have fallen to fighting among themselves.

Could anything bring into view more vividly the fact that all the nations of the earth are now, as never before, bound up in one common bundle, and that nothing can befall one which does not affect all. No nation can longer live unto itself; all are members one of another.

If, therefore, we regard selfish considerations only, we can not afford to be indifferent to the peace and purity and prosperity of other nations. An ignorant, inflamable and vicious nation may in some moment of passion strike off a spark that will make a world-wide conflagration.

The contact of the nations and their intimate connections require the development of what might be called an international conscience that will outlaw injustice and restrain all unrighteousness. There is not now enough conscience in the world to safe-guard mankind under present conditions.

We should remember also that it is not the office of conscience to create moral law, but to recognize such law, and to impel men to obey it. The conscience of pagan nations conforms to heathen standards of right. The ethical standards of Confucianism control nearly half the race of man; but they are too low for the Christian conscience to accept. It was this fact which gave rise to treaty ports and extra-territoriality laws in Oriental countries, like China and Japan, for many long years; Christian nations refused to allow their nationals to be tried before pagan tribunals in which heathen standards controlled decisions. But in Japan the treaty ports have been abolished and the extra-territoriality laws have been set aside. These temporary expedients must speedily disappear from China and cease to exist anywhere in the earth. Then what shall take their place?

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

Chaos must follow, unless Christian standards of right and wrong are set up in the world. We can not have longer a safe world if it be not a Christian world.

The conflict in the Balkans began on account of irreconcilable moral standards of Turkey and the Balkan states. Now it appears the Bulgarian sense of right is all too low for the maintenance of peacable relations with Bulgaria's neighbors. There is no secure moral base for tranquility in that region of the world.

It is time for the more aggressive and rapid propagation of Christian truth. Neither international commerce nor international peace can be secured in default of the universal spread of the truth as it is in Jesus. Business must suffer and many thousands of people endure hardship this year because of the low moral standards which have prevailed in south-eastern Europe, especially in Turkey. Let men of finance consider what this means.

And wage-earners also should learn lessons from the situation in the Balkans. They more than all others suffer when money is tight and prices of the necessaries of life are high. They ought to make themselves felt in favor of international peace and international justice. The Labor Unions of Berlin commanded peace between England and Germany when war was threatened in 1911. That service to mankind can not be over-estimated. Who can say what such a war would have brought to pass? The possible consequences of such a conflict are too horrible to contemplate! And wage-earners averted those consequences.

Let wage-earners everywhere demand that arbitration take the place of war in the settlement of international controversies. They are numerous enough to make diplomats and statesmen hear them.

The question of international peace is not a question for the consideration of a few thousands of amiable academics. It is a matter which most vitally affects the men of toil in all lands. Let the strong hands of laboring men lay hold of the issue. Let them rebuke sensational newspapers and wicked lies that try to excite international hostilities. It is to the interest of the manufacturers of armor-plate and military supplies to keep up all "the war-talk" possible, but it is to the interest of no other class,—unless it be the news-papers which they hire to publish war-like editorials. Let suspicion rest upon any paper which habitually prints such stuff. Such sheets are probably the hirelings of interests which profit by the misfortunes of nations which engage in war.

Work of Dr. Broughton At Christ Church, London

BY ROYAL DANIEL

LONDON, July 26.—I know of no story of England so full of vital interest to Atlanta as the narrative I am about to tell of Christ church under the administration of Dr. Len G. Broughton, for so many years pastor of the Tabernacle church at home.

In the very beginning of this story it may be interesting to say that I asked a cabman, fourteen miles from the church and nineteen miles from Dr. Broughton's home, if he knew where I could find my way to my friend. It seemed a foolish question to ask in a city of more than seven million souls, yet I asked it just the same, taking it for granted the answer would be in the negative. To my utmost surprise, the cabman instantly told me that Dr. Broughton was the president of Christ church, that the church was located in Westminster road, and that Dr. Broughton lived in Tulse Hill.

As I say, I was wholly taken by surprise at the ready reply. It made the subtle impression upon me that Dr. Broughton was already well known in this great city, and I judged he had already made good, still I was not prepared for the real truth until I visited Christ church later and saw and heard for myself the things that are transpiring here.

In the first place, Christ church, without exaggeration, is one of the greatest of London's religious centers. It is a monster building, facing the city and the world, conspicuously situated on the great roadway leading from the Thames and the hall of parliament and Westminster Abbey. It occupies a vantage ground that might easily be called one of the "five points" or the city, easy of access by underground railways, trams, busses and motor cars.

The first time I saw this great edifice, towering above the neighborhood and crowned by the Lincoln Tower, erected by American money to commemorate Abraham Lincoln, I stood almost transfixed at its grandeur and magnificence. On all sides were great banners announcing that next Sunday's sermon would be preached by Dr. Len G. Broughton.

I don't recall whether or not there were tears in my eyes at that time, but I know, on the Sunday following, as I saw Dr. Broughton enter the pulpit there was a confusing moment when I saw things through a mist. He walked as in the old days of the Tabernacle. Yes it was the same man, grown younger, heavier and more elastic in his stride, but the same long, careless and white hair and Roman nose.

THE RECOGNITION.

I sat probably half way from the door to the pulpit, in a vast building with a seating capacity of more than 3,000, under a dome of stained glass rivaling that great dome of the national capitol building at Washington, with the strange yellow light of London struggling through the immense windows, yet as I looked, I plainly saw the preacher, as he sat during the anthem, peering intently in my direction. I wondered, in a half egotistical way, if it were possible, among all those hundreds, he had recognized me. There was a moment in the world, but I do not possess it. Yesterday afternoon in Hyde park, while witnessing the review of the territorial troops by his majesty the king, a pickpocket relieved me of the watch. I still own the watch, but a thief possesses it."

DR. BROUGHTON'S HOME.

The greeting that followed the service is too intimately personal to find place here; the magnificent home in Tulse Hill too gorgeous for description. I will only here and there tell of some of these things pertaining to his personal life, devoting most of the story to his great public undertakings and success.

Of course, I went home with Dr. Broughton, for I couldn't get away, if I had half a mind to, which I didn't, and I am free to admit I was so afraid I might get lost from him that I kept ever in sight during the few moments in his vestry when I saw peers and lords shaking his hands.

We rode the five miles from the church to the home in a limousine.

"The people are already good to me," he said, "for they gave me this machine."

Tulse Hill is the name of a great street, smoothly paved, wide and inviting, lined with walls on each side which are vine-covered. Behind these walls are the homes of the rich and retired, houses very similar, many covered by ivy and creeping vines of rich green, yet each and every one different.

Imagine a wall eight feet high in front, green with its rampanting ivy, a grass lawn, of such grass as you only can find in England, rioting red geraniums, drooping trees of varieties unknown to me, and then a three-story English house, without porches or verandas, wrapped in ivy like an ancient castle, here and there an artistic window peeking through, and you have a half-hearted picture of the Broughton home.

The back yard is not a back yard at all, but a garden, a closely cut grass lawn, and the same rich flowers and noble trees. And just beyond lies one of the great parks open paddocks and golf courses, with swimming and boating and many varieties of recreation, tended over by a flock of sheep, as country-like as you might well wish to find in an imaginative picture.

The entire Broughton family sails June 19 from London to New York. Dr. Broughton will spend much of his vacation in North Fields, doing a number of other places where religious teachers and preachers meet for the discussion of world-wide problems. They will be in America until early fall. It is the plan of Dr. Broughton and Mrs. Broughton to spend some time in Atlanta, returning to London in October.

My promise to confine this story to the Christ church and its allied interests and not to the personal side is being violated for the simple reason that it is difficult to write of the church without giving a great deal of space to the head of the movement.

HEAD OF MOVEMENT.

In the first place, Dr. Broughton is the president of the entire religious movement that centers in Christ church. He is probably more the executive officer and official head of the church than a pastor, in our sense of the term. Being pastor of Christ church also carries with it the administrative office in a number of other organizations closely related.

The physical holdings of the church are valued at more than 2,000,000 pounds, and its business annually, for this term may be used in this connection, overreaches the 1,000,000 pound mark. That is, more than this amount of money is raised and distributed each twelve months.

The church building proper occupies about the size of a city block at home. As there are no blocks in London. This description would mean nothing to an Englishman. It is one of the sights, the show places of the city, and is only about ten minutes' walk from the halls of parliament and Westminster Abbey. Years ago it was in the center of the wealth and refinement of the city, but the rapid increase of London has driven residents farther out in all directions, and today the majority of the members of the church and congregation live at least five miles away, stores and shops being located in the immediate neighborhood.

Immediately adjoining the church auditorium is a vast building in which are baths, swimming pools, various reception and rest rooms and libraries, with smaller auditoriums. Much of the institutional work of the church is held here under direct auspices.

There are fourteen other buildings scattered about here and there in the community where women are taught at night cooking, sewing, housekeeping, sciences, economics and various and kindred instruction is imparted by experts in each line of thought. Much of the expert assistance is furnished free of cost by the city council of the borough, yet the church proper has three pastors and five assistants, with regularly organized avenues of reaching the poor and the sick.

Some idea of the enormity of the work undertaken may be gained when it is said more than a million people were personally aided during the past twelve months. The influence from this great center of religious endeavor is more than that of a church and has more significance than a creed, for Christ church has auxiliary organizations which put forever out of business the money shark, the second-hand furniture dealer or the high-priced physician, with which so much of London is afflicted.

The barmaid goes to church at this place to borrow or to receive assistance instead of to the pawnbroker; the man out of a job goes here to get work, for the church has a great employment bureau; the person who is poor and ill can get medical assistance without money and without price; the man who wishes to borrow a few pounds to tide him over can get it from the bank for Christ church has a savings department with more than 50,000 pounds on deposit.

One of the greatest organizations in London, with a higher standard of morality as its motto, meets in the church every Sunday afternoon. It has its own band, its own programs and distributes thousands of dollars every year among the needy and suffering. It is known as the P. S. A., meaning the Pleasant Sunday Afternoons.

Housewives Demand a Public Market

CITY'S GREATEST NEED.

Mrs. John K. Ottley says: "We began fourteen years ago to ask for a public market, and we want a market just as much now as we did then. There is nothing the city needs so much as a public market place, nothing that would benefit everyone more directly and to a greater degree. We have been asking for fourteen years, and we mean to keep on asking. Atlanta should have a public market, and it needs to realize that fact without delay."

Mrs. Clarence Haverty says: "Every woman understands the need of a public market. Atlanta has no greater lack than a mart where all foodstuffs would be offered for sale. Of course such an arrangement would be a means toward economy, convenience, and the better inspection of food."

"Public markets in Washington and other large cities are successful," points out Mrs. Alex Smith, "Why shouldn't they be successful here? I see no reason why Atlanta, in this respect, should lack what other cities have. Nothing would do greater good, more direct good, than a public market."

In May a series of comments from the men of Atlanta upon the need of a public market were printed in The Journal, and also the following statement by the business manager of the public markets of Detroit:

"When this town was first incorporated more than a century ago, a public market was established and the same policy has been maintained ever since. The advantages, even the necessity of such marts are universally recognized. The present method of conducting them is as follows:

"The city has provided in the eastern and western sections large areas which are paved, sewered and protected by roofs supported by pillars. They are open for occupation by farmers' and market gardeners' wagons from 6 p. m. till noon the next day. It is the custom of many farmers to arrive in the evening, put up their horses, and sleep in their wagons.

"Up to July last there was a uniform charge of 10 cents a day for each wagon. Then a change was made under which the farmer could secure the space for a year at $50.

"To almost the full extent of their operation the markets fulfill their main purpose of bringing the producer into contact with the consumer or small dealer. It is here that many of the retailers go for their daily supplies and here hundreds of householders provide for their tables. The markets are not only a great convenience to the public, but serve a useful purpose in regulating prices."

PRESIDENT MOORE'S COMMENT.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of the chamber of commerce, in urging a public market, said:

"Four branch markets would be better than one public market. But they would cost too much. The cost of one central market would be about $250,000. It should be built of brick. It should have marble counters and tile floors, and should be carefully screened.

"But the expense would be repaid in more ways than one. If it did nothing else but build up an important truck gardening industry—which it assuredly would do—such a market would be well worth while.

"Lands around Atlanta, which are now put to little use, would become valuable for gardening purposes; this city would become a market from which produce would be shipped to other cities; and a new business would be fostered.

"There is no question whatever about such a market saving money for the people of Atlanta, nor can it be doubted that the quality of food would be improved and that marketing would be made much easier.

"A public market would mean cheap food, clean food, fresh food, and properly inspected food. And, in addition, it would mean the development of a great truck gardening industry."

CHAIRMAN ORME'S OPINION.

A. J. Orme, chairman of the public market committee of the chamber of commerce, said:

"A public market is a project that would benefit the city as a whole and the citizens as individuals. Unlike most public undertakings, it would begin at once to repay the city, and soon would be a source of profit rather than expense.

"The city would get its revenue from the rent of stalls into which the market would be divided. This rent would be made low for the purpose of aiding the produce men, but it would be sufficient to more than repay the city for its investment.

"The chief difficulty is in getting a suitable location. Central property in Atlanta when you buy it by a frontage of 200 or 300 feet comes high, and a market that was not centrally located would be of no use, unless we had three or four in various parts of the city.

"I think that a bond issue of about half a million dollars would be necessary to secure a central location of sufficient size. But I do not believe that $500,000 could be spent more wisely or more profitably.

"A public market can be built in Atlanta, and it will receive the support of the people more than any other public undertakng. Such a market would be of vital importance to them. Particularly would it benefit the man and woman who must economize. It would give them the means of greater economy, and at the same time would offer them better food.

GOOD RESULTS.

"A public market would mean cheapness, sanitation, better quality, and freshness in food.

"The small grocer thinks that the public market would put him out of business. It would do nothing of the kind. It would simply cause him to move his business to the public market.

"If the city could get authority from the state to bridge the tracks below Forsyth street bridge, and there build a market, the problem of a site would be solved. The market would be in the heart of the city, and would offer sufficient room for all the food supplies that would there be sold.

"But whether the city could get such authority from the state is a question. The only way by which we could secure permission to bridge the tracks would be through the legislature.

"But, in any event, a central site could be secured; and with an issue of bonds, the market could be built.

that thus flows away, air blows in toward the equator from each side, producing what are called the trade winds. North of the equator the trade winds are from the northeast, south of it from the southeast (a result of the earth's rotation on its axis) and near the equator the winds conflict, producing a region of calms known as the doldrums. Here the weather is always hot and sultry, the sky generally covered with clouds and the rainfall heavy and frequent. This is the breeding ground of tropical hurricanes or whirling storms which are carried westward by the prevailing winds in those latitudes which are from the east.

WINDS OF THE WORLD.

Returning for a moment to the currents which flow off above the equator toward the poles, under the influence of the earth's rotation, these upper winds acquire a direction from the southwest in the northern hemisphere, and from the northwest in the southern. A portion of the upper air descends again towards the earth at about latitude 30 degrees north and south of the equator, producing belts of calm, dry atmosphere known as the horse latitudes. These belts of high pressure are the limits of the trade winds. In the northern hemisphere the high southwesterly winds soon work their way downward towards the surface of the earth, until the whole temperature zone is involved in the general movement of the air from southwest towards the northeast. The continual equalization of air between the polar and equatorial regions which must exist to prevent a perpetual heaping up of the air near the poles, which we know by observation is not the case, must take place by the repeated descent of masses or whirls of cold air from the polar regions toward the equator, and by similar whirlwinds moving from tropical or temperature regions northward. These whirling masses of air constitute the storms or cyclones and anti-cyclones of temperate latitudes, which are revealed to us by our weather maps, and we have only to study the weather conditions accompanying them and to know their paths of movement in order to make good weather forecasts.

WINTER STORMS.

In the winter of the northern hemisphere the contrasts between the warm equator and the cold of the polar regions, which has now advanced far toward the south, give rise to the most active interchange of whirlwinds or storms between the two regions, and at that season we find the most distinctive types of cyclones and anti-cyclones.

Let me explain at once that the term cyclone means simply an area of low atmospheric pressure, or a "low" on the weather map. Every system of lines on the weather map marked "low" is a cyclone—almost always a perfectly harmless thing, an eddy in the air, associated merely with the ordinary sequence of weather changes from day to day. It will be necessary now to study briefly the weather conditions surrounding the areas of low and high atmospheric pressure or cyclones and anti-cyclones.

A low pressure area or cyclone is simply a large section of the atmosphere in which for some reason the atmospheric pressure has diminished below the normal, that is, where there is a deficiency of air. The air over the surrounding region near the earth's surface tends to flow toward the center of the low, endeavoring to restore the atmospheric equilibrium, but owing to the rotation of the earth on its axis the winds cannot blow straight in toward the center but are obliged to take a spiral course, which gives the whole formation its name "cyclone," or rotation storm. The winds from the east are shifted to southeast, those from the north to northeast, from the west to northwest, and from the south to southwest. When the storm is well developed the centrifugal force of these spiral inblowing winds increases the barometric depression at the center. In the United States southwest, south and southeast winds blow from warmer regions, while the west, northwest and north winds blow from colder regions, and this gives rise to another important characteristic of lows, namely, that the temperature rises and is generally high in the southeast and northeast quadrants and falls and is generally low in the southwest and northwest quardants. Such a disturbance in passing over a place causes then first a rise in temperature, afterwards a rapid fall, the change in temperature within the course of 24 to 48 hours sometimes being as much as 20 or 30 degrees.

ASCENT OF WARM WINDS.

Another important feature of the disturbance of lows is that about the lows results from the gradual ascent of the warm, moisture-laden southerly to easterly winds as they approach the center of the storm. It is an entirely principle somewhat difficult to explain within brief limits of space, that when moist air ascends condensation of vapor into clouds results and ultimately rain. All important rains are caused precisely in that way. Consequently it is found that low areas are also associated with increasing cloudiness and rain, the region of maximum rainfall often lying two or three hundred miles to the east or southeast of the center of the disturbance, but the position of the area of precipitation depends largely upon which direction the wind comes from, and therefore upon the position of the center of the low with reference to the Gulf of Mexico, the Atlantic ocean or the Great Lakes.

The succession of weather phenomena as an area of low pressure or storm passes is now readily understood; it is that with which we are so familiar especially in winter after a few fair days. First thin high clouds appear in the sky; the wind freshens from the southeast or south, the weather becomes decidedly warmer. After a time the clouds thicken, rain begins to fall, the wind may increase somewhat in force, and finally shifts through south and southwest to west or northwest, accompanied by rapidly clearing weather and a decided fall in temperature.

The conditions surrounding an area of high atmospheric pressure or anti-cyclone are quite different. In them the pressure is high, that is there is an excess of air above the normal; the air is slowly descending from higher altitudes, and flows out near the earth's surface away from the center of the low. Here again the earth's rotation prevents the winds from blowing straight outward but gives them a spiral course, this time opposite to the motion of the hands of a watch. As the air is descending the cause mentioned above for the condensation of moisture and formation of clouds does not exist, and consequently the air remains clear and dry. Fair weather is thus associated with the high areas, with cool weather in the east and warmer weather in their west sides.

COLD WAVE CASES.

But in winter these areas of high atmospheric pressure in their endeavor to equalize the masses of air over the hemisphere come from the cold dark Hudson Bay region or Canadian northwest bring with them immense masses of cold air which, running like water, down the slopes of the Rockies, overflows the entire central and eastern portions of the United States, bringing our celebrated "cold waves" the beneficial effects of which upon the character of our people is considered inestimable.

An examination of the daily weather maps for a few days will show that there is a continual succession of high and low pressure areas across the United States, which move in definite paths and with a certain rate of movement. Knowing the direction and rate of movement, as well as the kinds of weather associated with the highs and lows, the forecaster is able to foresee the sequence of weather changes for any selected locality, that is, to forecast the weather.

ETERNAL CALL OF THE WILD

Away up north, in the topmost part of British Columbia and lapping over into southeastern Alaska, lie regions vast, into which the only entrance of the pale faced race has been that of an occasional trapper or runner.

Here live Indian tribes as untouched by civilization as were the natives of the New World before Columbus landed. Of the customs of these tribes we know practically nothing. The territory they inhabit is one of the few remaining spots offering the chance for original exploration.

Speeding toward it as fast as limited trains and palatial steamers will carry, is a woman who has planned an unique summer vacation. She is Miss Mary L. Jobe, professor of history in New York city's normal college. From Prince Rupert, B. C., she expects, with only two Indians as guides, to adventure singly into this strange country, traveling when possible by canoe, otherwise by foot over Indian trails. Her plans call for ten weeks of utter separation from the world as we know it—a separation as complete in respect to all conveniences, to all chances of fellowship with humans of our kind, as if she should be caught up by a miracle and transposed to the planet Mars. She will see only savages who have never viewed a white woman before. She will journey over the trails that have never been plotted. She will visit phases of nature that are known only by analogy. But she goes forward eagerly, joyfully, unafraid.

What a vacation it will be! And what stories she will bring back!

Brushing Fingers with Death

Sheriff Wheeler Mangum

BY WARD S. GREENE.

DAD MANGUM leaned far out of the cab window of the Simon Suggs, his eyes fixed tensely on the track ahead.

It was the same old track over which he had driven that iron horse a hundred times or more, but to the young engineer there was always something sinister about those gleaming rails, so firm and steadfast yet so trustless. Did he fail to abate that ceaseless watchfulness for one instant he knew that some day they would play him false.

The Simon Suggs was gasping and sobbing with every drive of the piston. Nor for nothing was she named after the most eccentric old fellow in the state of Alabama, for Simon Suggs, maime, had just as many whimsies and sudden freaks of character as had Simon Suggs, the crabbed ancient of the cross-roads.

That was why Dad Mangum turned along the gauge and the throttle and never let tap or bolt go unoiled. The Simon Suggs was like an old lady that had to be humored.

Dad Mangum reached up and jerked the siren whistle for the Opelika switch. His eyes were still on the track, his hand yet clinched over the throttle. The train rasped round a curve and the switch leaped into view.

THE CLOSED SWITCH.

The engineer felt himself grow cold. The switch that he had swept through a thousand times, the switch that had always waited for him flung wide, the switch that should have been open, was closed.

There was but one thing to do. Ahead certain accident, perhaps death. Behind him were coaches full of men, women, little children. He was the master of their fate.

As his negro fireman crouched in the bottom of the cab, Dad Mangum jerked the cord for down-breaks, and with the same movement swung into the tender and battered out the coupling pin that held it to the car behind.

The long train of cars came to a grinding stop. The engine and tender lurched forward. The Simon Suggs, like the tricky old lady she was, roared into the new track from the recreant switch, and toppled on her side.

Ten feet back the negro fireman had taken his jump. Dad Mangum's hand was frozen to the throttle until the Simon Suggs turned turtle. He tried to jump, but the mass of iron and steel was on him, pluing him down. He could feel the weight of tons, it seemed as if the world was atop of him and that his ribs would burst. Then, like a miracle, the pressure ceased. The Simon Suggs had stopped falling, and Dad Mangum lay uninjured on the ground. He crawled out.

The trainman's duty was uppermost in his mind. That he had felt the Reaper's breath on his forehead and the icy hands about his throat, he did not think. His care was the Simon Suggs. A crow-bar, a heave and a tug, and the young engineer had righted the old lady. The Simon Suggs was on the track again and Dad Mangum walked into town.

BELATED FEAR.

Four hours later he sat in the front parlor of his boarding house.

"Weren't you afraid, Mr. Mangum," somebody said.

"Why, no," said Dad.

"But if you hadn't fallen exactly as you did that engine would have crushed you like a beetle," they told him.

Dad Mangum's face went white and very quietly he slipped from his chair to the floor in a dead faint. It was many minutes before he was brought to.

Call it reaction or what you will. This man had been well-nigh hurled into eternity, had looked at Death and laughed, not to show a sign of weakening until it was all over many hours later.

Dad Mangum himself explains it by saying that he never realized his danger until that moment.

Of course you know who Dad Mangum is. Some call him Wheeler Mangum, others Mr. Sheriff, but far and wide he is known to many as Dad.

It was forty-two years ago that Dad Mangum and the Simon Suggs jumped the track at Opelika. Then he was an engineer on the old W. of A. Now he is Fulton county's sheriff and can look back at a career that bristles with all sorts of humorous and wild and pathetic experiences.

As a soldier, a fighting Confederate, Dad Mangum first saw death. If you ask him about it he will not tell you.

"That war, those battles, the fighting and the bloodshed, are all over long ago," he will say, "and I don't like to talk about it."

ADVENTURE OF THE RAILS.

But of the railroad days he likes to talk. Possessed of all the lure of adventure that invests war with glamour, the railroad had none of the bitterness that characterized the Great Rebellion. It had death, but not rancor and hate. One faced danger, but with courage and not with venom.

Dad Mangum began railroading in sixty-five, not to step until 1907, when he took up his duties as sheriff. During those long years he was almost constantly in active service, first as a wood passer, as fireman, and later as engineer of some of the most famous old locomotives that ever treked the south.

He says that his adventure with the Simon Suggs was his closest shave; but there was another that was more disastrous. By it he lost three fingers off his right hand.

It happened in Atlanta, at the Whitehall street crossing. Young Mangum's train was coupling up. As he stooped over to slip the pin between two cars the fireman waved to the engineer to back his locomotive. The signal came a moment too soon.

The wheels of the big engine snarled once, cars rumbled and came together with a terrific crash. Between two of them Dad Mangum's right hand was almost mashed to a pulp. Three fingers had to be amputated, and the sheriff says that it was only a wonderful chance that saved him from the amputation of his entire hand.

Yet there are those who know that in that one finger and thumb are centered a tremendous strength, that with them Dad Mangum can do things impossible to many a man whose fingers are sound and whole.

OUTFACING FEAR.

As a railroad man Dad Mangum faced those things which men fear and face while fearing. Never as sheriff, he says, has he had to encounter such danger as hovered round him daily in the cab of his engine. He has had to arrest men, many of them desperate, but never, he says, has a man been so desperate as to make a bloody resistance.

And with it all Dad Mangum has a character as gentle in many ways as a woman's. Why? He says it is a sense of humor.

"I have never been in a position, be it ever so sad or even so terrible, that there wasn't something to laugh at in it," he told his questioner.

"How about the time the Simon Suggs turned over?" he was asked.

Dad Mangum chuckled.

"Well, sir," he replied, "something happened then that was the funniest thing I ever saw."

The blue eyes were gleaming with laughter as he stroked his beard in a reminiscent way.

"Just before the Simon Suggs turned over," he began, "that nigger fireman jumped. And he ran, why, that nigger started runnin' before he hit the ground. Just as I was crawlin' out from under the engine I saw him. He had stopped about twenty feet away and was speaking to a man.

"His eyeballs were rollin' and he was shaking all over. But he stopped that man for about two seconds to ask him for a chew of tobacco. The man handed out a plug, the nigger bit off a piece the size of your hand, shoved the whole plug in his pocket, and lit out again. I haven't seem him since."

NO SUNSTROKES IN THE UNITED STATES

By A. F. Ferguson.

If it were possible for the sun to sue people and newspapers for libel the old orb of day could collect an enormous amount of money in this country every summer.

Why?

Because every time the temperature rises above 90 the newspapers print lists of people who have been killed by the heat. And the fact is that the heat has as little to do with at least 75 per cent of these deaths as you would have to do with the death of a person struck by a street car or a railroad train on which you happened to be riding.

There is such a thing as sunstroke, or thermic fever, as it is called by the medical profession. But it is one of the rarest of troubles. Most of the deaths that are attributed directly to the heat are due to indulgences of appetite—overeating, or overdrinking—eating and drinking things which very likely would have produced a result almost as serious, if not quite as serious, under any conditions.

Take the matter of drinking. Certain things that are supposed to be fine for hot weather drinking actually produce more heat than food. Alcohol is one of the greatest heat producers in the realm of chemistry and even so small a percentage as the 2 per cent contained in pure beer will add to the heat of the body.

It is the same way with many of the things we eat.

That our United States sunstrokes and heat prostrations must be due to heat from within, caused by unwise things we eat and drink, is shown by facts from countries where it really is hot. In parts of the world the daily temperature is seldom under 100 degrees and often rises to 109 for long periods. One would think these were the ideal conditions for sunstroke. As a matter of fact, sunstroke seldom occurs in such climates. On the Panama canal zone there have been but three cases of sunstroke in the eight and one-half years Americans have been living there and have made records.

In the Philippine islands there has never been a case of sunstroke so far as the Spanish and Filipino physicians can discover. There have been none since the Americans came.

In one part of India, where men work with a temperature in the shade of 110 degrees, the condition of the white workmen who were observed not only did not show deterioration, but actually showed improvement. In this particular instance the men worked right out in the sunlight all day. These men consumed an average of three gallons of water per day and their condition was so good throughout the very hot weather, which lasts something like two and a half or three months, that when they would touch the thermometer with their hands the mercury would fall from the registered mark of the outside air to the mark of normal body heat. But, these men knew that they were in a hot climate and they did not put into their stomachs things that made great heat within their bodies.

Now, what does all this prove?

Doesn't it go to show that the sun is not a wicked murderer? Doesn't it rather show that improper feeding and improper drinking is the cause—pie, fats, beer, whisky and a host of other heating things.

You naturally ask, what should you eat and drink?

It would be impossible for me to tell you that, except in the most general terms. You can't go far wrong if you bathe in tepid water often enough, if you drink enough cool water—not cold, ice water—if you cut down on your meat and grain food and stick more to vegetables and salads. The medical man who knows your eliminating system can tell you what to do. I can only tell you to sweat and keep sweating. It'll not only make you cool, but it will do your interior department a whole lot of good.

Don't bother about the sun. It's not the temperature of the outside air that you want to worry about. It's the temperature of your own body. And the sun, actually, has precious little to do with that.

EVER try eating ice cream cones and kicking your heels in the air, and just forgetting whether the weather's hot or not and only remembering that you're barefooted and happy? The question of temperature is one you never consider then. Worry passes you by, weather doesn't matter the least bit, and you get to be a true philosopher who doesn't recognize the existence of trouble, and who knows that the world is just a place of sunshine, ice cream cones and bare feet.

There is another philosopher just below that sage group of three. His name is Goldberg. Ever hear it before? If you wish to get rid of your worries and can't try the bare-foot and the ice cream cone way, he's always waiting on the last page of The Journal to offer you the solace of wit. Just now, the cartoonist who has made you laugh time and again, is picturing the absurdities that he saw upon his European tour. The art of Goldberg has become distinct among the cartoonists. No one else sees things from his view point, no one else expresses them in his rollicking way. He's the guy who put "Merry" in America.

GLIMPSE THROUGH THE CAMERA'S LENS

THE group of army officers were hosts of Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, who recently paid a visit to Fort McPherson for the purpose of making an inspection. Mr. Garrison is wearing a black bow tie and glasses and stands at the left just below the last of the flight of steps upon which the officers of the Seventeenth regiment are grouped. The question of whether Fort McPherson will be expanded into a brigade post naturally came up for discussion at the time of Secretary Garrison's visit. But he had nothing to say upon this point. Yet, every indication is that Fort McPherson will become a brigade post.

This doggie you see at the bottom of the page is an original character. He doesn't like to drink from basins. He says it isn't healthful. Germs and all that sort of thing, you know. So, he always drinks from a hydrant.

CARL THOMPSON, who helped Georgia to many a diamond victory, is repeating in professional baseball the success that he had in his college days. Out of the last five games that he has pitched for Atlanta, Carl has won four victories. And two of these games were four-hit affairs. He showed the speed and the curves that go to make a winning pitcher, and above all he won. Games that add to a team's percentage are after all the real test of a pitcher; and four games won out of five pitched is a successful response to the most acid of tests. When Carl Thompson was at Georgia he once pitched a no-hit game against a hard-hitting team from Georgia Tech, and he did other feats sufficiently notable to attract the attention of the New York Americans. They asked for Carl's services; but, in order that he might gain experience, farmed him to Birmingham. Later he came to Atlanta, and here has had a record of four games won out of five pitched.

MIKE AND IKE—THEY LOOK ALIKE.—

BY R. L. GOLDBERG

MIKE AND IKE HAVE SOME VERY DEFINITE OPINIONS ABOUT THE TURKEY TROT. THEY BELIEVE THAT NO CAFE SHOULD ALLOW IT'S PATRONS TO TURKEY-TROT MORE THAN 24 HOURS A DAY. THEY ALSO CONTEND THAT ANY YOUNG LADY UNDER THE AGE OF TWO SHOULD BE BARRED FROM DANCING THE TASMANIAN TWIST IN A PUBLIC CAFE. LASTLY, MIKE AND IKE THINK THAT A COURSE IN TURKEY-TROTTING SHOULD BE GIVEN IN ALL OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

1. IKE, I'VE ONLY GOT THIRTY CENTS BUT MY BRAINS WILL ARRANGE MATTERS SO WE BOTH EAT — ALL A MAN CAN EAT FOR 30¢

2. WHEN I COME OUT YOU WALK IN AND SAY TO THE WAITRESS, "DEARIE, WAS I AWAY TOO LONG."

3. I CAN TELL BY THE COLOR OF YOUR EYES THAT WE'RE GOING TO BE GOOD FRIENDS - I WANT A VERY PLAIN MEAL - GIVE ME FIVE OR SIX STEAKS — MY FELLER IN THE OLD COUNTRY HAD A BEARD LIKE YOURS

4. EXCUSE ME A MINUTE, TILLIE - I'M GOING OUT TO GIVE A FEW THOUSAND DOLLARS TO A POOR FRIEND OF MINE — IS YOUR REAL NAME CARNEGIE?

5. I'LL MEET YOU LATER, MIKE, AND WE'LL TAKE IN A SHOW TONIGHT — I'VE EATEN ENOUGH TO LAST ME TILL CHRISTMAS — ALL AM CAN 30¢

6. DEARIE, WAS I AWAY TOO LONG? — IT SEEMED LIKE AGES, MISTER ROCKEFELLER

7. WHEN I GET HOME TONIGHT, I'LL TELL MY SECRETARY TO MAIL YOU AN AUTOMOBILE AND A PIANO AND — YES YES

8. I THINK HE FAINTED FROM OVER EATING - I FOUND HIM ON THE SIDEWALK

9. IKE, I WONDER IF THE ELECTRIC CHAIR IS COMFORTABLE TO SIT IN — SAY, MIKE DO THEY GIVE YOU NAPKINS WHEN THEY SERVE YOUR MEALS IN A CELL?
